Syria, Israel Claim Victory In Sea Of Galilee Air Fight

MILITARY AID

New Arms Treaty Strengthens U.S. Links With Bonn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agreements tightening military links between the United States and West Germany — on strategy, weapons and productions — were signed Saturday by the two nations' defense chiefs.

American Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and German Defense Minister Kaiuwe von Hassel initialed four documents which wrapped up the results of the meetings of the two men and their staffs.

A communique said these meetings "reflected the close and continuing German-American military relationshp."

FRENCH INFLUENCE

Beyond the general phrasing of the communique, there obviously was the fact that the intransigence of French President Charles de Gaulle and his insistence on an independent nuclear power stature for France had influence in the new and stronger bonds between Germany and the United States.

American officials obviously view de Gaulle's plan for an independent nuclear force, outside of NATO, as an incredible objective.

They have sought to show that there is no division on strategy between the United States and the European members of NATO and if division exists it is between France and the other 14 alliance nations.

The communique issued at the conclusion of the sessions Saturday included these points:

— The multilateral force (MLF) — The U.S. and German defense establishments should be prepared to start implementing the program for a multi-nation force which would include missile-armed surface ships "as soon as possible" after international political decisions are reached.

The communique made no prediction on when such a decision is expected.

— Special attention was given to the "forward strategy" for defenses against a Communist attack on NATO members and the "closest agreement was reached of any recent discussions by the ministers concerning the views related to NATO forward defense."

— The U.S. has agreed to build, in private American shipyards, three guided-missile destroyers for the German Navy. The first of the ships should be ready for delivery in 1969.

ROBERT W. MOBLEY

Young Area Ex-GI Found Shot Fatally

A young Columbia man, recently discharged from the Army, was found fatally shot on a New Orleans street early Saturday.

Investigators believe Robert Wayne Mobley, 19, of Route 2, Box 48, Columbia, was fatally wounded elsewhere and his body dumped from an auto about 6 a.m. on the street about a mile south of an amusement park on the Pontchartrain lakeshore.

Motorists found him shot through the chest and still alive, but he died a few minutes later without being able to say what happened to him.

Members of the family at Columbia said he called his mother, Mrs. Esther Mobley, from New Orleans about 1 a.m. Saturday and told her he would take a bus home to Columbia.

Leo Ford, the victim's uncle, said the family did not know Mobley was in the United States until his call Saturday. He had been stationed at Camp Dachau in Germany as a private in the Army.

Ford said the youth was "just an ordinary boy. He was a good mixer, got along well with his crowd."

He served 30 months in the Army after attending school at Columbia.

A spokesman for the Riser Funeral Home at Columbia said that the firm had been called upon to transport the body from New Orleans to Columbia. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

In addition to his mother, survivors include a sister and three brothers. His father is deceased.

American Fires At Soviet Car Along Border

HEIDELBERG, Germany (AP) — An American soldier fired a shot at a Soviet army sedan to halt its approach on a side road into a restricted U.S. military area near Nuernberg in West Germany last Wednesday, the U.S. Army reported Saturday. A Soviet colonel and his enlisted driver were detained seven hours.

The U.S. Army's European Headquarters here said the car belonged to the Soviet military liaison mission attached to U.S. headquarters here.

U.S. officials protested to Soviet authorities Thursday but no soviet response was reported.

A U.S. spokesman said the Soviet sedan entered the restricted area despite signs in English, Russian and German warning against trespassing. The American sentry shouted orders for the car to halt when it approached his post. The car kept on going.

The Army announcement said that the U.S. guard then fired a warning shot into the air and the Soviet vehicle "attempted to leave the scene."

The guard then fired at the car's left rear tire and the vehicle stopped.

The statement did not say whether the bullet scored a hit.

The United States has a similar military liaison mission in Communist East Germany. U.S. military mission cars there often are checked by East German police.

At the Nuernberg restricted area, there is a warning sign posted nearly a mile down the side road from the installation. Another sign is 200 yards from the post, the Army said.

Heavy Snows Block Travel In Wyoming

Blizzard Sweeps Mountain Region But Fields Suffer

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A major snowstorm piled up huge drifts in sections of Wyoming and Colorado Saturday, but in many areas the long-parched earth received no moisture.

Travel was hazardous as heavy snow and poor visibility forced the closing of U.S. 14 over the Big Horn Mountains between Sheridan and Greybull, Wyo.

FOOT OF SNOW

More than a foot of snow fell at Burgess Junction, Wyo., and a ground blizzard kept snow plows from opening the highway.

At Sheridan, in northern Wyoming, the snow was more than 9 inches in depth and was drifting in 30 mile-an-hour winds. The snow piled up to more than a foot in the high mountains.

At Sheridan, in northern Wyoming, the snow was more than 9 inches in depth and was drifting in 30 mile-an-hour winds. The snow piled up to more than a foot in the high mountains.

The storm also dipped into northwestern Colorado. The critically-needed precipitation failed to reach the parched wheat fields of southeastern Colorado.

Severe cold weather followed the heels of the storm.

A record low of 15 degrees below zero for this early date was set at Ely, Nev.

Travelers in the West and Southwest are warned of hazardous road conditions as wind gusts whipped the blowing snow in falling temperatures. The Weather Bureau described the storm as the coldest of the season.

TEA AND GRITS?

British Restaurant Adds Dixie Flavor

LONDON (AP) — One of Britain's oldest restaurants announced Saturday, with some misgivings, that it is now prepared to put the South in your mouth.

In a blatant bid for tourist trade originating below America's Mason-Dixon Line, Stone's Chop House plans after considerable soul-searching, to serve grits.

Stone's lifted the veil on this adventurous culinary departure in a somewhat gingerly worded press statement which remarked: "Grits has — or have — always been the subject of great controversy. First, are they plural or is it singular?"

For the benefits of Britons who haven't cottoned to grits, Stone's defined them, or it, as "a white corn meal, ground to about the consistency of coffee, and very much like the African mealy-mealy."

The statement went on to say that it, or they, "are boiled in salted water and served as a mushy porridge in the morning, or as an adjunct to fried eggs, or as a vegetable, or with raisins in a pudding."

"They are eaten hot, cold, lukewarm or raw. They also are used as a fattener for the finest of hogs destined for the famous Virginia hams."

The decision to serve grits comes as a belated apology for the War of 1812 — the date of Stone's founding — in which the British burned the White House in Washington.

Stone's said that when advised of the decision its grand chef, Joseph Porta, holder of the Grand Cross Culinaire, shrugged a French shrug and said:

"Eh bein! Mais pourquoi?" which means, "Okay, but what excuse is there?"

Porta then sampled a test batch of the glutinous mixture.

Asked for comment, he shuddered and muttered: "Pas de remarques," which translates to "I got strictly nothing to say."

Secretaries Discuss Bills With Johnson

Announce Plans To Push Benefits For Young, Aged

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson and two Cabinet members talked Saturday of getting health care and bigger Social Security checks for the elderly and launching "Operation Birthright" for the young.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz pictured the next 60 days of financial and legislative planning by the administration as providing "an extraordinary opportunity for really a magnificent breakthrough."

KEEP DOORS OPEN

He described Operation Birthright as an effort to keep college doors from slamming in the faces of half a million of the 3.5 million boys and girls who will reach 18 in 1965. Details still are vague.

The labor secretary said "No, sir, I do not" when asked if he expects a rail strike.

Secretary of Welfare Anthony J. Celebrezze predicted passage of some sort of hospital insurance program for the elderly patterned after the administration bill to tie it into Social Security system.

Celebrezze also predicted the administration will seek something in the nature of a flat $7 monthly increase in Social Security benefits approved by the Senate this year, as part of a one-package bill including health care.

Wirtz and Celebrezze met with the President at his ranch Friday and Saturday and then with reporters this afternoon at a press center in Austin, 65 miles to the east.

The President put in a morning of work at the LBJ Ranch, broken with a stroll along the Pedernales River.

In midafternoon he motored to what is called the Scharnhorst section of his ranchlands about 14 miles to the northeast to look at white-tailed deer on this first day of the hunting season. But he wasn't hunting at that point and the season lasts until Dec. 31.

Today he goes back to Washington and a series of conferences during the week on reports from task forces he named to come up with ideas for bettering the lot of Americans.

Both his Cabinet visitors came from the ranch with word that Johnson once again is bearing down heavily on economy in the new budgets for their departments.

Celebrezze said he expects his budget to go up from about $7.1 billion this year to $7.9 billion next year because of 22 items of legislation passed in the latest Congress.

Cong Desert Jungle; Grab Flood Relief

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The Communist Viet Cong has turned from guerrilla war in the jungles to attacks on convoys and helicopter airlifts to seize relief supplies for 700,000 flood victims along Viet Nam's central coast, U.S. aid officials reported Saturday.

With the death toll in five provinces mounting to an estimated 7,000, the Viet Cong are reported hoping to seize the goods apparently for their own use, or to turn over to the flood victims for propaganda purposes.

A U.S. military advisers' compound at Quang Ngai city was attacked by Red guerrillas in search of food and ammunition Friday. No American casualties were reported in the automatic weapon and grenade attack.

Rampaging floods may have destroyed the rice crop in the central coastal region and one U.S. official said about 70,000 tons of rice would be needed until the next crop comes in.

One problem for the mercy missions is that the Communists control many of the areas awash by floods. But a U.S. officials said:

"Our intention is to see that rice and other relief does not feed the Viet Cong."

There was a report that the Viet Cong had ordered Vietnamese in the Communist-controlled areas to tear up their identity cards.

U.S. and South Vietnamese officials reported many refugees flowing in to rescue centers did not have identity cards to prove their loyalty to the government.

Some Americans expressed doubt that supplies could be kept from the Viet Cong and its followers.

Rail Striking Ends In Italy

ROME (AP) — A crippling on-off railroad strike ended Saturday night after a week of chaos on Italy's state-owned rail system.

The Communist-led rail union ended its harassing tactics with a final 90-minute walkout. Non-Communist unions refused to join the strike, which cost the Italian economy an estimated $56 million.

By stop-start strategy of three 90-minute walkouts daily, the strikers effectively throttled rail service, angering passengers and piling up mountains of freight.

44 INJURED

Fire Wipes Out Christmas Toys

CHICAGO (AP) — Forty-four firemen were injured and an estimated million dollars worth of Christmas toys and goods devoured by flames Friday night and Saturday in a fire which raged out of control for 17 hours through a mammoth warehouse.

Most of the city's firemen and equipment were called out to battle the fire, which was declared struck out at 9:45 a.m.

Moments later, extra alarms were sounded for two other blazes at an empty warehouse and a railroad loading dock and the weary firemen were again called into action.

ARSON SQUAD

By noon Saturday, a fire department official said all three fires were under control and arson squads were on the scenes.

The latest outbreaks brought to five the number of major fires that have broken out on the South Side in November. The city has been plagued by a severe drought and less than one-half inch of rain has fallen in the past 45 days.

Fire officials originally estimated the damage to the long-burning warehouse at $2.5 million, but later revised the estimate to $1 million.

But Louis Goldblatt, president of Goldblatt Brothers department stores, which owned the warehouse, said the inventory stored there amounted to well over $2.5 million.

The fire began in the 350 by 600 foot basement of the warehouse and, aided by an early morning gas line explosion, eventually destroyed much of the structure.

15 FATALITIES THIS YEAR

Highway 80 Stretch Area's Most Deadly

By ROBERT SIMONTON
World Staff Writer

Fifteen persons have already lost their lives this year on the most deadly stretch of highway in northeast Louisiana.

The 40 - mile stretch is on U. S. Highway 80 East between Monroe and Delhi.

Most accidents in the Troop F District of the State Police, which has jurisdiction over 12 parishes, occur along this portion of highway, according to Capt. M. E. Kidd, troop commander.

To date, a total of 23 fatalities on 80 East from Monroe to the Mississippi River Bridge at Vicksburg have been reported.

An accident spot map at the Troop F headquarters at Selman Field tells the grim story. Black pins, denoting accidents where fatalities occur, dot the length of highway running to Delhi. Many red and yellow pins, representing accidents where injuries are received, are also clustered along this road.

The recent overlay resurfacing repairs to this part of 80 East have helped cut down on the number of accidents, according to Kidd, but it still remains a "killer highway."

In fact, more accidents are reported in Richland Parish than Ouachita, even though the population is smaller, because of this bad stretch. Richland also matches Ouachita in fatalities — both have 14 so far this year.

Capt. Kidd said the speed limit along the dangerous stretch between Monroe and Delhi is 60, but this is often too fast for prevailing conditions — amount of traffic, time of day, weather limitations.

The area's latest fatality occurred on this very stretch — a 10 - year - old child died last Tuesday as a result of injuries received in a multi-car collision about six miles east of the city on Highway 80.

Both Accuse Other Party For Outburst

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) —Syrian and Israeli jets battled Saturday north of the Sea of Galilee, a day after the heaviest border fighting between the two enemies in years. Each side accused the other of provoking the air clash, and each claimed victory.

A Syrian communique said Israeli planes flew across the border, "our air force intercepted the Israeli planes" and in a series of air battles an Israeli jet "was seen exploding in midair after receiving a direct hit. All our planes returned safely to bases."

DENIES LOSS

In Tel Aviv, a military spokesman denied any Israeli plane was lost, said four Syrian Soviet-made MIG21s penetrated into Israel's air space, were driven off and one of them was hit.

The spokesman said the hit on the Syrian plane was clearly observed by the pilot who had engaged it but that it was not seen to crash. Reliable sources in Damascus said the battle was between the four MIGs and four Israeli French-made Mirage jets.

The air battle occurred in the area where Israeli and Syrian ground forces fought for an hour and 40 minutes Friday with tanks and artillery. This battle ended when unopposed Israeli planes crossed the frontier and pounded Syrian batteries with napalm and gunfire.

Even before Saturday's air clash, Syria moved to seek a U.N. Security Council meeting on the Friday fighting, and had broadcast this warning to Israel: "The Syrian army is poised to teach Israel severe lessons and will not stop any more at the limit of repelling aggression."

The ground fighting left seven Syrians dead and 26 wounded. Israel reported it had lost three killed and nine wounded.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Syria's U.N. delegate, Dr. Rafik Asha, had been instructed to explore prospects of calling a Security Council meeting to take up this serious Israeli aggression in which the air force was used."

The foreign minister, Dr. Hassan Mreweid, also summoned the ambassadors of the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France and explained to them the "graveness of the latest Israeli aggression."

The spokesman said Mreweld also called the ambassadors of all Arab countries in Damascus and briefed them on the border situation. All the ambassadors pledged their countries would back Syria against any fresh Israeli attack and would consider such an attack as directed against their countries.

It was not clear whether the ambassadors' pledges were made before or after news of the air battle became known.

In Israel, Prime Minister Levi Eshkol, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Izhak Rabin and the northern area commander, Col. David Dado, toured the Dan and Shear Yishuv region of Upper Galilee where the ground fighting took place.

Speaker Doubtful Of Cent Tax Hike

BATON ROUGE (AP)—House Speaker Vail Delony, glancing ahead at the special session opening Monday, said the only chance for legislators who favor a one-cent sales tax raise for teachers is to seek action first.

Hundreds of teachers, unhappy over prospects of receiving only half the pay boost they demand, are planning to swarm into the state capitol the day the legislature arrives.

Gov. John McKeithen, whose wife, mother and father were all teachers, promised an administration program to raise $24 million for half the pay increase.

His complete revenue package would produce about $28.8 million in all, with some of it for a state employes pay raise. McKeithen also wants $35 million in bonds for college and institution improvements.

His broadening the sales tax base, rather than actual tax raises, is all the state can afford now, the governor said. But he left the door ajar for legislators who might want to propose a sales tax raise. The vague wording of his call for the session made sure of that.

McKeithen got by in his first legislature last summer with hardly a wrinkle in his impeccable attire, after postponing a teacher raise then. This time, his prestige is at stake as the state's leader.

Still trying to woo new industry to enliven the state's economy, McKeithen hopes to avoid a general tax raise — which a full financing of teacher pay raise would require.

The governor seeks the path of least opposition in raising revenues, for he promised industry a stable political climate.

Speaker Delony, an administration leader, said Saturday "a good many legislators I've walked to are leaning toward the governor's program because it's sensible.

"He's attempting to raise state revenues for the teachers and at the same time make it as palatable and painless as possible for the taxpayers," the veteran House member said.

Some legislators, such as Rep. Gordon Causey, young Tangipahoa Parish firebrand for the teachers, plan to sponsor a one-cent hike in the state's two-cent sales levy in order to guarantee teachers a full pay increase and solve other fiscal ills. This could reap $60 million or more a year.

The governor's program for a halfway teacher pay increase also would provide for raises for other school workers and school bus drivers. They are included in every pay raise legislation for the teachers.

Favoring the one-cent hike himself, Speaker Delony said he honestly believes it would have a rough time, although "it would have a better chance in the House than in the Senate."

Sen. Jamar Adcock, Monroe, a McKeithen Senate leader, said earlier such a proposal couldn't pull together the required two-third majority vote, especially in the Senate.

Another McKeithen leader in the Senate, Sen. Garland Bonin, Lafayette, said he would oppose a one-cent raise.

The governor several times has humorously suggested anyone sees a great majority of the House and Senate members rushing in to pass a sales tax raise.

However, to questions in a news conference McKeithen said he would be inclined to sign such a raise, if the legislature adopts it. But McKeithen said he doubted that would happen.

Speaker Delony said in his view, the only chance for the one-cent move is for sponsors to act first, reaching for a fast House vote—if the bill ever is introduced.

The one-center could generate legislative power, Delony said, because its adoption would mean local level."

McKeithen's program calls for just that, legislative authorization for school boards and parish police juries to raise local revenues to help ease some of the educational burden. This long has been a recommendation of some legislators and such groups as the Public Affairs Research Council.

Yule Lighting Festival Slated

By MRS. ERLE READ
Correspondent

TALLULAH — Preparations are underway for the Christmas Lighting festival to be held here Dec. 5. The celebration is unique in that the bayou is chosen as the theme.

Tallulah, traversed by the winding, picturesque stream, which has become a tourist attraction, was featured last year and will be enlarged and more extensive this season.

The project, begun by the three garden clubs of the community in cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce and Louisiana Power and Light Company, has been developed into a community undertaking, financed by the Christmas in July dinner at the Country Club sponsored by the garden clubs and by donations by business concerns and individuals.

Bridges spanning the bayou will be draped with garlands of colored lights. A number of tall poles will be erected in the center of the stream and these will be converted into giant Christmas trees with myriad billiant lights, which, when illuminated and reflected in the water will create a magnificent spectacle of beauty.

The celebration will begin with a parade at 4 p.m., led by Miss Merry Christmas, followed by a concert on the Court House lawn. Bands from Newellton, Lake Providence, Delhi and Tallulah will participate.

At 5 p.m. Mayor W. P. Sevier will press the switch illuminating the bridges and the bayou Christmas trees. A program of Christmas carols by a choral goup will be rendered on the bank by the Johnson Street bridge and the festival will be concluded with a spectacular display of fireworks.

CHOU GOES HOME

Russians Still Plan Worldwide Meeting

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leaders are going ahead with plans for a world Communist meeting that Red China has denounced, the official news agency Tass said Saturday.

The statement came less than 24 hours after Premier Chou En-lai of Red China ended secret talks here and returned to Peking.

It was seen as another sign that Chou's talks with Leonid I. Brezhnev, new first secretary of the Soviet Communist party, had made no substantial progress in settling Soviet-Chinese differences.

A communique on the talks said only that they were held in a "frank, comradely atmosphere." A Communist official said that frank and comradely is the normal way of describing talks that end in disagreement.

He said he had no inside information. But he added that if there had been agreement, the talks would probably have been described by the communique in different terms.

The month-long truce in the war of words between Moscow and Peking also ended.

The journal "Problems of Peace and Communism" appeared brimfull of articles seething with Chinese criticism. It also carried an article by John D. Bernal, president of the World Peace Council, denouncing China's recent nuclear test.

The decision to go ahead with preparations for the world Communist meeting was disclosed by Tass in a report on talks between Victorio Codovilla, chairman of the Argentine Communist party, and Soviet party secretaries Mikhail Suslov and Boris Ponomarev.

Both aides, Tass said, agreed to "continue the work of preparing a new conference of all Communist and workers parties." No date was mentioned.

The meeting was believed to have been a key topic in the secret talks between Chou, Brezhnev and other Soviet leaders.

Communist sources said there was discussion of postponing or canceling the session scheduled for Dec. 15 to prepare for the world meeting next year. The Chinese were understood to be pressing for more bilateral talks first.

Five Area Bands Win Superiors At Local Meet

About 2,000 persons were on hand Saturday afternoon for the Louisiana Music Educators Association District I Marching Festival held at Ouachita Parish High School's football stadium.

Delhi, Rayville, Jonesboro-Hodge, Ruston, and the host school walked off with superior ratings in both marching and inspection competition in Class C, B, A, AA, and AAA, respectively, and Jack White, OPHS band director said this was the first time in his school's history they won a superior rating in marching at a festival of this type.

In all, eleven bands competed in the two categories. Other schools and their ratings were as follows: Class B, Farmerville, excellent in inspection, very good in marching; LaSalle of Olla, superior in inspection, and very good in marching, Lake Providence, superior in inspection and excellent in marching; Oak Grove, superior in inspection and excellent in marching; Class A, Winnsboro and Caldwell Parish, both superior in inspection and excellent in marching.

Judges in the marching category were Blanton McDonald, Mt. Pleasant, Tex., Jack England, Longview, Tex., and Marvin Lawson, Arkadelphia, Ark. Bob Casey of Crossett, Ark., judged inspection competition.

IRREGULARITIES

Education Board Revokes Contracts On Buildings At Northwestern State

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Louisiana Board of Education revoked Saturday the architectural contracts on two buildings at Northwestern State College, Natchitoches.

The board acted on recommendation of a special subcommittee which investigated claims of irregularities in bidding on a new student union building at the school.

Contracts held by J. B. Shipp and Associates of Lake Charles and Joseph Schiere of Shreveport for architectural work on the student union building, and by Shipp on a new cafeteria at the school, were canceled, and the board voted to select new architects.

These actions are subject to approval of the attorney general.

The board also voted to turn over to the attorney general transcripts of recordings of hearings held here Oct. 13-14 "for whatever action he deems advisable."

Under a court order, the board was restrained from loss or destruction of these records.

In other action, the board met two hours behind closed doors with an accreditation official and received recommendations on how to deal with claims that state interference into the internal financial affairs of state colleges endanger their accreditation. A committee to be headed by W. E. Whetstone, Monroe, was named to seek talks with state and legislative fiscal authorities in efforts to work out problems involved.

Whetstone, who was named a day earlier to take over as president of the education Board next year, also headed the subcommittee which looked into bidding on the Northwestern State College project.

The board also named a new committee to study ways to strengthen building regulations of the education board.

In recommending the committee, Whetstone's subcommittee said, "the special committee feels that it is imperative that the board exercise more rigid control over its building programs."

State Sen. Jackson B. Davis, Shreveport, who said he was acting as a taxpayer, brought up at the last meeting of the board claims that there were irregularities in handling of bids on the Northwestern project.

It was Davis also who won a district court's temporary restraining order Friday to prevent loss or destruction of records in the subcommittee probe.

Davis seeks in a suit to make public the probe records.

But Whetstone's subcommittee said it met in executive session, and "this is customary in all matters involving the professional reputations of individuals.

"The discussion and remarks made in the closed hearing," the committee reported, "were for the benefit of the committee and according to past rulings of the attorney general are not public records."

Whetstone said, "I am today submitting to the State Board of Education the report and recommendations of the investigating committee."

The restraint issued by Dist. Judge Fred Blanche was against the board, Education Supt. William J. Dodd and Atty. Gen. Jack Gremillion.

Judge Blanche set a hearing for Nov. 23 on Davis' request for a preliminary injunction.

A preliminary report of the subcommittee said testimony "indicated that plans and specifications were sketchy and poorly prepared, making interpretation by the bidders difficult. Furthermore, major changes were made without the proper approval."

Whetstone had said earlier his group received some information about campaign contributions to public officials, but "there was nothing about any wrongdoing."

The board met behind closed doors with Dr. Gordon W. Sweet, of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Sweet is executive secretary of the commission on colleges and universities for the association.

Afterward, Sweet and education board members emphasized that he appeared on a consultation basis and there was no immediate question of accreditation loss.

Sweet declined to say whether anything was found that would endanger accreditation of Louisiana colleges.

Such a statement, he said, would be premature and also there were others in the association who took part in decisions on accreditation.

President Boyd Woodard of the education board has said fiscal policies exercised by the Legislative Budget Committee and the State Division of Administration violate a rule of the association which accredits schools and colleges in the South.

He cited rule 7 of the association's standards for colleges, concerning "the relation of an institution to external budgetary control."

The rule said, "no educational institution is properly administered nor can it conduct a sound educational program when any agency or officer other than the controlling board, the president and business officer exercises financial control.

"Once funds have been appropriated for the operation of an institution, budget making and control of expenditure should be entirely within the institution under the jurisdiction of the governing board.

"If a state budget officer or state comptroller or any other financial officer or body outside the institution exercise control over the expenditures of the institution, to that same degree such outside officers exercise control over the educational function. Such practices are a clear violation of the principles stated in these standards."

Woodard said a special committee headed by Whetstone was set up to seek talks with the Legislative Budget Committee and fiscal officers.

Others on the committee are Woodard, incoming vice president Enoch Nix, Bossier City, members J. Marshall Brown, New Orleans, and Joe Davies, Arabi, Education Supt. Dodd and Finance Officer Byron Benton, and Dr. V. F. Galliano, Nicholls State College, who is president of the College Presidents' Council, and Maurice Charitat, Nicholls business manager.

The presidents of the state colleges also met with the board and Sweet.

Brown, a close associate of Gov. John McKeithen, said Dr. Sweet made some recommendations to the board on how to deal with the situation.

Brown said he suggested the meetings with the Legislative Budget Committee and Mrs. Mary Evelyn Parker, state commissioner of administration to "see if we can work this thing out."

Woodard mentioned that one of the concerns of the board was that the colleges could not go ahead and hire staffs each fall because of controls exercised over finances by the budget committee and division of administration.

There is an ultimate danger, Woodard said, of outside interference in college internal policies.

"Ultimately," he said, "if there are external controls over budgets, I can see no way that it will not affect accreditation—if there are any teeth in the association's rules."

SKUNK HIDES OUT

MONROW, Wis. (UPI)—Officials hope to clear the air at the Iliff School before children returned to school Monday.

But so far they have had no luck with a stubborn skunk that has refused to budge from underneath the school building.

One school official promised to keep an all-night vigil through the weekend, if necessary, to rout the animal.

Common Market Debate Appears Nearer Success

BRUSSELS (AP) — An agreement appeared close in the European Common Market early today on meeting the late President Kennedy's challenge for a worldwide attack on barriers to trade.

As midnight passed, ministers and delegates were still arguing, but spokesmen said a final deal was in the making on just what tariffs the six members were ready to have cut in two, as the late President urged, and which ones must remain as they are.

The French, who had been standing firmest for a long list of exceptions to the tariff cut, were reported making concessions on machinery — the major item in the dispute.

France and West Germany were the chief antagonists.

The Kennedy round of talks among the world's leading traders on cutting tariffs opens Monday in Geneva. Yet to be settled is a list of Common Market products to be exempt from tariff cuts.

The battle was joined on the main feature of the late President John F. Kennedy's plan — to take the customs duties that hold back trade among the world's nations and slice as many as possible in half.

For example, if the Kennedy round of tariff talks succeed, a small German car that costs $1,500 would have to pay only $48.75 duty when it lands in New York instead of the present $97.50.

An American car worth $3,000 would have to pay $330 duty in Hamburg instead of something like $660 today.

The fight within the Common Market was over a joint list of exceptions, due to be deposited in Geneva on Monday along with similar lists from other big trading countries.

Cuban Warns Of Worse Crisis Over Planes

HAVANA (AP) — A Cuban government official, speaking privately, said Saturday the Western world is not placing enough importance on Prime Minister Fidel Castro's threat to order U.S. reconnaissance planes shot down unless peaceful means are achieved to halt their flights over Cuba.

The Western press and Western opinion, the official added, "do not realize that American-Cuban relations are headed for a crisis worse even than October 1962." This is a reference to the U.S.-Cuban confrontation over Soviet missiles on Cuban soil.

Castro said in an interview with a correspondent of the New York Times a week ago that Cuban forces now control Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles and that he would order them used if all legal means are unsuccessful in getting the United States to call off U2 reconnaissance flights over Cuba.

The flights were ordered during the 1962 crisis to check on Soviet missile installations, and have continued since.

Such legal means would be through the United Nations or negotiations outside the United Nations, the Cuban official said.

Last Monday, U.S. officials in Washington said Castro's regime has the antiaircraft missiles but is restrained by the Soviet Union from using them.

Some Western diplomats have expressed concern about Castro's warning.

Brush and Palette

The collectors showing opening to the public today at the Masur Museum of Art, is an eloquent reminder that man does not live by science alone. The profoundest things of life are not to be formally learned or formally taught. They must be experienced. And so it is with a great painting, a great drawing, a great piece of sculpture. It is to be experienced — and life will never be quite the same again. The contributors to "Monroe Collects" with perhaps one prized painting to show and the owners exhibiting only a portion of their collections, have strived to make this experience an everyday occurrence, according to their circumstances and individual interpretations of those things that give life its richness, and its point, its depth and its meaning.

Exhibited by residents of northeast Louisiana, the showing "Monroe Collects" consists of representative works from the whole spectrum of the arts affording the viewer the opportunity to be exposed to a variety of visual experience.

The history and eventual acquisition of some of the creations is often as compelling as the work itself. This column hopes in the coming weeks to briefly share with our readers as many of these experiences as possible.

Among the fifty works on view, will be the first public exhibition of Titian's "Jael and Sisera" based on the macabre Bible story from Judges 4:21. Titian ranks among the foremost of the old masters and his paintings are prized possessions of the Louvre, the Uffizi Palace, the Villa Borghese, the National Gallery of London, the Pitti Palace, the Dresden Gallery, and many more. Proudly exhibiting this internationally famous painting are the owners, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Whittelsey.

Mosaics will be shown by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Biedenharn Jr. and Mrs. Larry Fox. Mr. and Mrs. John (Mac) Ward will show among other works a Jourdan acquired from the Museum Carnivalet in Paris and a watercolor dated 1875 that boasts a very interesting history. Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Lawrence will display paintings of European and American artists from their collection. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rubin Jr. will show a work of French artist R— Gieger—R. of late 1800 vintage.

No private collection exhibit in our area could be complete without representation of the work of John James Audubon who was a frequent visitor in Monroe, the work displayed courtesy the Robert Laytons. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Evans will exhibit from their vast collection of fine paintings, as will Mr. and Mr. Jack Masur. There will be approximately twenty - nine collectors showing original works of artistic merit.

The Masur Museum of Art located at 1400 South Grand, will be open daily except Mondays, between the hours of 2 and 5 p.m.

ART NEWS HERE AND THERE

HERE. Curators of the museum, Dottie McKinley, Mary Anita Lennon, Bess James, Chiquita Squires and Ed Shutz have spent many hours this week preparing an additional gallery at the museum for the present exhibit.

Bess James has an invitational "one man show" of about twenty paintings at the Louisiana Tech Art Department Gallery in Ruston, La.

NEW YORK ARTIST

My husband and I are doubly proud to show work in "Monroe Collects" from our collection by native New York artist Eugene C. Cooke. One of the four watercolors on exhibit was awarded a first place blue ribbon at the Columbia Art Festival, Columbia, La. last month. While in New York this past summer our four children had the opportunity to study daily with the artist. Naturally instilled with the curiosity all children possess, they were fascinated with the many implements used in the pursuit of art. Strategically placed near a "good light window, high enough to over look many miles of the semi-urban area where the artist and his wife reside, were cabinets and shelves filled with brushes, pens, knives, art gums, varied color pencils temperas, oils, watercolors and chalks as well as canvas, watercolor cards and sketching materials. The four pair of little eyes missed none of it and soon our children were creating with anything they could get their hands on. I'm glad we have a sizeable collection of Mr. Cooke's work to enjoy as I foresee no impending additional paintings, in fact it's entirely possible that after the invasion of our "four, seven, eight and nine year old locusts" upon his art supplies, "my father, the artist," may have given up painting entirely!

SPOTLIGHTING THE AREA

With Jimmy Hatten

More and more attention is being focused these days on river traffic. This area is particularly interested in the waterways, of course, due to the coming development of a nine-foot navigational channel on the Ouachita River.

What makes waterways transportation so attractive is the cheapness of carrying especially big, bulky cargo.

There was a day when water travel was the most romantic means of navigation, and Northeast Louisiana was especially involved in the latter days of that period — the steamboat era.

Steamboats once pushed up streams in this area — off the beaten path of the Ouachita — to such unlikely offshoots as the Cornie and D'Arbonne Bayous.

The two streams were cleared for many miles upstream and steamboats ran regular schedules as far up as Stein's Bluff on D'Arbonne and Kilgore's and Cobbs' landings on Cornie. Outgoing freight was largely cotton and cotton seed.

All of Union Parish depended on river traffic until the turn of the century. Then, the Missouri-Pacific built a branch line through Farmerville in 1904, and the steamboats began their slow fade. The boats had given way to something they could not compete with —speed.

Now the boats may be coming back. The weapon they'll use — economy.

The sometimes oversupply of water in areas in Northeast Louisiana has given rise to the names of some of the towns.

The area around Sicily Island, for example, northeast of Harrisonburg in Catahoula Parish, has been, during times of extreme high water, exactly what its name implies — an island.

The area received its name from early explorers who noted its similarity to the Isle of Sicily, south of Italy. Its boundaries originally extended from above Foules on the east to Bayou Louis near Harrisonburg to the west, to Deer Creek on the north and Lake Louis on the south.

As time went by, the town took the name of the area.

What made the drama in river traffic, though, were the perils and the pirates. Our area along the Mississippi, perhaps, would be a better example along these lines than the Ouachita.

Along the river in the vicinity of East Carroll Parish, they lurked in the early 1880's.

A pirate by the name of Bunch, it is said, lent his name to Bunch's Bend in upper East Carroll. Tradition hints that his band was exterminated by infuriated Kentucky bargemen.

Another nest of pirates, dimly recalled stories say, were drowned in a formidable earthquake that lowered Stack Island under water in December of 1811.

The town of Lake Providence and the lake of the same name may have gotten its name by boatmen who escaped the pirates and stopped there to rest and give thanks.

Two Franklin Jail Escapees Are Captured

WINNSBORO (Special)—Two prisoners who escaped from the Franklin Parish jail here at 7:30 p.m. Friday were captured Saturday.

Louis Willis Jones, 26, of Delhi and Thomas Ogilthorpe, 29, of Jonesville were in the "run-around" of the third-floor parish jail and escaped through a heat vent in the wall into an adjoining vacant office.

From the office they gained access to the ground floor by use of stairs. They then hitchhicked to Delhi, where they split up.

Ogilthorpe was apprehended by the Catahoula Parish Sheriff's Department at the home of his father one mile south of Jonesville at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Jones was apprehended by Franklin Parish Sheriff A. J. Stephens, Delhi Marshall Hershel Morris and Franklin deputies Jimmy Guice and Floyd Jones at about 1 p.m. Saturday at the home of his father, eight miles north of Delhi.

Escape of the two prisoners was discovered at 6:30 a.m. Saturday by Deputy Floyd Jones, who is in charge of th Franklin Parish jail.

Louis Willis Jones had been sentenced Thursday to five years at Angola Prison on charges of forgery.

Ogilthorpe was serving a 60-day jail sentence for driving while intoxicated.

Prince Observes Birthday Quietly

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — Prince Charles, Queen Elizabeth's eldest son and heir to the British throne, had a quite 16th birthday Saturday.

The prince, who is attending Gordonstoun secondary school near Aberdeen, spent the day as did the other boys there — a routine Saturday. Headmaster Robert Chew told reporters:

IKE WOULD PRESIDE

All-Faction GOP Meeting Urged By Senator Mundt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Karl Mundt, R-S.D., proposed Saturday an all-faction Republican summit conference, presided over by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, to hammer out agreement on future GOP policies.

Mundt, who supported Sen. Barry Goldwater's disastrously defeated bid for the presidency, said Goldwater should be included in a group which could act on policy and possibly recommend a successor to Republican National Chairman Dean Burch.

Mundt said he thinks Burch "is not long for his job." He said he has heard the name of Wayne Hood, Wisconsin businessman who served as field director for the national committee in the Goldwater campaign, mentioned as a possible successor.

The conservative South Dakota senator suggested in an interview that a nine-member group, with former President Eisenhower as chairman, meet before Christmas to seek unanimous agreement on "new programs and policies to be advanced as we expand our appeal to all Americans."

In addition to Eisenhower and Goldwater, he proposed this group include Richard M. Nixon, the 1960 GOP presidential nominee, Govs. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania and George Romney of Michigan and the two congressional minority leaders Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana.

For other members he suggested the names of Sen.-elect George Murphy of California and Drake Eden, state chairman of South Carolina which went for Goldwater.

Mundt said he is trying to limit his list to Republicans who engaged in active campaigns — for themselves or the national ticket — this year but said he would not be adverse to having the list expanded for larger conference.

If a larger meeting is held, he said there should be two-thirds agreement among its membership before any policy statements are issued. He said he thinks the nine he named could offer some unanimous views.

"These nine Republicans represent every segment and area of Republican thinking both ideologically and geographically," he said. "After all there are certain threads of consistency which have bound Republicans together since the era of Abraham Lincoln.

"We should strive to strengthen these sinews of unity rather than try to cut them to pieces by raids upon the party by those who would make it a personality cult or by those who would oppose upon it a brand of some special version, brand or interpretation of republicanism."

Premier Of Iraq Sets Up Cabinet To Fulfill Plans

CAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Iraq's premier, Gen. Taher Yahya, resigned Saturday and formed a new 22-man cabinet to carry out a five-point program involving the restoration of parliamentary life to Iraq, Baghdad Radio announced.

The broadcast said Yahya was designated by President Abdel Salam Aref to form his third cabinet of the year, soon after his resignation.

Most prominent absentee from Yahya's new cabinet was Brig. Rashid Musleh, former martial governor and interior minister. He was succeeded by pro-Nasser former Foreign Minister Col. Subhi Abdel Hamid.

Six-Day Circus Set At Eastgate

The circus is coming in Monroe. Over the week-end, some units of the Paul A. Miller Circus rolled into the city and by Monday morning the entire show will be set up on the Eastgate Shopping Center Parking lot for a six-day stand.

Known from coast-to-coast as the "Greatest Show on Earth", the Miller Circus will be presenting four free performances daily — 10:30 a.m., 4:30 p.m., 7:30 p.m., and 9:30 p.m. through Saturday at the Eastgate Shopping Center.

Under the sponsorship of the Eastgate Merchants' Association, a division of the Monroe Chamber of Commerce, the circus performances will be free to the public. The Eastgate merchants will distribute discount ride tickets to customers shopping Eastgate this week. The tickets will be worth 10-cents each on all 25-cent rides.

The Paul Miller organization has played over 300 downtown sections and shopping centers throughout the nation for the past seven years, presenting its free show and midway to the delight of several millions.

Highlight of the show this week will be the internationally-famed Egony Brothers from Denmark. The Egonys work on a 100-foot rigging performing an exciting high act without a net.

Other acts will include Captain Swede Johnson and his world famous lion act; The Weirengards, 120-foot aerial act from Sweden; Miss Myna, 45-foot trapeze act from New Zealand; Marion the Great, world's champion unicyclist; The Damm Brothers, worlds only tightwire, unicycle, head to head act; Baby Judy, performing elephant; and many other internationally famous circus stars.

One of the most popular activities of the Miller Circus this week will be their performances at local institutions for those who are ill, senior citizens and area children's homes.

Climaxing each night's performance at Eastgate will be an elaborate aerial fireworks display.

Negroes Ask GOP Ouster Of Goldwater

BALTIMORE (AP) — Negro Republican leaders demanded Saturday that Goldwater elements be ousted from the Republican National Committee. They said they could then lead Negroes back into a reformed party.

The demand came at a news conference held in connection with a closed meeting here of 30 executive board members of the National Negro Republican Assembly.

The assembly was formed in San Francisco last July after Negro delegates walked out of the Republican convention to protest the nomination of Sen. Barry Goldwater for president.

Grant Reynolds, director of the assembly's political organization and a lawyer from White Plains, N.Y., said it wants "a complete housecleaning at 1625 Eye Street, Washington (headquarters of the Republican National Committee)."

He said Negroes feel that a "small, extreme minority" is in control of the Republican party and "we want it expelled."

Among those named as targets of the Negro group were Dean Burch, national party chairman, and Clay Claiborne, a Negro who was active in the party organization during the election campaign.

Reynolds accused Claiborne of being involved in an attempt to confuse Negro voters before the election by urging Negroes in large cities to cast presidential write-in votes for Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Negro civil rights leader.

"We're calling on the national committee to apologize for the deplorable use of the name of Martin Luther King," said Reynolds.

He said his group also would call on the national committee to adopt by-laws ensuring that at least four Negroes would be elected at-large as national committeemen.

Ship Docks With New Passenger

NEW YORK (AP) — The liner Independence, which left Genoa, Italy, Nov. 5 with 867 passengers, arrived Saturday with 868.

Dr. Piero Ranallini, the ship's physician, said Mr. and Mrs. Giuseppi Grasso apparently miscalculated the delivery date of their expected child, born three weeks prematurely while the Independence was one day out of Genoa and anchored off Cannes, France.

Benvenuto Charles Grasso, weighing in at slightly over six pounds, was promised a free cruise by the ship's captain, Charles Troxell, when the child becomes of age. The boy's middle name was given in honor of Troxell.

THE WORLD'S WEEK

Nation Relaxes After Elections

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After the turmoil of politics, the nation's mood was one of relaxation and reassessment.

President Johnson spent a quiet week on the LBJ Ranch in Texas, playing host to Texas friends and such varied out-of-staters as Gov. Edmund Brown of California, Eddie Fisher and Milton Berle.

On Thursday he welcomed Gustavo Diaz Ordaz, who will become president of Mexico on Dec. 1. During the two-day visit, the two presidents-elect talked over mutual problems. President Johnson vowed that "we will resolve them with peace, reason and justice to each other."

And far away on the white sands of Montego Bay on the island of Jamaica, the losers gathered to treat their wounds with applications of golf, swimming and just plain lolling.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, crushed in the largest Democratic landslide since the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt, was at the Royal Caribbean Hotel.

A mile down the beach at the Half Moon Hotel were Dean Burch, chairman of the Republican National Committee; Denison Kitchel, Goldwater's campaign director; John Grenier, executive director of the Republican National Committee, and Rep. William E. Miller, Goldwater's vice presidential running-mate.

Burch was insisting he would not resign, as some other party leaders had demanded, at least not before a meeting of the national committee, which he had called for January. The others in the party were saying nothing for publication, but in Washington and elsewhere across the land the calls for change in the party kept rising.

Elsewhere in the nation and the world:

By Friday, another 33,500 Ford workers were idle, out of jobs because 25,000 others had been on strike for a week at plants supplying their factories.

Production of Ford cars and trucks was declining. The United Auto Workers union struck eight Ford plants across the nation on such local issues as washup time, seniority, improved ventilation and overtime allocation.

As the shortage of parts spread, the company furloughed the 33,500 workers in other plants. Arjay Miller, president of Ford, said "our entire operations will stop next week if the strike continues." That would hit 135,000 production workers.

That season had come again, and President Johnson officially proclaimed Nov. 26 as Thanksgiving Day and called on the nation to pray that "the forces of evil, violence, indifference, intolerance and inhumanity may soon vanish."

The harvest season was over, he said, "and our storehouses bulge with the bounty of the land."

But in many parts of the land east of thhe Rockies a drought that began in late summer continued without break.

In New England, New Jersey, West Virginia and elsewhere the streams and reservoirs were running dry, forest and brush fires menaced the towns, and farmers had to buy fodder to replace the burned out crops.

In many places there were water emergencies, and the weather man held out little hope of satisfying rains for the rest of the month.

In Moscow, the shouting and the tumult died, the Red captains and the kings departed.

One by one the rulers of the Communist world went home, and the last of them to go was Chou En-lai, premier of Red China. He left after eight days of talks, and the official communique said the discussions with the new rulers of the Soviet Union had been "frank and comradely."

The experts concluded that meant they were a failure in healing the ideological rift born during the reign of Nikita Khrushchev.

Even as Chou departed, the Russian party newspaper Pravda was restating the policies that so irritated the Peking regime — peaceful coexistence with the United States, friendship with India.

It appeared the only agreement between Moscow and Peking had been to postpone a world Communist meeting for the time being, in favor of continued Russia-China talks in the Chinese capital soon after the turn of the year.

It was also a week of bizarre thievery. A pair of masked men broke into the 7th Regiment Armory in New York on Sunday morning, handcuffed the watchman and made off with a — book cover.

But it was no ordinary book cover. It was of gold, burnished and jeweled, and it was valued at $75,000. The thieves tore it from the regiment's Book of Remembrance, which enshrines the names of 840 New Yorkers who died at Gettysburg and Omaha Beach, in the Argonne and at Inchon.

And in the Soviet Union, where, by official declaration, crime no longer exists, it became know that "rare and priceless" articles had been stolen from the Moscow Historical Museum. Included in the loot was a diamond-encrusted sword hilt, but the indignant official press reported that the articles had been recovered in the Caucasus, and two unidentified men would stand trial.

And again in New York, thieves entered the town house of Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, the former opera star Anna Case, and made off with $111,000 worth of jewelry and furs, possibly including the famed Mackay emerald. Mrs. Mackay, whose stepdaughter is married to songwriter Irving Berlin, was in a hospital for minor surgery at the time.

STRATEGY SESSION

Officials Confer On U.N.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk, U.N. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson and other high officials held a strategy session Saturday on the fight over United Nations finances.

Afterwards, informed sources said the United States is holding the door open to any solution in which the Soviets would pay enough money to cover their U.N. arrears. But the sources said the U.S. will stand firm against any abrogation of the U.N. Charter requirement on dues.

The U.S. officials also reaffirmed an intention not to pledge an American contribution at the U.N. technical assistance and special fund meeting scheduled for Monday.

Washington has decided not to promise funds for this volunteer operation until it sees how the broader struggle over U.N. assessments comes out.

The long-developing contest over U.N. financing is coming to a head shortly because the Soviets, under the U.N. Charter's Article 19, stand to lose their General Assembly vote at the fall session opening Dec. 1.

Article 19 says any member two years in arrears on its dues shall lose its Assembly vote.

The Russians and some others are that far behind because they have refused to pay for U.N. peacekeeping operations.

The United States says it is vital for U.N. constitutional and financial integrity that all members pay their assessments.

U.S. authorities were taking the position Saturday that they would much rather have the Soviet Union as a full-fledged, voting member of the world organization than see a fight which could wind up in a Soviet walkout.

The U.S. aim is preservation of U.N. fundamentals, not a victory over the Communists, it was stated.

Lawyers Desire Milder Control Of Beaten Party

BOSTON (AP) — Two young Boston attorneys disclosed Saturday they have circulated a four year plan designed to regain control of the Republican party by moderates.

The pair are Douglas Bailey, former Harvard faculty member, and David B. Goldberg who led the movement to draft Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge.

The plan calls for spending about $2 million to establish an organization within the Republican party, or parallel to it, that could regain control from the supporters of Sen. Barry Goldwater.

One division would concentrate on infiltration and control or party mechanisms, down to local levels. The other would work to change the party's political ideology.

Anouilh Probes Fanatic Politics In Latest Drama

NEW YORK (AP) — A drama from France of brooding menace and intense irony, "Poor Bitos," premiered Saturday night at Broadway's Cort Theater.

Playwright Jean Anouilh is examining political fanaticism.

His device is a double parable which counterpoints the ferocity of a small-town zealot 10 years after World War II, with events during the 1793 terror of the French Revolution.

Donald Pleasence gives a powerful performance as the provincial public prosecutor who reincarnates that Robespierre who proclaimedC "Greatness is the ruthless fulfillment of one's destiny."

As part of Anouilh's somberly menacing charade those who seek to bring down the recurrent despot are contemptible in other ways. They are the social snobs and wealthy, resentful primarily of the militant dictator simply because he is an upstart.

Uniformly excellent in the sardonic masque are Charles D. Gray, Roy Poole, C. K. Alexander, Michael Lombard, Diana Muldaur, and two White Way newcomers, Jane Lowry and Nancy Reardon.

Escapees Caught

NATCHEZ, Miss. (AP)—Two Negro inmates, who slipped away from the Louisiana state prison sugar mill were captured early Saturday south of here.

They were identified as James H. Troupe, 21, serving a 68-year term for armed robbery and manslaughter from Rapides Praish, and Henry Wyatt, 31, serving a six-year term for burglary from Avoyelles Parish.

Prison authorities said the two were among 100 inmates working the day shift at the sugar mill. They apparently slipped away late Thursday afternoon.

IF SALES TAX VOTED

Area Parish May Add 50 Teachers

VIDALIA (Special) — Supt. J. O. Lancaster said Saturday the passage of a one-cent sales tax to expand the Concordia Parish school program would permit the employment of an additional 50 teachers.

"It would be like bringing a new small industry to Concordia," Lancaster said.

A one-cent sales tax will be voted on in Concordia Tuesday to finance a $1,150,000 school expansion program.

"The Concordia Parish school system is understaffed by 50 teachers, according to the schedule set up by the Department of Education," Lancaster explained. "According to the teacher allotment schedule, if we had a place to put the students, we could employ an additional 50 teachers and reduce the teacher-pupil ratio."

Lancaster pointed out that quality education could not be obtained "when the number of students in your classrooms exceeds 30."

Because of industrial growth in the Natchez area, the Concordia system increased 326 this year over last year and Lancaster says from all indications the increase will continue to come each year.

"We've got to continue expanding," he said.

Lancaster also noted that the employment of an additional 50 teachers would mean an additional income of $200,000 annually for the parish.

"The money to pay the teachers, of course, is provided by the state and not the local school board," he stated.

He said a one-cent sales tax would cost the average citizen in Concordia about $20 annually.

The Concordia School Board called the sales tax election rather than a bond issue election because the parish's bonded indebtedness has reached its maximum.

With funds from the sales tax, Lancaster said the School Board would do the following:

(1) Add a new unit at Sevier. 2. Construct a new elementary school in the Ridgecrest area. 3. Add to Ferriday High School. 4. Build a new addition to Concord High. 5. Additions for Vidalia High School. 6. Construct a new elementary school at Vidalia. 7. Elementary additions. 8. Additions at Monterey High.

POPULAR RECORDS

Eighteen years have gone by since death closed Vincent Youmans' song book but his music remains fresh and catches the ear of each succeeding generation.

Hardly a day passes when a Youmans' melody is not played on radio or television. Who has not heard "Tea for Two," "Without a Song," "Carioca" or "I Know That You Know"?

These are only four of 36 songs in a two-LP album, "Through the Years with Vincent Youmans" (Evergreen 6401-2). This is an ambitious and rewarding project conceived by Bill Borden and Steve Marvin and includes 10 Youmans songs that have never been previously recorded.

Paul Trueblood's arrangements for voice and for the duo piano team of Trueblood and Rita Segree are imaginative without being ostentatious. Here is an album that will be worth playing, as its title has it, through the years.

Ernesto Lecuona, who died only a few months ago, is another composer who left a timeless legacy of good music . . . "Siboney," "Malaguena," "The Breeze and I." These and others may be heard on "Xavier Cugat Plays The Music of Ernesto Lecuona" (Mercury SR 609-36). An eloquent tribute from one Cuban, Cugat, to another, Lecuona.

A third record from the past worth remembering is "My Time Ain't Long" by Jimmie Rodgers (RCA Victor LPM-2865. These numbers go back to 1927 when Jimmie was flying high as a blue-yodeler and railroad minstrel. In this group of recordings, pressed on LP's for the first time, Rodgers is heard with the famed Carter Family.

Selected Singles — "Oh, Well" by Lurlean Hunter (Smash S-1932), "Belly Up to the Bar, Boys" by Debbie Reynolds (M-G-M K13279), "I'm Not the Hero But the Fool" by Alan Vallone Phillips 40226.

LP's of the Week—"Folk Songs by Pete Seeger" (Capitol W2172) should be treasured by Seegers followings because it is built around recordings that have not been released until this time. And the folk music buffs should equally appreciate the enthusiasm of Gospel Singer Bessie Griffin on "Oh Glory Hallelujah!" (Epic BN 26101). For those who are looking for something different, "Songs from the Steve Allen TV Show" (Dot DLP 3587) is a pleasant experiment in diversion. The teen crowd can find many favorites in "30 Big Hits of the 60's" by Bobby Vee (Liberty (LRP-3385).

VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Dean Burch's Future Lies With Silent Committeemen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Among Republican National Committee members willing to take a stand, opinion is almost evenly divided on whether Dean Burch should in effect be ousted as party chairman.

But a much larger number of members won't say how they'll vote if the matter is brought up at a proposed committee meeting, probably in January.

Burch was quoted this week as saying he would be unable to continue as chairman if the committee should adopt a no-confidence motion.

None of the committee members responding to an Associated Press survey would say he'll sponsor such a motion, but several said they expect one will be made.

With almost three-fourths of the 132 committee members replying, this was how they stood on a possible non-confidence motion:

Thirteen said they would vote for it and 14 said they would vote against it; 70 members were noncommittal, among whom 12 had strong praise for Burch and 9 were critical of him.

Several members, ill or on vacation trips, could not be reached. At least two of them previously had publicly called for Burch's resignation.

Burch was installed last July at the behest of Sen. Barry Goldwater, the GOP presidential nominee. His term as chairman was for four years, and even those committee members who oppose him said they doubt that he could be ousted by a direct vote as opposed to a motion of no confidence.

At least one, William Powers of Colorado, implied a vote might not be necessary. "Mr. Burch is a good Republican and he should be able to determine for himself whether or not he has the confidence of the group," Powers said.

In a dispatch from Jamaica, where Goldwater and Burch have been vacationing, the New York Times said Saturday that the GOP leaders will fight back if necessary to hold the leadership of the party.

The account quoted Goldwater's running mate, Rep. William E. Miller, as saying Burch should stay and that "I am sure Barry shares this view." Burch was quoted as saying he will seek an early vote of confidence from the national committee.

The District of Columbia committeeman, Lewis T. Breuninger, predicted "a new face as chairman" but without a party-splitting no-confidence vote.

Oddly enough, the election defeat which sparked criticism of Burch could strengthen the grip of conservative Republicans on the committee.

The committee basically consists of two members from each state plus two each from the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands for a total of 106.

Added as voting members are the party chairmen of states which voted for the GOP presidential nominee, or have a Republican governor, or have a majority of Republicans on the combined House-Senate delegation.

THE REALM OF COIN

Collectors Are Enterprising Lot

By JOHN BLUCK

Coin collectors are an enterprising lot. When they are on the trail of old coins they combine the instincts of a bloodhound with the inquisitiveness and persistence of a dime novel detective.

At the least mention of the name of someone who might have a few old coins the collector goes into action. Here's the way it sometimes goes:

"So you are a coin collector. I know of a fellow in Jerseyville who has a can full of old coins," says the unsuspecting source of information.

"You don't say," the collector replies in his most disarming tone of voice. "What kind of coins?"

"I don't know for sure," the informant replies. "I haven't seen them myself, but my friend was telling me about them. He said this fellow isn't a collector but he has been saving coins since he was a boy. He must be about 75 now and he has a cigar box full of pennies with an Indian on them, a bunch of those big old pennies . . . a whole lot of stuff. But he won't part with them."

"What is your friend's name and where does he live," the perspiring collector asks as he offers his informant a cigarette.

"Jim Brown," comes the reply. "He runs a little grocery store and gas station about a mile south of Jerseyville. This fellow I'm telling you about trades with him. That's how Jim knows about those old coins. Seems that one day the old fellow came in to buy some groceries and get some gas for his pickup and didn't have any money except a couple of old silver dollars and a funny looking coin. Believe he said it was a 20-cent piece."

That's all the information the collector needs to start on the trail of a hoard of old coins. A day or two later the collector remembers some urgent business he has in Jerseyville and soon makes his way to Jim Brown's "little grocery store and gas station".

With a little luck, friend collector gets directions to the home of "the old timer" and with a little more luck he gets a look at the old coins and the cigar box filled with Indian cents." "Yes," the old timer might part with the coins for a price, "except that 1892 half dollar that was made the year I was born."

The collector makes an offer after pointing out that none of the coins is rare or worth much, and finally buys the lot with a face value of $39.87 for $45.00.

The transaction completed, Mr. Collector forgets his urgent business in Jerseyville and hurries home to check his purchase against the Red Book and Trends.

The persons and places above are purely imaginary. The friendly collector is real as life and around in surprising numbers. He may be a traveling salesman, lawyer, plumber, owner of a business, retired executive or the clerk in your neighborhood supermarket. If he has been collecting coins for a few years he has made many such trips on the trail of old coins. Occasionally he finds them. Sometimes he is able to make a purchase. But whether he does or doesn't, he has been doing what he likes best. And the next time he overhears a casual comment about an "old timer with a jug full of old coins" he'll be off on the trail again.

As we said before, collectors are enterprising fellows. We have heard of a few of the modern breed that use electronic gadgets to locate buried coins. Others visit ball parks, carnival grounds, the lot where the rodeo or circus was held or any other place where people gather in large numbers. After the crowds have left you may see a fellow walking along slowly while he scans the ground carefully. He's looking for a coin that might have been dropped and overlooked. He's not looking for "spending money." He's a coin collector with a sharp eye for dates and mintmarks.

While one hunting ground is being explored, another collector may be shuffling around on the site from which an old house was moved. Occasionally collectable coins are turned up. More often any coin found is a common recent date with no collector value. But the collector is undaunted. There is always another time and another place and the coin he finds next time may end up in his collection.

Collectable coins may be found almost anywhere. The best place, of course, is in a hoard of coins someone has saved over a period of years. But they turn up everywhere. We know of one Indian cent that was found along a busy highway. An extra fine 1899 Indian cent was found in the upholstery of an old chair in a furniture shop. A Carson City mint Liberty seated quarter was found by a druggist in cash register change.

If there are still holes in your collection don't despair. You may find an elusive hole filler in the flower beds next spring!

Meter Maid Dies In Work Mishap

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Patsy O'Neil, 33, a police department meter maid, was killed Friday when her scooter and an automobile collided.

Mrs. O'Neil lived about 90 minutes after she was knocked from her scooter and dragged. Police charged Mrs. Camille T. Bryan, 75, with failure to yield the right of way and not having a valid driver's license.

Mrs. O'Neil, mother of two daughters, had been with the department two years.

VATICAN COUNCIL

Fathers Open More Doors Leading To Unity Decree

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican Ecumenical Council cleared the way Saturday for Pope Paul VI to proclaim a pathfinding Roman Catholic church decree for the road to Christian unity.

The vote marked the end of the next to last week of this session, as the council poured on a rush of work to get documents — possibly even controversial declarations on the Jews and on religious liberty — ready for proclamation by the Pope.

In an unusually heavy day, the council fathers approved — 1,870 to 82 — a series of minor text changes in the schema "De Ecumenismo" on unity, the last working step before the Pope can issue the document as a full church decree. It provides for a program of common prayer with Protestants and some intercommunion with the Orthodox church.

At the same time, the prelates received copies of minor changes in the major document "De Ecclesia" (On the Church) and were told that voting on these changes would take place next Tuesday and Wednesday.

This increased the possibility that the schema — which establishes the principle that bishops share collectively with the Pope in governing the church — will also be ready for proclamation when Pope Paul and the more than 2,000 council fathers end this session in a public ceremonial gathering in St. Peter's Basilica next Saturday.

Newsmen at the American bishops' press panel were told after this morning's session that translations were being readied not only on the unity and church schemas but also on revised declarations on the Jews and on religious liberty. A panel spokesman said translations from the Latin were being readied in the hope that all four documents might be proclaimed on the last day of the session.

The day's developments marked a sudden shift in mood in council circles. Up until now it had been widely reported that only the unity schema — and possibly the document on shared papal-episcopal power — would reach the final stage, with proclamation of the declarations on the Jews and religious liberty left over for the fourth session of the council.

Despite preparation of the translations, it was pointed out that there is no certainty the declarations, or even the De Ecclesia schema, would be promulgated next Saturday.

But the council is clearly determined to try to get as much done as possible. Archbishop Pericle Felici, council secretary-general, announced there would be afternoon sessions next week if necessary. The council normally meets only in the morning.

Only two schemata have been proclaimed since the council began in October 1962 — a document reforming church liturgy and another on modern mass media.

Goldwater Plans Nationwide Survey To Find Why Republicans Voted Demo

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater said Saturday he would make a nationwide survey of the Republican party to discover weak spots because so many Republicans had voted for the Democratic candidate, President Johnson.

He said he was going to continue analysis and study to find out why people who traditionally had voted Republican acted as they did.

He also said he was still opposed to the civil rights bill because he held it was unconstitutional.

He has sworn by the Bible to uphold the constitution of the United States and therefore he was still opposed to the bill, he said.

Asked about his present position in the party, he said the leadership is now in other hands and he intended to work with the leaders in both houses.

Goldwater told a news conference at a Jamaica Golf Club there was no titular leader of the party.

Asked whether he would desire nomination as party candidate in the 1968 presidential campaign, he said he would not be looking for nomination and he did not think he would be nominated.

Defeated vice presidential candidate William Miller and Dean Burch, chairman of the Republican party, sat in on the conference.

Goldwater leaves for Washington today after a post-election holiday.

Goldwater said he would not be making any effort to gain nomination but he would do everything to help his party.

Asked about the alleged misuse of funds collected by the GOP National Committee, he said he hoped the question did not indicate any suspicion of dishonesty as he had never seen money so quickly raised, properly accounted for and responsibly spent.

Goldwater said President Johnson in his campaign offered nothing to the people and he hated to see the country controlled by fear.

He said he was convinced the Republican party is the party of the people and the Democratic party the party of big business.

He said the Republican party was opposed to socialism and centralized government and yet many people in the party supported the Democratic candidate. That was one of the chief reasons why he would be conducting a survey and analysis, he asserted.

On other matters, Goldwater said he would have liked to remain in Jamaica a longer time but pressing duties made it necessary for him to return to the United States.

Asked why he met Donald Sangster, Jamaica's deputy prime minister, in his bare feet when Sangster called on him, Goldwater said they were old friends and it was not a mark of disrespect.

About golf, he said it was the second time he had played golf since March. He played with two caddies. His game was not up to grade.

He said he would have liked to meet the Jamaican prime minister, Sir Alexander Bustamante, but the latter had been busy with Commonwealth parliamentary delegates.

An Olin Mathieson pulp and paper mill in southern Brazil, operated by the firm's International Division, with technical assistance from the Forest Products Operations in West Monroe, has helped boost the economy there, as well as good will toward U.S. industry.

"Yankee, please stay."

This slogan — a sharp contrast to the "Yankee go home" sentiment often expressed toward the U. S. in other parts of the world — might well apply to the way citizens of Canoas, Brazil feel about Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp.

It is in Canoas in the State of Santa Catarina, in southern Brazil, where Olin's International Division — with technical assistance from Forest Products Operations in West Monroe — has operated a pulp and paper mill for almost seven years.

The Olinkraft mill in Brazil is a classic example of how North American knowhow coupled with the fertile markets, natural resources and eager workers of a dynamic country like Brazil, are helping transform South America into an awakening economic giant.

BRAZILIAN WOODLANDS foreman is shown next to a mature Parana pine tree, the type used for pulpwood at the Olinkraft mill. This native Brazilian specie, much larger in girth than north Louisiana pine pulpwood trees, results in a high-quality pulp for the manufacture of kraft paper.

RAPID GROWTH of Slash pines in southern Brazil is shown in these views of seedling nursery near Canoas (top) and young trees after only two years of growth following transplanting. This is part of a reforestation program being pioneered by Olin to grow the North American specie on company-owned forest land near the Olinkraft paper mill.

BUILDING AND improving roads has been an important phase of Olin's modernization program at the Canoas mill.

Olin acquired the mill from a Brazilian concern, Cia. Fabrica De Papel Itajai, in early 1958. M. H. Collet, vice president and manager of Forest Products Operations, was intimately acquainted with the Brazilian paper industry and the Canoas mill. In addition, the International Division had studied paper manufacturing prospects in several Latin American countries. Jointly, they concluded that Brazil, with its fast growing economy and population (which now totals some 76 million and is rising about three per cent a year, nearly twice the U. S. growth rate) held the best promise.

A survey team spent several weeks in August, 1957 studying the Canoas mill, located about 185 miles west of the Brazilian east coast and 587 miles southwest of Sao Paulo and 750 miles southwest of Rio de Janeiro. They determined that, from the standpoint of production and processing equipment, the availability of long-fibered pulpwood and other raw materials, transportation, supervisory and operating personnel and other factors, the mill possessed high potential. Local Olin personnel involved in this survey included Bruce E. Brooks, manager of the pulp and paper mill, and Ralph Law, assistant woodlands manager.

RAW MATERIALS VITAL

One of the key considerations was the availability of raw materials—the woods needed for pulp and fire wood for power and steam. Because of a general shortage of pulp manufacturing plants, technical know-how and suitable trees Brazil must import a major share of her woodpulp, particularly long-fibered pulp, the kind needed to produce kraft paper.

Fortunately, however, the Canoas mill is situated in a frontier area amidst millions of acres of forest where the "Parana" pine tree grows. This Parana (pronounced par' a-naw) pine has the longest fiber of any tree species in the world. The Brazilian Parana belt has long been the center of an active lumber industry. In recent years, it has become the raw material base for a new paper industry.

The Parana is a huge tree that yields a long-fibered pulp suitable for making good quality kraft papers and paperboards for paper bags and sacks, corrugated containers, cartons and other products. The Parana pine now being cut in Brazil, mostly virgin timber, is as much as three feet in diameter — several times the average size of second-growth Southern pine pulp logs harvested in Louisiana.

The dramatic upturn that has occurred in the economy of Canoas, a tiny village nestled in the semi-mountainous country of southern Brazil can be illustrated in the contrast between conditions prevailing at the paper mill before Olin assumed the operation and the improvements wrought soon afterwards.

Since first being put into production by its previous owners in late 1955, the mill, though well constructed and equipped, had been operated at considerably below its capacity, producing only eight to 10 tons per day. This was reflected in the working conditions of the employees. Morale was low. Workers were poorly paid. The former management at times could not even meet the payroll. The work days were long (12 hours), with no days off. Employees were poorly clothed and many were poorly housed. There was much sickness in the area and infant mortality was extremely high by U. S. standards. No provision was made for medical care, sanitation or a plant safety program.

Outside suppliers also felt the pinch. Suppliers of pulpwood, fire wood and other raw materials for the mill frequently had to wait many weeks or months for their money.

EFFICIENCY INCREASED

After acquiring the mill in January 1958, Olin began a program to improve the operating efficiency of the mill and upgrade its product from a relatively crude semi-chemical type of paper to a high-grade paper suitable for multiwall shipping sacks (vitally needed by the Brazilian cement industry) and other products.

At the time of the acquisition in 1958, Collet had a West Monroe production team with him in Brazil consisting of Jack Noble, project leader; Ted McCrocklin engineer; John Watson, pulp maker; Hollie Pankey, paper maker; and Jim Amos, forester. These men took over the operation from the former owners without missing a single reel of paper. Over the ensuing six weeks, this seasoned team completely converted the Canoas mill from the manufacture of low-grade pulp and paper to a high-quality product.

Other local men involved later in the Canoas operation were Worth Beasley and Doug Crew, both also of the West Monroe paper mill.

Ted McCrocklin, a Louisiana State University graduate and a former engineer at the local mill, stayed on in Canoas and later became manager of the operation. Ted is the son of Bill McCrocklin, manager of Olin's lumber sawmills at Huttig, Ark., and Winnfield, La. and a brother of W. F. McCrocklin, an Olin lumber representative based in Mansfield, La.

PARADE OF CANOAS school children is an annual affair on Brazilian Independence Day. Note umbrella-like shape of mature Parana pine trees in background.

With the aid of both American and Brazilian engineers, technicians and foresters, McCrocklin has continued to make various improvements at the mill. For example, faulty equipment and parts have been repaired or replaced. Pulp making procedures, including chemical balances, were completely changed. A training program to raise the skill level of the workers was instituted. Despite their generally low educational level the Brazilian employees were eager and quick to learn. Within a year, the Canoas mill was running at a high efficiency level, at a capacity of 35 tons a day. Today it operates at 50 tons per day.

Soon to improve, too, was the lot of the Canoas workers, and the area's economy generally. Working conditions became better and wages were increased. The work day was shortened from 12 hours to eight with one day off per week. The improved wages and more reliable payroll permitted workers to buy better clothing, food and other necessities. Medical supplies, such as antibiotics were made available to employees at cost. Olinkraft management in 1959 began providing deep well drinking water and a full-time doctor and a part-time dentist at the plant, in an effort to improve general health conditions in this frontier community.

Along with the shorter work week came provision for the recreational needs of the people. A recreational center was built for use by all Olinkraft employees and their families. The Canoas Olinkraft Club, among its activities, supports a good amateur soccer team.

A school for Canoas children built by the former mill owners was expanded by Olin, a full - time Brazilian faculty hired, and other improvements made. Classes in the English language were conducted by American Olin personnel, including forester Jim Amos.

SUPPLIERS ALSO BENEFIT

Raw material suppliers, too, benefitted from prompt payment by Olin for their products and services. This also permitted the paper mill to build up its supply of pulp wood and fire wood.

Despite the unstable nature of politics in many Latin American nations, Olin has enjoyed an excellent reception in Brazil. "The local and state authorities, including a Brazilian Army unit in nearby Lajes, were very cooperative. All Americans were well received by the people of Canoas and Lajes," Collet reports.

Although Canoas has experienced unprecedented prosperity with Olin as an industrial "partner," the Brazilian operation has not been without its problems. Some still prevail. But most are shared by other Yankee manufacturers or investors in Latin America.

One problem is the age-old one of language barrier. Another is transportation. Obtaining needed supplies and materials, such as machinery and paper making chemicals is a constant problem. Deliveries of equipment from abroad are slow. All incoming or outgoing items must be transported by truck or air, in the absence of an adequate rail system. Often, particularly during the rainy season, truck shipments are delayed because of poor roads. New roads are being built, however, which not only are facilitating supply shipments but also deliveries of finished paper to customers in Sao Paulo, Rio and other market cities.

Fuel to provide the energy for manufacturing plants is extremely expensive in Brazil. The country produces comparatively little oil or coal suitable for use as boiler fuel. The Olinkraft mill at Canoas used wood to fuel its boilers for electric power and process steam. Its fuelwood usage exceeds the volume of pulpwood it uses. It draws half of its electricity from its own hydroelectric plant at nearby Perimbo and manufactures the rest in its own steam-power plant.

HAND LABOR USED

Although efforts at modernization are being made, the methods used to harvest pulp and fire wood at Canoas are somewhat less mechanized than those employed in this country. Considerable hand labor still is used. The trees are felled and logs cut with cross-cut saws, then cross-hauled by horse teams for transfer by hand to platforms on the sides of hills, from which they are loaded on trucks. The Parana logs (the bark runs to 1½ inches thick) are hand-peeled entirely in the woods with axes.

Another problem that sometimes plagues Yankee businessmen: A Brazilian labor law which, in effect, makes it virtually impossible to dismiss an employee who has over 10 years service.

The Olinkraft mill is now engaged in another modernization program. As if not wanting to be outdone by its West Monroe counterpart which is now undergoing extensive modernizing, the Canoas mill is installing a new chemical recovery system, a washing and screening system, a power boiler and other facilities to almost double its pulp making capacity to 80 tons a day. This will substantially conserve cooking chemicals and prepare the mill for the addition of a second paper machine to go with the original Voith (106-inch wire) machine.

During the last five years, Olin has carried on an active reforestation program in the Canoas area, to insure an ample long-range supply of pulp wood. Despite some problems involving climate, "competitive growth" from other trees and shrubs such as bamboo, obtaining the facilities and training local labor to clear and plant the land, developing plant nurseries, fertilization and other techniques of modern forestry management, Olin has succeeded in acquiring 18,000 acres and developing over 5,000 acres of forestland. More than four million Southern (slash) pine seedlings, one of the pine species that grows in our own South, have been planted on this land. The company eventually intends to develop some 55,000 acres.

As Collet sums it up:"The success of our Brazilian paper mill, and the beneficial effect this has had on the economy of that area, are a vivid illustration of how U. S. private-business risk capital and manufacturing technology can, and are, helping our budding Latin American neighbors to help themselves."

Primarily For Fun

If figures revealed in a survey conducted by the Educational Testing Service are accurate, American citizens won't have to worry much about the old saying that, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." These figures tend to show that for most of those attending college, play, or fun, is the primary objective.

ETS told the College Entrance Examination Board that a survey of 13,000 college freshmen showed more than half were attending primarily for fun, only 18 per cent said they were there for intellectual reasons and 16.5 per cent listed vocational goals.

The president of the testing service said he called this to the attention of the board so "they will know they do not have a lot of little Einsteins on the campus."

In that particular reference, the man could be wrong. During some of his school years Einstein was said to have been rated by some of his teachers as a dullard. Since he later developed into one of the world's greatest geniuses and was first to promulgate the theory of relativity as a force in the universe and the first in the United States to propose creation of the atomic bomb, there can be no doubt of his brain power. His lack of school interest and desire for fun may have been the reason he was rated a dullard.

To some, it is disturbing to learn from another source that by 1970 the nation is expected to be spending $1.9 billion to help students through college interests that center primarily on dating, athletics and college traditions.

One optimistic commentator said:

"But the ETS survey would be more helpful if it took a look at college seniors. There is good reason to believe that those who survive four years of exposure to college work also have learned that the fun side of college is not the most important."

Actually, the fact that many students start to college with fun in mind should not be too disturbing. We have extremely strong evidence that college education pays off handsomely in a financial way, regardless of the motive for attending. It may also be just as rewarding in many other ways.

Figures have been submitted to show that each year a student spends in college is worth an additional $25,000 in lifetime income. This would mean the student with four years of college would earn $100,000 more in his lifetime than he would if he had not attended. Similarly, if a medical student spends eight or nine years in college, he may expect to earn well above $200,000 more than he would if he had not attended college.

These averages take in all students who go to college, including those who may start only for fun. Therefore, even the "fun" students must gain some additional benefits. Learning to associate with and get along with people is an important part of education.

Those who go to college for fun and nothing else usually will drop out before long if they don't start absorbing the subjects that are laid before them. Those who stay increase not only their respect for learning but gain in learning itself.

If there is nothing worse in the world than that many students start college because they hope to get fun out of it, our outlook for the future is bright.

Jobs Or U.S. Pennies

There are some ne'er do wells in this country who would rather have anything they can get from the government than to work for a living but most people are not that way. The vast majority of them would rather have good jobs and earn their own livings legitimately.

One of the nation's leading economics writers, whose column, during the presidential campaign, was largely turned over to propaganda space for the election of President Johnson, gave figures to show that money appropriated in the so-called "anti-poverty" program, if parceled out to those without jobs, the total for each person for a year would be about $22. How many orders of ham and eggs could anyone get in a year for $22? And, how many clothes could he buy during that time?

On the other hand, at coal miners' wages, amounting to several dollars an hour, a worker might make $24 a day. That $24 a day would come some 300 times as often as the $22 in the "anti-poverty" program, and it wouldn't take any annual or biannual appropriations by Congress to keep it going.

Here are some things to think about:

The much-dramatized "war on poverty" undoubtedly has given many the idea that the government alone can erase poverty. Really, the government can do absolutely nothing without production by the people and the world's best production is obtained where there is incentive pay.

Even in the Appalachian area, where miners have shown a determination to stay, even if they can find no jobs, rather than to move to places where there are jobs, the only real hope is through industry. And that hope seems to be in sight. If prosperity is restored, the government is expected to take credit for it but it will have had practically nothing to do with it.

A short time ago a power system made up of investor-owned utilities broke ground for a $53.5 million power station in West Virginia. This is part of a $350 million new construction program the system will complete by 1970 in its region. By 1970, its plants will burn nine million tons of coal annually. Investor-owned utilities in Appalachia plan to spend more than $2 billion on plants and equipment by 1970. Those plants, along with others outside the region, will use some 28 million tons of Appalachian coal.

Thousands upon thousands of new jobs will be created. Vast sums will flow into the Appalachian economy to benefit business of every kind and size. Taxing bodies will welcome big new sources of revenue.

Although the government has been trying and is still trying to convince the people that government must solve every problem, we find prosperity only where industry produces jobs for those who want them.

Women Officeholders

Now that women are as free as men to run for any office they choose, whether local, state or national, including the posts of United States Senator and Representative, people scarcely notice how many of them are in public positions.

When Jeannette Rankin was the first woman elected to the House of Representatives in 1916 there was a great deal of discussion about women in politics. It continued until about the time Hattie Caraway of Arkansas was elected to the United States Senate with the assistance of the late Governor and Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana.

The Congress that assembled in 1961 had 17 women members. That was when the top was reached. The Congress that took the oath in 1963 had only 11 women and when it convenes again next January there will be only 10.

We must have reached a level on which women are just people, sometimes winning office and sometimes losing, but nothing special unless they have extra ability, a requirement also made of the men.

Ostriches are the world's largest birds. An adult ostrich is almost eight feet tall, weighs about 300 pounds and can run at speeds up to 30 miles an hour.

Share The Treats

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

As President of the North Monroe Kiwanis Club I would like to use your letters to the Editor column as a media to once again thank you for the assistance you rendered in making our 1964 Share the Treats program a success. We sincerely appreciate the publicity you gave us.

An extra word of thanks must go to the children of the Monroe Area who gave from their hearts by sharing their Treats with children less fortunate than themselves. We are also indebted to the principals and teachers of the city school system for their support, along with the two Parochial schools who participated.

Letters of thanks are coming in from all of the organizations which received the treats and when they are all in, the North Monroe Kiwanis Club will make copies and pass them around to the schools to be posted for the children to see.

Thanks again to you and the teachers and an extra note of thanks to the children for sharing.

God, World Peace

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

This article I am writing about should be a good subject after the presidential election.

Let's start with the subject of God. What is your belief and understanding of Him? Do you take time each day to read the Bible? How can you understand Him when you never visit Him either on Friday nights, Sunday mornings or Sunday nights? It's either such excuses as I have to go to the football game, or I am going fishing or I can't miss Ed Sulivan's show. But we are living in hard times. The world is going to the dogs. My friends, first we must take time out to find God, then we may have a change in our lives.

Next let's talk about peace and what it means to the world. Peace is not found on a "Bargain Table at a Special Price." It is found only in our hearts and our way we conduct ourselves towards our fellowmen, our family, our God.

President Johnson may give us a talk about a peaceful way to overcome wars and conflicts among other nations of the globe. We must act and do less talking and try to live with God's ways everyday toward an "Everlasting Peace" not only for the U. S. but for the whole world. A way of a pure life and one that will bring joy for all.

Election Evaluation

Rayville,La.

To the Editor:

It is too early to assess and evaluate the recent election except to suggest that conservatives have no reason to be wholly despondent over the outcome.

Senator Goldwater, in spite of what the national press says, made one of the most remarkable campaigns ever made by any presidential candidate, and a few figures on paper will prove it. We know definitely the numerical strength of many classes of opposition — for example, the communists — who voted against him. This was expected, but the saddest thing of all was the vote and influence of otherwise seemingly intelligent people of the national press and television, northern church leaders and left-wing Republicans. One would think these, regardless of their philosophy, would be fair and just but they were not.

What 26,000,000 conservatives who voted for Mr. Goldwater will do next cannot be determined now. I would like to suggest, however, that we begin at once to organize conservatives into a group, detestible as the term has been to me in the past, of "block voters" with the sole purpose of eliminating leftwing candidates and blocking communist influence and infiltration. We have several state officials who should be eliminated. They are a disgrace to our State.

The tragedy of our country is not that a great and good man has been overwhelmingly defeated for he will survive. If I had his financial security, I would much rather be in his shoes today than those of the President's. But when a country sinks so low in morals, so steeped in bias and prejudice, so blind it cannot see some good in every man, we are at a sad state. Once upon a time our Lord said to Satan, "Man shall not live by bread alone," thereby imputing to Satan some degree of reason, intelligence and dignity. The American people who talk so loudly about christianity, tolerance and charity, did not give Senator Goldwater the same courtesy and respect in spite of the fact that unlike Satan his motives were sincere and honorable. I take my hat off to 503,706 Americans in my native Louisiana who did.

Educational Crisis

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

What is the educational crisis in Louisiana? Is it teacher pay? Is it growing teacher unrest? Is it talk of a walkout? What is the problem?

This is the area in which we all fail. We fail to identify the basic problem. The symptoms and side effects are so spectacular and the basic issue is so subtle there is little wonder that we miss the point. But subtle or not, the basic issue is this? To what position of relative importance is our children's education to be relegated? What is to be our commitment to our children? To put it more simply, are they more important than a toll-free bridge, a black-top road, a cigarette, or a bottle of wine, or are they less important; or are they all about the same? This is the real issue we must face. It is a question of the proper order of things.

In the special session of the Louisiana Legislature this month one aspect of this issue will come before our representatives. This aspect is teachers' salaries. Although this is only one facet of our commitment to education, it is a most important one. Are we to see our children miss knowing the best teachers, new and experienced, because we hedged on our commitment? Progressive states are engaged in fierce competition for the best teachers available. This competition will increase and good teachers will be taken from Louisiana. Colleges also are scouting for promising talent from the public school teaching ranks. Will our public schools be cannibalized of talent by states and communities with firm commitments to their youth? Will we adopt and implement a salary schedule designed to attract new talent and hold and encourage experienced teachers, or will we hedge on the issue and still be beggars for and not choosers of our children's teachers.

We will decide, through our representatives, this one facet of our total commitment to our children's' education this month. But as this facet goes, so will go the rest. If indifference and complacency and vested interest win here, they will take the rest by default.

The question that all teachers and parents are now having to face squarely is: What are you going to do about it?

Teachers Pay

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

I have just finished your editorial about the proposed raises for teachers in the Sunday edition. It appears that you are in opposition to such a raise for several reasons and I write to voice an opinion favoring the raise as requested.

At this particular time, when teachers pay is the subject, you have chosen to espouse the cause of other groups in need. If this line of reasoning should prevail, the teachers would never obtain a raise, for there are always others who are in need, both in government and out. Then too you wrote at some length about a threatened teachers strike, when in fact there has been no such strike in the state's history. This should be held in favor of teachers — certainly not against them. These are the things, together with the general tone of this editorial and the thought of similar ones in the past are what cause me to believe you are opposed to the raise.

Right minded citizens, in my opinion, will consider only if teachers need the requested raise. It is plain for all to see that money is made available for things of lesser importance. It should be borne in mind that teachers are not asking for the opportunity to become wealthy, as those engaged in other lines already have. Only do they seek enough money to maintain or approach a standard of living, absolutely required of them as a group. Just enough to allow for continuous study so they can better educate the children in the state. They need to be relieved also of intolerable financial strain which forces educators to drive trucks and to deliver newspapers as a side line. These conditions are not figments of the imagination, but cold hard facts, which reflect no credit on our state.

It is a fact too that although taxes remain high in Louisiana, literacy and teachers pay remain pitifully low. Surely it is not greed which motivates many of the better qualified teachers to seek out of state employment, but sheer urgency forces many to shun our state. If these things are true — and there is good reason to believe they are — they do harm to our state and they should be corrected.

If mistaken in facts, I stand corrected. If right, then let us forget about non-existent strikes and grant the moderate request of the teachers.

Noble Principle

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Well, what many of us thought was impossible happened - a somebody was beaten by a nobody!

It was my fervent hope that Mr. Goldwater would have attained to that prize so deservedly his, so honorably won in San Francisco, and so to be desired by many Americans. I use the word honorably on purpose and without reservation here—a word that has been too indiscriminately used to the point of becoming hackneyed. In this particular instance and as it was applied to Mr. Goldwater, it was a fair word.

I interpreted "extremism in the defense of Liberty is no vice" as meaning being totally consecrated to principle - a noble principle such as Mr. Goldwater sought to defend and done completely without the defect of self-aggrandizement.

I myself was reassured beyond measure by these words of Thoreau: "If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured or far away."

It should be important, yes even necessary, to be bold and brave and as totally dedicated, though different as Mr. Goldwater was. His very difference and departure from the ordinary marked him, in my estimation, as that one, that only one superbly qualified to lead us in these times. I salute the great brave patriot and American that he is - a man short on egotistical frailities and long on nobleness of character; a man for our nation, a man for now. More's the pity that it isn't to be. We are sorrier and will be poorer for it.

Abraham Lincoln said it: "If we do not make common cause to save the good old ship of this Union on this voyage, nobody will have a chance to pilot her on another voyage."

Lamentably the following excerpt from the October 3, 1964 issue of Human Events was true. "A curious campaign this one. And sadly enough, in one sense, it is unlike any known before. This is turning into a campaign of hate, of raw irrational hatred, and ironically, the object of this passion is a man himself incapable of it: Barry Goldwater, Senator from Arizona."

Possibly Mr. Goldwater will find some solace in these words of Woodrow Wilson, "I would rather fail in a cause that I know someday will succeed than to triumph in a cause that I know someday will fail." I offer also this poem by Kipling:

Oh veiled and secret Power
Whose paths we seek in vain,
Be with us in our hour
Of overthrow and pain;
That we - by which sure token
We know Thy ways are true -
In spite of being broken
May rise up and build anew,
Stand up and build anew!
We were twenty-five million;
maybe another day we will rise up and build anew!

Viet Nam Setup Is Catastrophic

THEY HAVE DUSTED off the phrase "agonizing reappraisal" at the White House and the State Department. In the highest councils of government it is now being bandied about whenever Vietnam is mentioned. No longer do the policy makers refer to a crisis in that war-torn country. It is now openly conceded that the situation approaches the catastrophic.

With the election over, it is no longer necessary to claim that Secretary of Defense McNamara and Secretary of State Rusk have matters under control. Despite the many reassuring bulletins given to the voters in past weeks, the course of the war in Vietnam has steadily deteriorated.

What the policy makers are beginning to admit — and what President Johnson has known because of first - hand knowledge — is that time has been running out. Today, the last grain of sand has slipped through the neck of the hour glass. Just three months ago, a number of alternatives presented themselves, many of them not costly in American lives and material. Now, the United States can either take over the war against the Communists or it can put its tail between its legs and withdraw. This would amount to surrender.

THE DECISION WILL be President Johnson's and it will be a difficult one. Senator Fulbright, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee and the probable new Secretary of State, is pressing for U.S. withdrawal, a step which will lead to the almost immediate collapse of the SEATO alliance and the loss of most of Southeast Asia. Mr. Fulbright is supported in this by the State Department's "middle echelon," which specializes in counseling surrender whenever we confront the Communist empire.

To pull out now, however, would substantiate the gravest charges made against the Democrats by Senator Goldwater and other Republican critics. But it's worse than that. To send in American troops in full force would raise some serious questions in the House and Senate and in the newspapers. For it will be apparent to all who bother to think that a "victory" policy announced and implemented as late as last August would have prevented the current dilemma.

A brief look at the record indicates the validity of this.

On January 19, 1961, the outgoing President Eisenhower informed the incoming President Kennedy that decisive action in Vietnam was vital. He explained that delay would be costly, that he had help off because he did not want to impose his policies on a new Administration.

VERY LITTLE, however, was done. The only actions taken by the Foreign Service corps in Saigon and the Central Intelligence Agency were directed against the legitimate government of South Vietnam. Americans plotted the coup which overthrew the strong Diem regime and led to the assassination of the Vietnamese President and his brother. Further meddling, with Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge involved deeply, led to the overthrow of the overthrowers, and from that point on the South Vietnamese were paralyzed by the weaknesses of government imposed on them from the outside.

The slowly gathering power of the South Vietnamese was being felt by the Communist Viet Cong guerrillas until the United States helped destroy the Diem regime on the ground that it was "undemocratic" and "corrupt." (That it was winning the war hardly seemed to matter.) The anti-Communist push never regained its momentum.

What was a slight downward incline has become a toboggan slide. Yet until the last day or so, the facts have been withheld from the American people. Secretary McNamara has made a series of grandstanding trips to South Vietnam, generals have shuttled from Saigon to Washington, Mr. Johnson (as Vice President) made an inspection tour, and at every turn, the public has been told that things were on the upturn, the war was being won.

Getting Checkup Often Frightens

HAVE YOU EVER made an appointment with a doctor for a physical checkup and kept it without any qualms, self-questioning and anxiety? If so, you are an unusual human being. For it is true that most of us are a little bit scared when we go in to see our doctor — even though we are apparently well.

It is for this basic reason that many break an appointment with their doctor. You may rationalize. You may have perfect reasons for having to cancel. Nevertheless, if you examine carefully, you will admit you put off the visit simply because you were scared. Scared of what? Scared of learning the truth. Scared of your secret fears, due to those skips; scared that your heart was beginning to fail after all. Scared that the little lump was really cancer. Scared that the indigestion was due to an ulcer; your headaches due to a slowly growing brain tumor.

Fear is the major cause of breaking a medical appointment — or not making one in the first place. Many patients have said to me "I'd rather be kept in the dark if I had heart trouble or cancer. Knowing the truth would kill me."

Others are honest in saying that they are not scared. Their only reason for not seeing a doctor is the expense involved. They say they can't afford it. Another reason is lack of time. Many businessmen say: "I know it makes good sense to have a periodic physical examination. But frankly, I can't take the time." I suppose there are other reasons, but these are the main ones for procrastination in seeing your doctor.

Dr. Steincrohn's leaflet, "Get the Snooze Habit," will be mailed to you on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 15 cents in coin for handling. Address your request to Dr. Steincrohn, in care of this newspaper.

Editor's LAGNIAPPE

With Jack Gates

OUR SUNDAY PRAYER

I need Thee, O Lord, for a curb on my tongue;
When I am tempted to make carping criticisms and cruel judgements,
Keep me from speaking barbed words that hurt,
And in which I find a perverted satisfaction.
Keep me from unkind words and from unkind silences.
Restrain my judgments.
Make my criticisms kind, generous, and constructive.
Make me sweet inside, that I may be gentle with other people,
Gentle in the things I say, kind in what I do.
Create in me that warmth of mercy that shall enable others to find Thy strength for their weakness, Thy peace for their strife,
Thy joy for their sorrow, Thy love for their hatred, Thy compassion for their weakness.
The late Peter Marshall.

NO ROAD BACK

Do you enjoy reading or hearing about experiences that leave an unforgettable impression on life? In so many of them we can see our own short-comings and failures.

Too often, there's no road back for an act or harsh word we might have done or said. And too often we wish seconds afterwards we had thought before we acted.

Omar Khayyam expressed it in an unforgettable way when he said:

The Moving Finger writes;
And having writ, Moves on;
Nor all your piety nor wit shall lure it back,
To cancel half a line,
Nor all your Tears wash out a word of it.

A New York sports writer once illustrated this truth of life in a baseball story about Lou Gehrig, one of the all-time greats. He wrote that "Gehrig came to bat with one out in the ninth inning with the winning Yankee runs on second and third. New York was one run - behind and the hit meant a win. The count on Gehrig went to three balls and two strikes. The third strike came smoking in straight over the middle of the plate and the umpire called strike three for Gehrig hadn't moved his bat. Very slowly Lou turned and spoke to the umpire. At this the crowd went wild, for no one had ever heard Gehrig argue with an umpire. We reporters all piled over the seats and right out onto the field. We swarmed around the umpire, asking him what Gehrig had said to him. The umpire smiled and yelled to Gehrig to come over.

"'Lou,' he said, 'tell the boys what you said to me when I called the third strike on you.'

"Gehrig, looking a little bewildered as he answered, said 'Mister Ump, I only said I'd give ten dollars to have that one back.'"

In writing the story, the sports writer was so impressed that he added this to his story: "There are people all over the world who would give $10 or ten thousand dollars to get just one minute back for the privilege of changing something they said or did in that minute."

But there is no road back.

AIN'T IT SO

For of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: "It might have been."

WARNING TO PARENTS

A survey by the Insider's Newsletter has come up with some interesting information about suicides. According to the report, suicide, the nation's 10th highest killer, is also second only to accidents as cause of death among U. S. college students and the rate among depressed adolescents is on the increase.

Dr. Leif Braaten of Cornell University says his new study of college student suicides can also be applied to high school and elementary students as well.

Young people, most frequently those with high IQs, have a desire to destroy themselves because they no longer can tolerate the discrepancy between how they appear to themselves and how they would like to be, Braaten said.

Parents and teachers, he added, should be on the lookout for trouble if a normally well - behaved youngster suddenly has tempers tantrums and displays delinquent behavior or when the usually bright, alert child becomes dull and apathetic.

"Even a student who is intellectualizing about suicide should be carefully assessed," Braaten warned.

OUR REST

Beyond the last horizon's rim,
Beyond adventure's farthest quest,
Somewhere they rise, serene and dim,
The happy, happy Hills of Rest. — A. B. Paine.

CRITICISM'S ART

When you criticize, what system do you use? The late Will Rogers once listed these pointers for constructive criticism:

1. Criticize the person in private rather than in public where others get the benefit of his reactions.

2. Criticize him with a smile on your face rather than a frown. A frown reveals anger or disgust and can arouse animosity.

3. Before criticizing, try a bit of praise for something he has done well.

4. Criticize by appealing to his self - interest. If done well, this is easy and effective.

5. Criticize him in a constructive way, rather than by trying to ruin the good in him. Support his ego if possible.

6. And after you have said what seems proper to help him, pat him on the back and leave in a good humor, not in anger or scorn.

Next time try this formula.

THE FUNNY SIDE

A WOMAN we know thinks she has proved that kissing spreads the common cold. At least, she hasn't had one now for 15 years.

WHEN IT takes three or four - digit numbers to identify you, don't you sort of envy the guy who is known as just plain Public Enemy No. 1?

It's SAID women wouldn't support a woman for president. In politics as at home, they prefer to set policy and delegate the work to the man.

ODD MEN OUT

Rumors making the rounds in Washington is that with the election over, several governments are planning to quietly shift some personnel from their Washington embassies in response to the prevailing mood in the capital since the Jenkins affair. The men involved have histories as homosexuals and although their governments don't consider them security risks —homosexuality in the countries they represent is not considered enough of a taboo to make them liable to blackmail — their presence in Washington at this time has been judged unpropitious and they will be going to embassies elsewhere. The shifts were delayed until after the election to avoid any hasty conclusions during the recent campaign.

TAXES—The marvel of all history is the patience with which men and women submit to burdens unnecessarily laid upon them by their governments — Late Sen. W. H. Borah.

TEACHERS' PAY

Note to legislators and school board members — One source of funds for the proposed school teacher pay increase might be found by revamping expenditures on school lunches and transportation.

The Public Affairs Research Council points out that among the important reasons why Louisiana devotes a relatively small percentage of its school operating budget to teachers' salaries is its generous support of the lunch and transportation programs. Expenditure figures show that Louisiana supports the school lunch program to an extent unequalled in any other state, and that its support of school transportation takes a larger share of the school budget than is the case in most other states.

Figures show that Louisiana spent 9.8 per cent of its total operating budget in 1962-63 for the school lunch program. Unless other states have greatly increased their spending for the program since 1960, this state probably still leads the nation in such spending. The national average is 3.1.

At the same time, figures show the state spends about 7 per cent of its public school operating budget for pupil transportation, while the national average is 3.9 per cent.

If expenditures were cut down in these two categories to near the national average, it would be interesting to see how much money could be saved.

TWIN CITIES WEEK IN REVIEW

Education Tops News Headlines

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Education is an abstract concept and, as such, means many things to as many people.

Particularly since Dewey. But forget we said that. Considering the results of the recent election, this may be an inopportune time to offend whatever progressives as linger patiently in our meagre readership.

Instead, join us in this week's lift off the literary launching pad with a few choice quotes on the teaching establishment, all in posthumous tribute to National Education Week, which concluded Saturday.

TYLER

The pithy epigram of genius will suffice to say with brevity what would require of this hack writer many columns of type. Determined after all these years to learn something, however little, in honor of the occasion, here're some of the notable quotables that stuck in our head:

"Education makes people easy to lead, but difficult to drive; easy to govern, but impossible to enslave." You can thank somebody named Lord Brougham for that one, if you want to.

"A ladder to gather fruit from the tree of knowledge, but not the fruit itself." You probably found yourself re-reading that.

A few of the brainstrust we consulted were inclined to facetiousness. To wit:

"The only thing a man is willing to pay for, and hopes he doesn't get."

"A process that has produced a vast population able to read but unable to distinguish what is worth reading." Complaints arising from this comment should be directed to one George M. Trevelyan.

Finally this tandem: "Education is the cheapest defense of nations," and "Education is a form of training which pays, unless you decide to become an educator."

And thus you have been led, without your ever suspecting, to our first item of pure news chronicling for the week. If you think it's the teacher pay raise, you're right.

Though it's hardly news at this juncture, we must preface what we say with the notation that Gov. McKeithen has called a special 20-day session of the Legislature, starting tomorrow, to look real hard at who's to get what and how.

There was talk during the week among some teaching groups about forming sort of a modern-day, employed Coxey's Army for a march on the capital. Holidays were declared in some parishes for the purpose, but to their lasting credit local teachers expressed no interest in such a carnival.

There's a nobility in the term "teacher" that ill applies in mass demonstrations.

In statements in advance of the legislative session, Reps. Lawrence Gibbs and George Wood pledged respectively an "open mind" and a "wait and see" approach. Sen. Jamar Adcock, an administration floor leader, said the governor is offering a good plan, expressing the hope a majority will support it. Gov. McKeithenn of course, has suggested half implementation of a salary schedule recommended by the United Schools Committee.

The local representatives have backed full implementation, and support is undersood to be mounting behind just that, if any fiscal means at all can be found in justification.

A story late in the week pointed out that 1,904 school employees in the parish and city systems will benefit from whatever move is made. That includes 1,124 teachers (661 in the parish, 463 in the city) and 780 classified as "other employees" (supervisors, bus drivers, cafeteria workers, maintenance people, et al), for whom a 10 per cent upgrading is sought.

Scratching our head a little, we realize that the recommended raise of $1,000 per teacher would bring here an additional $1,124,000 in goodie money in teacher pay alone, or $562,000 resulting from half-implementation. Further scratching, and we see well in excess of $100,000 more from the 10 per cent hike. Nothing's sounded so good since we read about that "shower of gold" in the mythology book.

Meanwhile, it was "animal crackers" week for the City of Monroe and the parish police jury, also for fiscal reasons.

A total of $3,600 was added to the city's zoo budget for the year, as Director Kit Beecher and Finance Commissioner H. W. McSherry combined at a council meeting Tuesday to convince Mayor W. L. Howard that the facility couldn't keep within its current budget. The budget for the year so became $38,000. Of course, the growth of the zoo has been tremendous, even in understatement, both in size and from a humanitarian point of view, based on improved animal care. As social director of a frequently-visiting family, we'd be the last to gripe if the budget were doubled.

Another field went to the post Wednesday when officials of the Ouachita Humane Society appeared before the police jury to ask financial help. The report indicated approximately $20,000 is needed to accommodate expenses already incurred, while a figure in the neighorbood of $18,000 would be required to make a reality a planned animal shelter. The matter was turned over to a special committee, headed by Arlan Rawls, and inclusion of the society in the 1965 budget will be a prime consideration. Financing heretofore has been almost entirely through private subscription.

Whether or not you want our opinion (you've read this far, so you probably can endure it), here again we're sympathetic and can think of few better uses for that popularly - scorned though seldom - rejected commodity known as filthy lucre. However, we're a softie. Mention animals and you've got an enlistment.

Continuing in a fish, fowl and beast of the field vein, North Monroe Kiwanians, all this time, were going ahead with plans for their annual turkey shoot Saturday and today at the Selman Field range. (No, mother, they don't shoot turkeys. They shoot at targets and win turkeys.) Hours are from 1 p.m. until dark.

The police jury meeting, by the way, was an eventful one. Jurors set Nov. 30 as the date for a 7 p.m. special session, public specially invited, to set a bond election for financing rural fire protection.

City of Monroe fire trucks will end the practice, Dec. 31, of answering calls outside city limits. Plans are being talked to provide two new fire stations, one east of the river, one west, or to provide four stations, proportionately divided.

The jury also has a special meeting set for Nov. 24 to act on a 1965 budget of approximately $1.5 million, up by about $300,000 from 1964's and with sufficiently increased tax revenue expected to support it. Spending hikes will occur largely in the general fund and road maintenance categories, according to President T. W. Humphries.

Particularly newsy during the week, the jurors further adopted a personnel policy statement, mainly for highway department employees, granting Parish Engineer Herbert I. Collier great sway in the department's operation and listing in black and white a number of sick, leave and holiday benefits.

That earlier reference to a bond election harks to mind another measure of the type waiting in the wings, but about which little has been heard recently — one for a new high school in south Monroe and possibly other things. City School Board members met informally Monday night to study plans for same, and, we believe, developments are forthcoming soon.

The proposed bond election in West Monroe, financial floor under a planned sewage treatment facility, still is in limbo, as best we can tell. Meanwhile, a one-year option on land near Brownsville, site of the oxidation pond (for such would the facility be), continues to run, with something less than six months' sand left in the Big Clock.

But if the sewage deal was floating, even though the bonds weren't, West Monroe aldermen were geared at their meeting Tuesday night for real action, at long last, on the eternally-belabored sale of certain river-front property downtown.

That property, starting at Pine and Commerce and running south some 275 feet, it seems will wind up finally and solely in the bailiwick of a nearby oil mill which has sought for over a year to buy it. The aldermen revoked dedications in the area and had read to them an ordinance declaring the land surplus, though they don't act officially on the last-mentioned angle until their meeting Dec. 8. Minimum price they would consider was listed as $72,000, which, curiously, was the amount formerly offered by the oil mill. If the ordinance passes, of which there is little doubt, the sale probably will be contracted around the first of the year.

Officials also revealed that a $500 payment has been made the I. B. Haynes estate for two acres on Haynes Street, adjacent to Mount Gilead subdivision, with an option to buy within a year for $10,000. The property would be used for relocation of garages and other facilities now occupying the river land.

Moving along logically, we arrive now at a matter of no relation whatever to anything that's been said. This may come as a horrible shock, but Christmas is coming, and regardless of what early publicity and other promotions might lead you to believe, it's coming before Thanksgiving.

Santa's helpers were active on the local front. Monroe's Yule parade has been set for Dec. 12, swinging off at 4:30 p.m. under Jaycee sponsorship, while the West Monroe event is tagged for Dec. 3, starting at 3 p.m.

The World In Focus

Succession In Far East

By John Cale

Transition

WITH UNREST and suspicion smoldering beneath most transfers of power all the way from La Paz, Bolivia to Moscow, in recent days, it was a relief to see a more peaceful succession in Japan early last week.

Ailing Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda had given notice of his intention to step down at the end of the previous week. He recommended Liberal Democrat Eisaku Sato to take his place and the party — which holds a clear majority in the Japanese parliament — sanctioned the nomination Sunday.

IN HIS first news conference after moving up to prime minister Monday, Sato said "Japan's international voice has been too small" in relation to its economic strength and that the maintenance of peace should not be left only to the nuclear powers.

He reiterated his intention to follow a pro-western foreign policy.

He said he would back the controversial U. S. Japan security treaty and allow U. S. nuclear submarines to visit Japanese ports.

SATO DID not elaborate on how Japan would play a greater role in world affairs, but he indicated his government expected to expand trade and cultural ties with Red China.

However, he deplored Peking's detonation of an atomic bomb as "most regrettable" and as a potential threat to world peace.

He said Japan had no plans to give diplomatic recognition to the Peking regime. Japan recognizes Nationalist China.

Anti-Submarine

JAPAN WAS not to be spared its share of unrest, however. The visit of the U. S. nuclear-powered submarine Sea Dragon to Sasebo, only 35 miles from the World War II atomic bomb target Nagasaki, brought out leftist, anti-bomb demonstrators on Thursday.

The Sea Dragon's scheduled arrival brought out an estimated 40,000 demonstrators earlier in the week, who clashed with police at the gates of the U. S. Naval base at Sasebo.

The submarine is nuclear only in the sense that it is fired by an atomic reactor. There are no nuclear missiles or other atomic weapons on board.

Foggy Day

IN LONDON, the fog almost wiped out the slim margin of plurality held by the Labor Party. A Conservative motion of "no confidence" in the new government followed a Labor move to study the nationalizing of steel — a narrow win for the new Prime Minister by a score of 307-301.

About a dozen Labor members of Parliament were stranded in Scotland because of fog. But they made it to London in time to vote. Also it was learned later that the fog kept two Tories stranded in the country and they they didn't get to vote at all.

The Liberal Party minority joined with the Labor group to defeat the motion of "no confidence" by 315-294.

MISS WORLD

But all is not fog and thin margins in Merrie Olde England. Miss United Kingdom, 20, captured the Miss World contest held last week in London Towne. She's former hair stylist Ann Sidney, and she won as Britain's entry in a field of 40 contestants. If election polls mean anything in beauty contests, an Irish bookmaker had this one pretty - well cased. The Belfast forecaster had placed Miss Sidney among six favorites with 14-1 odds to win the crown.

South Vietnam

CIVIL DISORDER and a disastrous flood in South Vietnam made United States efforts to build this area into a free world outpost still more difficult. By the end of last week, an estimated 5,000 persons had died in flood waters swollen by torrential rains.

TO MAKE matters worse Communist Viet Cong guerrillas, capitalizing on the floods that have laid waste to 10 provinces, were reported moving openly from the mountains into the crippled valley villages of central Vietnam by the week's end.

Refugees from the flood told Vietnamese authorities they had been accosted by Viet Cong men and forced to tear up their identity papers. Widespread elimination of the papers would help the Communists to move with comparative freedom through the disrupted region.

SOURCES SAID the refugees disclosed the Viet Cong movements during interviews in government relief compounds in the coastal resort of Nhatrang and at Quinhon Thursday.

Despite the floods, which have reportedly drowned more than 5,000 persons and wrecked communications, students in Saigon, staged new anti-government demonstrations today.

SHOUTING demands for the end of Premier Tran Van Huong's infant civilian government, several hundred students shoved through police ranks and assembled before the central market. About 1,000 persons gathered to shout "down with dictatorship, communism and neutralism."

Italy

COMMUNIST - LED unrest also cropped up in the European Common Market country, Italy, during the early part of the week. The government-owned railway network and other sections of the nation's shaky economy were hit.

Officials of the railroads said only two out of every five workers had answered the call of the General Confederation of Italian Labor for a week of brief intermittent strikes.

But that was enough to halt three out of every four trains during the scattered strike periods.

The Red-led confederation ordered its members to strike for 90 minutes three times a day.

ALL THE railway unions are seeking administrative reforms, but the non-communist unions refused to join the strike and said they were satisfied with action by Italy's Socialist Christian Democrat coalition government.

MORE TROUBLE was ahead in other sectors.

Maritime unions announced a 24 hour strike against Italy's state-owned shipping companies in a pension contract dispute.

Cold Turkey

ALTHOUGH THE election post mortems are for the most part "cold turkey" in the department of new developments, there was a significant statement last week from former GOP presidential candidate Alf M. Landon of Kansas. Landon was caught under another Democratic landslide back in 1936 when his party lost every state to Franklin Roosevelt except Maine and Vermont.

Even now, as owner of three radio stations in Topeka and various oil interests, Landon still follows the nation's political patterns. He told newsmen after the election that the GOP was hurting itself by breast-beatings and recriminations.

HE SAID Senator Goldwater would probably remain titular head of the party and that Dean Burch would probably remain its national chairman "until the next presidential nominee names his choice, unless he resigns voluntarily."

He added:

"ALL THIS fussing and feuding is pouring vinegar on a wound instead of oil on troubled waters.

"That does not mean that I agree with Senator Goldwater's policies or that his policies will control the party."

Exit For Excise?

REMEMBER THOSE high-percentage federal taxes that were put into effect during World War II? They've been collected at the time of purchase on handbags, toilet articles and a host of other items for so long that they seemed to be a necessary evil associated with so-called "non-essential" spending.

Well, President Johnson and his secretary of the Treasury, Douglas Dillon, thumbed through excise taxes Wednesday with intentions of cutting them next year.

The reduction the President plans to recommend to the new Congress would fulfill a promise he made during the election campaign.

WITH DILLON and Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges, Johnson wound up the first of a series of Cabinet-level conferences to give him a sweeping post election look at domestic and foreign problems and policies. Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara were in Tuesday.

While Johnson has hopes of holding his new budget under $100 billion, the amount and timing of a tax cut would affect the size of the federal deficit. For the present fiscal year ending next June 30, the deficit now is estimated at $5.7 billion.

WIPING OUT all excise taxes — they apply to such things as automobiles, tires, phone calls, luggage, cosmetics, jewelry — would cost almost $15 billion in revenue. It also would result in a hefty boost in the deficit — of a size to preclude anything but selective slicing of the excises.

Thus the expectation is that items which figure in everyday purchases at the stores, such as cosmetics and wallets, would be at the top of the list for reductions or elimination.

Mexican Visitor

LATER IN the week, President Johnson and the president-elect of Mexico held talks pledged to eliminate poverty and disease in the Western Hemisphere.

Johnson and President-elect Gustavo Diaz Ordaz were expected to include Cuba in their discussion, made no mention of the thorny topic in their first meeting.

DIAZ-ORDAZ

Johnson greeted Diaz Ordaz with a warm "abrazo" embrace on his arrival at the LBJ Ranch and one of the now famous barbecues.

U.S. SECRETARY of State Dean Rusk said two days ago he believed the subject of Mexican-Cuban relations would come up before Diaz Ordaz returns to Mexico.

Mexico now is the only nation in Latin America that still maintains diplomatic relations with Cuba. Her position has been that the choice of government is a job for the people of the country and to cut off diplomatic relations is tantamount to interfering in the other government's internal affairs.

Allied Problems

WHILE THE new Washington administration was looking for ways to cut taxes, the new British government was announcing stiff, new income and gasoline taxes designed to cut purchases of foreign goods by leaving the public with less money to spend.

As such economic differences highlighted one end of the picture, free world leaders were equally concerned with ways and means to defend militarily the right to be different.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk conferred with Netherlands and Belgian leaders and was scheduled to attend a conference of NATO foreign ministers in Paris in December.

VON HASSEL

West German Defense Minister Kai-Uwe Von Hassel was in Washington talking with Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and other officials about the nuclear force issue and other defense problems.

VON HASSEL said France has not torpedoed the proposed NATO nuclear fleet and he expressed the hope that Britain will join in developing it.

Von Hassel arrived in Washington to review the West German 1965 and 1966 program of purchasing military hardware in the United States. He reportedly is ready to buy three destroyers.

Von Hassel was questioned by newsmen about strong and unexpected French criticism of the U.S. proposed fleet, or Multilateral Nuclear Force as it is called.

Asked whether he thought the French have "torpedoed" the project, Von Hassel said he did not think so.

RUSK

AND THE French, he said, "have always shown a certain degree of understanding" of Germany's desire to participate in the fleet.

There is no change in the German desire to join in forming the fleet Von Hassel emphasized. And of British hopes of changing its makeup, he said:

"We want to study the British plan in detail, and we want to do our best to have the British in the MLF."

State Level

WITH THE rest of the world caught up in crisis, political division, natural catastrophe and the age-old question: "to tax or not to tax?" — the Louisiana Legislature will probably face a measure of all these when it convenes in special session tomorrow.

GOVERNOR John J. McKeithen summoned his legislative floor leaders to a morning conference Friday on the administration's plans in the upcoming special session.

The legislature convenes at noon Monday for a 20-day emergency session on the teacher pay raise crisis.

The big problem facing the administration is raising additional money to give teachers and other educational personnel a partial pay raise.

TEACHERS ARE demanding full implementation of the $47.9 million pay raise package backed by the United School Committee. But the administration has said it can not meet the teacher demands fully because it does not have enough money.

The Louisiana School Boards Association threw its support Thursday to a one cent sales tax increase as a means for financing the full schedule.

Some legislators also have voiced support for a sales tax hike to give teachers what they want.

MEANWHILE, the Louisiana Baptist Convention meeting in New Orleans, called attention to reports that some legislators were considering a tax on whiskey and wine to meet teacher pay needs.

The convention passed unanimously a resolution condemning any effort to offer such legislation at the coming session on the grounds that it would place the entire teaching profession in a compromising position.

DR. SCOTT L. Tatum, pastor of the Broadmoor Church, Shreveport, re-elected president of the convention, said there were new areas in which the church may speak out. He called attention to several fields where other denominations were not now initiating themselves.

Still 12:30 P.M., November 22, 1963

As Date Fades, Memory Is Vivid For Many

By SID MOODY

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The sorrowful year has passed and the motorcade has turned the corner and vanished, into the shades of history.

The shots ring only in the heart. The yellow lights of the clock sign atop the brick building are winking another time now.

But for some the hour it signals is still 12:30 p.m. November 22, 1963 — the moment their separate lives collided at that fated crossroads.

Their lives have gone on, but they aren't the same. Lee Harvey Oswald saw to that.

Not the same for the camera hobbyist who must steel himself to look through the eye of a zoom lens where once he saw sudden blood. Not for the widow misty with grief at the sight of the family station wagon in the driveway — empty. Not for the graying woman fiery and angry in her struggle to clear the name that marks her. Not for the tall, thoughtful man of power who admits his power is no protection against the tremor he feels at a sudden noise, be it only the pop of a burst balloon. Not for the young mother who drives herself with self-doubt as to why she did not see more than she did in the stranger welcomed into her home.

These are the people of the assassination and a year has not healed all their wounds.

Some still mourn. Some hide their sorrow and shock in work. Some the tragedy has touched lightly. Some it has made wealthy — and one of them would gladly trade the wealth for her loss. Others look for riches. One crouches on the floor and listens for voices none else can hear. Another fears a mysterious assassin none can explain.

They are as varied as they ever were — governor and schoolboy, housewife and elegant beauty of the world. But now, peculiarly, they can trace a kinship through the blood of a fallen president. They tell their stories:

Abraham Zapruder, balding, emotional clothing merchant, happy to be out of New York's harried garment district and working in a loft next to the Texas School Book Depository. He walked out into the noonday sun to see the President and, at his secretary's urging, had brought his camera. Zapruder had been taking movies of his children for 25 years and when the presidential limousine came into the viewfinder of his zoom lens he began taking pictures reflexively, pictures that would never die.

"I heard the shot and saw the President grab his heart and lean over towards Jacqueline. I thought he was making believe saying 'Oh, he got me' but then I thought, 'No, a president wouldn't be joking.' Then another shot broke his head open. I started yelling 'They killed him, they killed him.' But I kept on taking pictures until the limousine disappeared, still aiming through the viewfinder."

Zapruder went back to the office kicking at desks in a mixture of grief and disbelief. Months later when he saw the pictures he had sold to a magazine he was too stricken to talk.

Only now has he agreed to talk to a newsman. When he was through, his eyes were moist.

He has a new camera now. The manufacturer took the old one for its archives. He was glad to see it go.

"I don't shoot as many pictures as I did. When I pick up the camera and put it next to my eye it's tough. It's taken a little starch out of me."

When he thinks about the street outside, where it happened, he feels a cramp, "like a cramp in my heart."

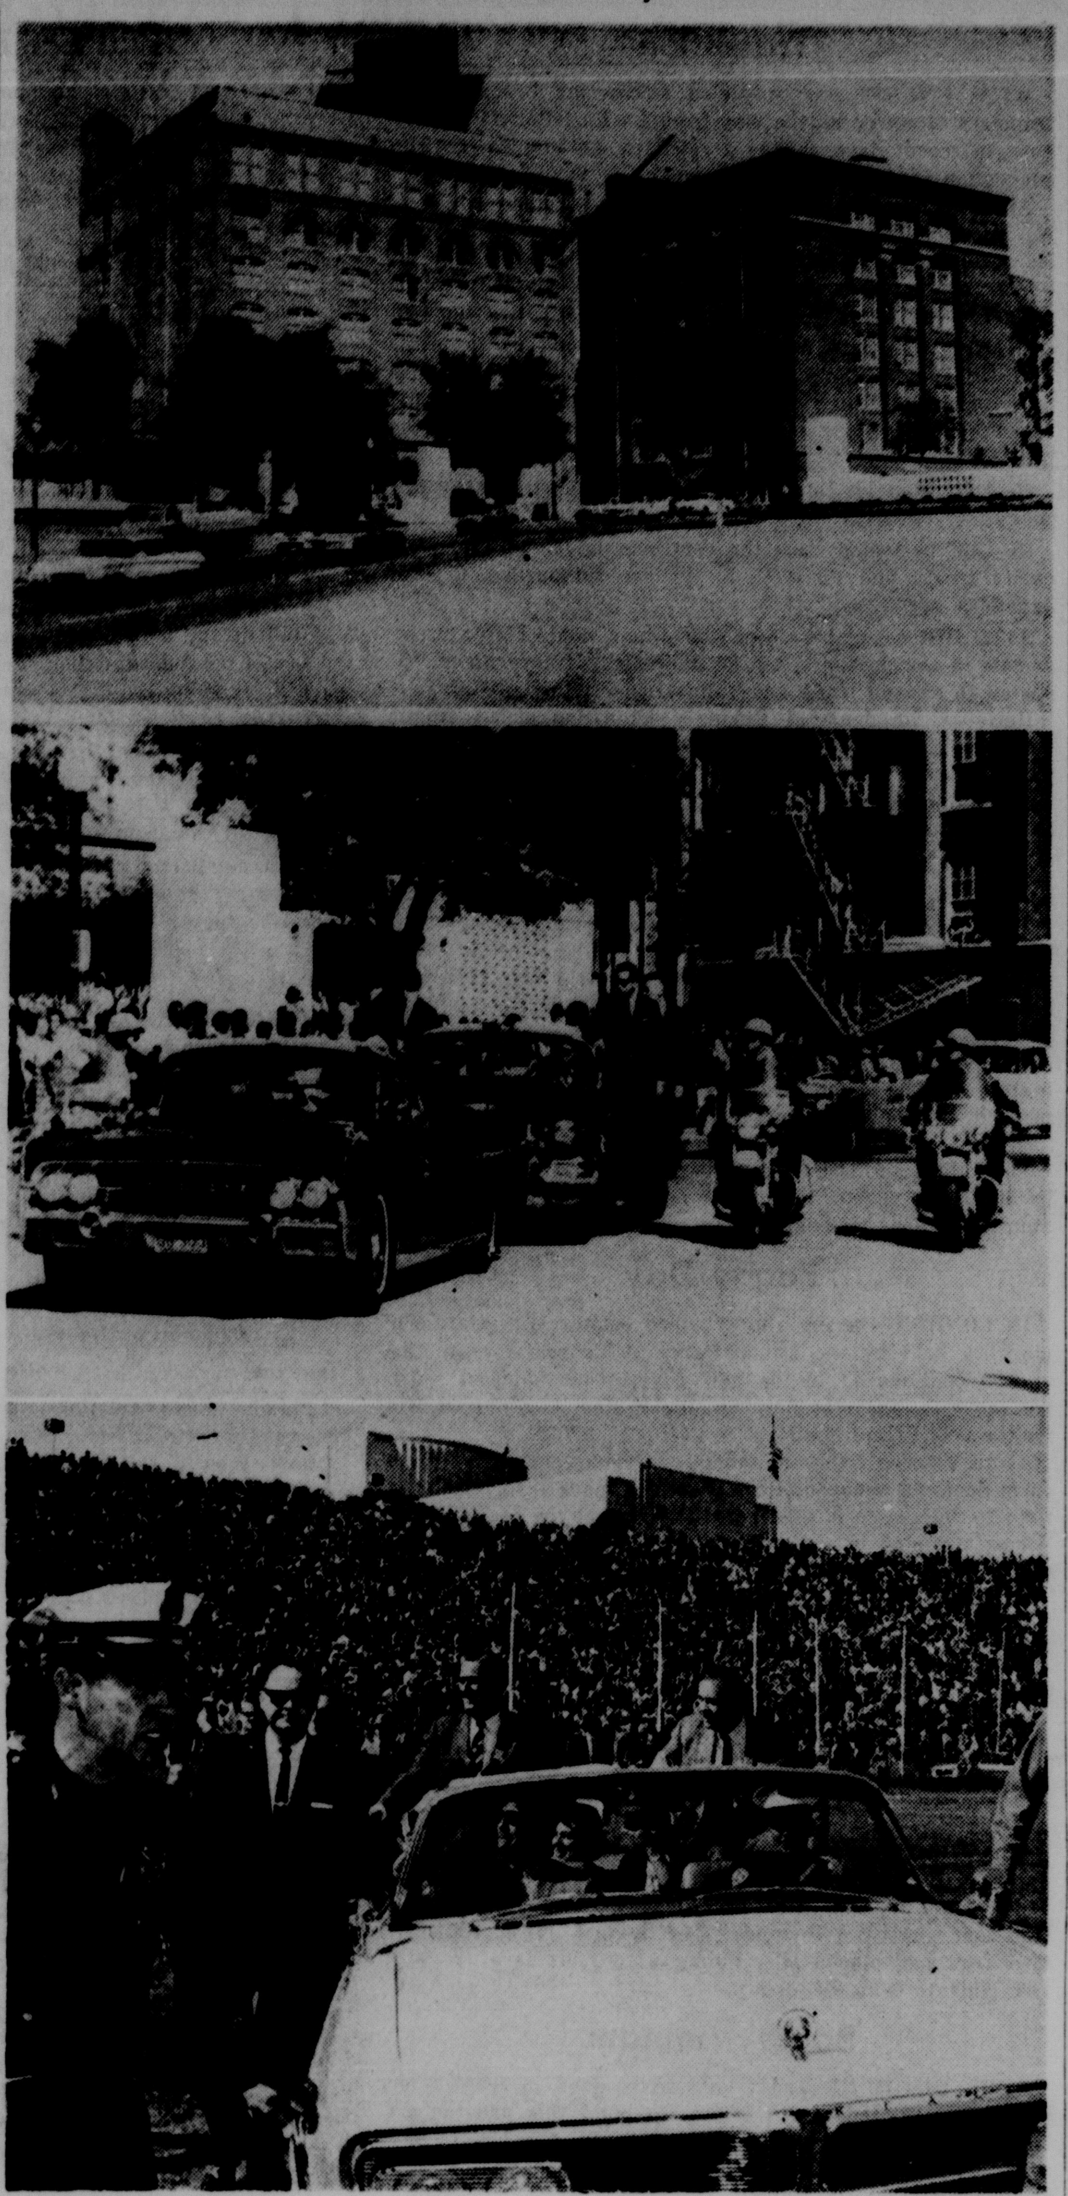
Jacqueline Kennedy and Marina Oswald are from different worlds, the regal patrician who had everything, the humble Russian girl who had nothing. Their only bond is the bloody mayhem that made them both widows.

For Jacqueline Kennedy it has been a year of mourning. She lives in a Manhattan apartment, takes walks in Central Park with her children, is rarely mentioned in the headlines she once dominated, and then only indirectly. She refuses interviews. Her thoughts are her own. The brilliance of her life as First Lady has been put away, like a treasured memento.

For Marina, however, life is a Cinderella dream compared to the cheap apartments and beatings she knew a year ago. She lives in a modern three-bedroom brick house in a Dallas suburb. It is air conditioned, has modern appliances including the washing machine Lee Harvey Oswald had promised her the night before he shot John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

She is enjoying a life her saturnine husband denied her. She wears lipstick, frets over her hairdo like any 22-year-old, buys stylish clothes from the famous Neiman-Marcus store, likes beer and the cigarettes her husband once slapped her for smoking. She has periodic dates at the Music Box, a dimly lit private club near downtown Dallas that offers drinks and dance music and the gaiety of fun-seeking young people.

She will chat, in passable English, about how she likes life in Texas and about her two blonde daughters on whom she dotes. She will not discuss Lee or the assassination although she has said she loved him, a man who somehow changed from the one she married.



CARS TURN THE curve in Dallas, Tex., in top photos, where a year ago, on Nov. 22, 1963, President John F. Kennedy met death from an assassin's bullet. An arrow points to the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository from which three shots — one fatal — were fired, by Lee Harvey Oswald according to the Warren Commission Report. In the front car in middle photo the white gloved hand of Jacqueline Kennedy can be seen (background) on her husband's arm as he seems to slump over after being shot. Left of the President's outstretched hand Texas Gov. John Connally, also shot, is seen in profile. He seems relaxed, but crowds and motorcades stir upsetting memories for Texas Gov. John B. Connally, in bottom photo, seriously wounded when President Kennedy was assasinated alongside him. Here Gov. Connally (left) standing in car,) while campaigning for reelection, rides in another motorcade in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas before a recent football game. Also in the well-guarded car are Gov. Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma (standing right) and the governors' wives (Mrs. Connally at left.) (AP Newsfeatures Photos)

She lives comfortably but not lavishly on the $100,000 she received from donations and magazines. She stands to make another $50,000 or so on a book being written by Priscilla Johnson, one of two American newswomen who interviewed Lee Harvey Oswald in the Soviet Union.

She is not unaware of her monetary potential. She became furious at a Dallas newsman for releasing her husband's Russian diary. She could have made $100,000 from it if she had sold it instead of the fraction of what she did receive.

"I have two children to look out for," she told one man. "I must make a little money."

She paid $12,500 to break an exclusive 10-year contract she had signed with her first advisers. She later broke with a respected Dallas lawyer who had been managing her affairs and has now entrusted the job to Declan Ford, a geologist, and his Russian-born wife.

Amos Lee Euins, 16, schoolboy who went with friends to the end of the motorcade route because he thought they could get a better view than in the crowds downtown. He saw the president fine. He also saw a rifle being withdrawn from the sixth floor of the depository.

Ever since, the phone has been ringing at the Euins home. Often it is a man with a heavy voice saying, "Amos better be careful with what he says. I have a complete copy of what he told police."

"I got a phone call just last week," said Amos's mother, Eva, 40. "Twenty minutes later he called back. It sounded like the same heavy voice. I don't thing it's a prank 'cuz no grown man is going to play that much. It makes me uneasy, it really does."

The Euins told police, but didn't ask for protection and none was offered. There have been a lot of crank calls to figures in the assassination. At the Euins home a light burns on the front and back porches all night.

Amos doesn't usually take the bus to school. Members of the family take him by car. He isn't allowed to roam too far alone. Amos does not appear concerned over the calls.

"But you know children," said his mother. "They can't see as far down the line as grownups. When you get worried about something, the first thing you think about is crawling in a hole and staying out of sight. But you can't do this and stay on this earth."

So the lights still burn all night at the Euins'.

Roy Truly, manager of the depository, slight, kindly, the man who hired Oswald.

"Business has been very good this year. Whether it is due to the publicity, we just don't know. Every one was sort of feeling his way around the first few months but we've been so busy, people have put it out of their minds. There have been a lot of books moved around up there since that day.

"Sometimes if I happen to pass a certain spot I remember Oswald, or if I look out the window to the underpass I get a little grim. But I go on about my business because that's what I have to do."

A. C. Johnson, lanky, shuffling Texan who was Oswald's landlord.

Threatening phone calls warning him "not to talk" got so bad he lost his housekeeper, Earlene Roberts, who was afraid someone might bomb the house. He got an unlisted number and nothing has happened since.

People from all over the country drop by occasionally to see Oswald's room, vacant since the assassination. It's really only a tiny alcove off the dining room, barely big enough for the bed, neatly made, a few cheap wall decorations above the head. Just a bed. Why doesn't he move it out, get rid of it?

"Well, you just got to get used to these things.

"If I'd been smart, I'd have made some money out of this but you don't think about it at the time." He grinned. "the police have all Oswald's bedding still. I wish I could get it back. I might rip it up and sell the pieces. I heard they were selling strips of the Beatle's sheets for $25 each."

Warren Reynolds, young used car salesman, gave chase to Oswald after the shooting of Patrolman J. D. Tippit.

Friendly, leaning against one of his cars in the warm Texas sun, Reynolds looks unmarked until he shows you the scars on his right temple and left jaw, the marks of a .22 bullet that passed through his head. It happened last Jan. 23 in the basement of the little office building on his lot. A gunman who had been lying in wait fired once as Reynolds was about to flick the lights. Reynolds staggered upstairs, the gunman following. The gunman stared at him, then fled. Two witnesses said he seemed to have a dark complexion, and carried a rifle. The only evidence is the bullet.

Reynolds doesn't know if the man will come back. Or even why he came in the first place. "Nothing was stolen. And you don't hold up someone with a rifle."

His house is ringed by floodlights he can turn on in an instant. He bought a dog. He doesn't take walks at night. There is always someone at the lot with him after dark. He worries. About himself. About his family.

"I've never had fights with people. I believe if you treat your customers good they'll treat you good."

The Warren Commission said in its report it could find no evidence Reynolds' shooting had any connection with the assassination of Tippit's murder. But there isn't any concrete evidence at all one way or another except the bullet.

"Any connection? I don't know. That's the worrying thing. I don't know. Nobody knows. It's weird."

Mrs. Tippit, mother of three, widowed by Lee Oswald in his dash to somewhere.

She is rich now. She would rather have her husband.

Just last month the money she has received from people the world over was distributed by the court. Prior to that she had been getting by on her police widow's pension of $225 a month. The court gave Mrs. Tippit a check for $312,916. Another $330,946 was placed in trust for her two boys, 14 and 5, and daughter, 11. Zapruder reportedly gave $25,000 to the fund from money paid for his movies.

In the dining room of her three-bedroom bungalow is a picture of the Kennedy family with an inscription from Mrs. Kennedy:

"There is another bond we share. We must remind our children all the time what brave men their fathers were."

"It's hard to go on when the one you loved and lived for is gone," says Mrs. Tippit. "There's often no point to anything. But I have three of his children whom I love very much and that's a big responsibility. When so many people write that they are thinking and praying for you — well, you know you've got to do your best."

An acquaintance said: "It's nice she got the money and all but she had that inner stuff that made it a foregone conclusion she would raise her family well no matter what."

The future? The mortgage has been paid off by a Philadelphia bank as a gift. The boys have been offered scholarships to Texas A&M. She still has not bought the rug her husband planned to buy last Christmas. "We didn't have one when J.D. was with us. So what's the hurry now?" Maybe the house will be painted and she will buy a new car.

"Everytime I see the old one in the driveway I think J.D. ought to be inside."

In another city, Fort Worth, another mother grieves. And seethes.

In the sitting room of her small two-family house Marguerite Oswald spoke of her battle to redeem her son, adjudged an assassin. Above the sofa where she sat was a reproduction of Whistler's serene painting of his mother.

Mrs. Oswald sat, then stalked the room, then doodled vigorously on a scrap of paper while she talked on about how her son was a "patsy", how the Warren Commission had failed history, how she would never give up until she vindicated her son. She plans a book—"'with beautiful pictures"—on his burial, then a later full-scale book on the whole case.

"I'm doing this to honor my son. Even if he was guilty he should not be forgotten. I know the television and the press will be full of President Kennedy Nov. 22 and not Lee Harvey Oswald. But I'm not going to let him just be buried. He's history just as President Kennedy is.

"Why shouldn't there be as much sympathy for me as the president's family? After all, my son was murdered.

"So he hit his wife? She came over here and started smoking, wearing lipstick, getting Americanized so fast, running around. So he slaps her down. I admire that. It shows character, good upbringing. What man wouldn't do that?

"I am proud Lee Harvey Oswald didn't want to take things from those Russian friends of Marina's. He wanted to support his wife himself. That shows principle. And where did he get that principle? From his mother!

"They say Lee Harvey Oswald threw a toy gun at a sitter when he was little. Well, lah-de-dah, how many little boys don't throw toys around? The commission had to have this environment business to strengthen their evidence.

"I am taking an unpopular position but at least I sleep well. If this is what I must do, I will. If anybody today or tomorrow wanted to do away with me, I would at least know I had spoken and not had my mouth closed as my son's was.

"My evidence would support the fact that there was more than one assassin. I think Lee was a patsy. I think President Kennedy was a victim of people in the State Department. I think we have a good government but there are, as in any business, a few corrupt people in government. Thank God, Lee Oswald had a mother. They didn't bank on her when they planned this. It's frightening to think what would have happened if I had kept quiet like my sons and Marina."

OF ALL THE people suddenly spotlighted by the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, Marina Oswald is the one who seems to enjoy life a year after that fateful Nov. 22. The Russian-born widow of Lee Harvey Oswald, murdered two days after he had become the assassination suspect, is seen at left with her two daughters, June Lee and baby Rachel, in their modern home in Richardson, a suburb of Dallas. A busy mother of young children, Mrs. Ruth Paine at right, pauses sometimes to wonder whether she might have done anything to prevent the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. She wonders whether she should have been more perceptive about Oswald, who spent six weekends in her home in Irving, Tex., where his wife and children lived, and left there that fatal Nov. 22, 1963. Mrs. Paine is seen here recently in her backyard sanding shelves for a cooperative nursery school. (AP Newsfeatures Photos)

She has not seen Marina since last winter, thinks her daughter-in-law may have been brainwashed into accepting the Warren report. Why, she said striding across the floor, didn't the commission give her the courtesy to cross-examine witnesses? Why didn't Marina and her own son, Robert, consult her, "the head of the family," before testifying?

She sat down again. "I do feel I have accomplished a bit in the last 11 months. I'm still in demand by the press and TV which proves I am telling the other side of the story."

"I have had no help from any groups," said Mrs. Oswald "No, I've been all alone. I've done every bit alone."

And there was another woman who knew Lee Harvey Oswald. Or thought she did.

Ruth Paine is 32, tall, bright and troubled. She is troubled because she failed to see any trace of the assassin in the sullen man who was a guest in her home, whose wife she had befriended and sheltered.

She sits in the room where Oswald once sat playing with his children and hers, and wonders if there was anything she might have done, anything.

"Oswald's chances to murder hung on so many thin threads, any one of which might have snapped. Suppose I had not had a birthday party the weekend before the assassination and Marina had not told Lee to stay away? I am left with the speculation whether this tiny matter might have made a difference."

The might have beens: a kinder word or closer look into the blanket where Oswald hid his rifle, perhaps a little more perception of the man who lounged almost wordlessly around her home for six weekends, perhaps a little more adding of two and two of the little foreshadowings.

Ruth Paine now lives with the fact that from her home went the man who killed the President of the United States, the home where her small children were now quietly coloring, where television crews and reporters and authors offering to write her story have swarmed, a home with a pleasant backyard in a middle-class suburb and a home where a great murder is upon it like dust that can never be swept away.

She lives with it well. "My feelings are very much involved but I must live, so for instance I'm also involved in a neighborhood nursery." She wonders what demons drove Lee Oswald and wonders what to give the children for lunch. She warms some coffee and laughs at some of the rumors that she was part of an assassination plot, about the neighbor who thought his house was being bugged because his television went fuzzy every night only to discover it was caused by his turning on his electric blanket, about the schoolboy who interviewed her as part of a class project and said his teacher wanted to know if she believed in God and was a Communist.

"I said I certainly did believe in God and was not a Communist and would rather have people ask than wonder."

To wonder. Did Marina Oswald nag and belittle her husband into a homicidal rage by mocking his dreams of power?

"You could look at it another way. She might have been saying, 'Live in your environment, honey, that's where I like you.' Nagging? She's just over here from Russia and sees all the new houses and washing machines and wants her husband to get her some 599. Well, why not?"

To wonder, Ruth Paine, a young mother mixed up in the business of running a nursery and a woman mixed up in a national tragedy, wonders as the nation does as to why Oswald did it. And her answers are no better — and no worse — than any one else's. She doesn't know.

And the other killer. What of him?

Jack Ruby stares at the walls of his cell, plays dominoes with the guards who constantly watch him, tugs the remaining hairs from his head. He has tried to commit suicide three times by banging his head against a wall, hanging himself with his trousers and jamming his finger into an electric light socket. He asked a psychiatrist to get down on the floor of his cell with him to listen to the screams of the Jews who were being castrated and boiled in oil.

"All of the Jews are being killed because I killed a Communist," says Ruby. He begged one of his lawyers, Joe Tonahill, to kidnap his sister and brothers before they are slaughtered and take them some place where they will be safe.

A psychiatrist who examined him after his trial said he was technically insane and recommended Ruby be committed to a hospital immediately and put under close supervision. His lawyers hope to have his trial appealed by the end of the year.

If Ruby cares he doesn't seem to show it. He would rather talk to Henry Wade, the prosecutor who convicted him to die, than to his own lawyers.

He sits in his cell. His mind possibly gone, his night club closed, then reopened under new management, his beloved dogs he called his children given away. He keeps but two things in his cell: a Bible and a picture of John F. Kennedy.

There were other players in those November days: the professionals, men to whom death is no stranger. A priest. A doctor. A policeman.

The doctors at Parkland Hospital are still there. Dr. Malcolm Perry, who worked over both the President and Lee Oswald, is an assistant professor of surgery and still answers calls to the emergency room. Dr. Charles Carrico is now in his second year as a resident in surgery. They have made their reports, given their testimony. They don't want to talk any more of the assassination.

But one of them said. "It is something you're not likely to forget. When you lose someone, whoever it is, it gives you a jolt. When it is the President, it jolts you particularly. What we did we have done many times in the past. And we will do it many times in the future. It's our work."

Father Oscar Huber, 71, has a photographic memory. He memorizes his sermons. He remembers the first person he gave last rites to years ago. He vividly recalls giving last rites to the President — "I noticed the whiteness of his feet and thought 'There is no blood in this man'" — and he remembers just as vividly a woman lying in the street after an accident in front of his church.

"The assassination doesn't haunt me. Maybe it is because I am a priest. I have seen a lot of people die. Administering to the President was my duty and I did it."

Sgt. Patrick Dean has a memory, too. It is the smoke from Ruby's pistol curling upwards into a ray of sunlight after Ruby shot Oswald. Dean was in charge of security in the basement.

"This was the biggest thing that has ever happened to me. One of the greatest men of the century is assassinated by one of the sorriest and we goofed and let him be killed. Sure, we all still have it on our minds but what are you going to do?"

There was another man shot Nov. 22.

Although Gov. John B. Connally still has trouble extending his right arm, his clasp is firm when he greets you. He appears tan, relaxed, composed.

The crowds make him uneasy. They recall the crowd on another day.

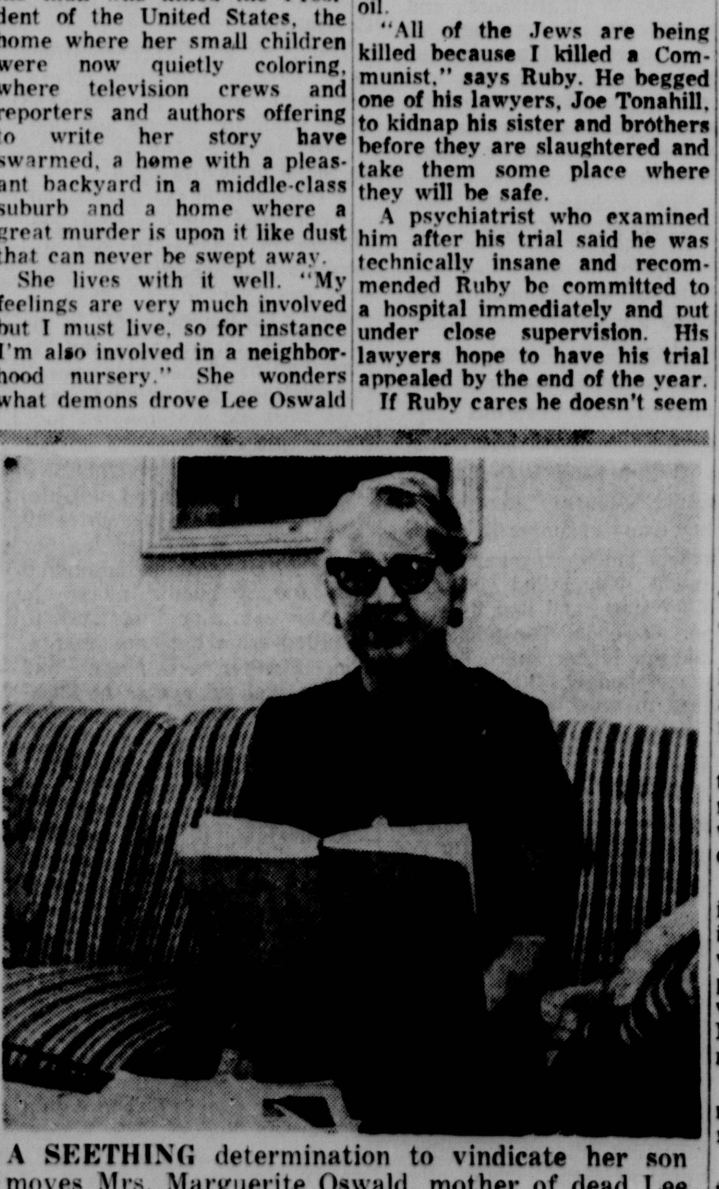
"I am extremely sensitive to loud noises. A car backfiring or a balloon popping. I have a very marked reaction."

He has driven in several motorcades since Nov. 22 and does not like the feeling. He has driven down Elm St. past the book depository a number of times.

"I never go by without reliving the tragedy. But it is nothing you can run from. You develop a mental condition that permits you to think about it without being overwhelmed." Nonetheless he and his wife never talk about that day.

The assassination and his own near death have left other marks on the governor.

"I have a greater realization that you never can be sure when your time is up. You can't be shallow or selfish. I try to devote more conscientiously whatever energy and talents I may have that will have a lasting effect both on my family and the problems of this state."



A SEETHING determination to vindicate her son moves Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, mother of dead Lee Harvey Oswald, to carry on her own investigation of President Kennedy's assassination Nov. 22, 1963. In her small home in Fort Worth, Tex., she holds the Warren Commission Report, which called her son the sole assassin. Above her a calm mother looks away — a print of Whistler's painting of his mother. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

New Story Book On World War 2

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

Many stories have been written about World War II and the men who took part in it. A new story of this type is "The Better Part Of Valor" written by Basil Heatter. It is not an outstanding book, but it will be popular with the many readers who enjoy reliving this experience. A very romantic book is "The Prince of Omeya" by Anthony Fon Eisen. It has it's setting in the Moslem World of the Seventh Century and moves from Arabia, to Northern Africa and finally to Spain. Those who are looking for an escape book, should not miss this one. George Byram is the author of "Tomorrow's Hidden Season," a story of men and horses with a Colorado setting. The author knows the world of which he writes and the book will interest many readers. "Jill" by Philip Larkin is a story of University life in England and of the painful readjustment of a boy from the working class to the new environment in which he found himself. It is not a pleasant book, but one with a social meaning. "The Long Haul" by Rene Puget is a story of flight, which can be compared to the work of Saint-Exupery. It was originally written in French, but has lost nothing in translation. Readers of the James Bond novels, written by Ian Fleming are happy that he wrote one last book, just before his death. The title is "You Only Live Twice." The setting is in Japan and once again we meet Bond's old enemy, Blofeld. A collection of short stories called "The Great Speckled Bird and Other Stories" was written by P. H. Lowrey and has a Southern background. There is much more thinking than action in this book, but it will interest many readers. "The Overseer" by Loys Masson is set on a small island of the coast of Madagascar. It is a romantic novel of a past era and will be popular with many readers.

"The Day of the Bugles" by David Bean takes a man and a village through three wars. This is a good old fashioned novel that is refreshingly human and it will be widely read. A lovely story of the colonial period in Mexico is "The Hands of Cantu" written by Tom Lea. Everyone who loves horses and their training will want to read this book. In addition to the beauty of the language, the book itself is a work of art. This is one we can heartily recommend.

The field of non-fiction also has some interesting titles this week. "The New Library Key" written by Margaret G. Cook is very useful for people who want to know more about how to use a library. "God Here and Now" by Karl Barth is a wonderful collection of sermons. There are four new books in the field of education, "Educational Psychology" by Charles E. Sinner, "The Challenge of the Retarded Child" by Sister Mary Theodore, "Trainable Children" by Julia S. Molloy and "New Curricula" by Robert W. Heath. An interesting new book in the world of astronomy is "Beyond the Solar System" written by Willy Ley. Many requests come from students on how to organize a research paper. A new book which should help them very much is "The Research Paper" written by Lucyle Hook. This book tells how to gather Library material and how to organize and prepare the manuscript.

One of the most readable of modern poets is John Ciardi, whose latest collection is called "Person to Person." It is a delightful volume. Helen McInnes, who has a large following for her stories of international intrigue, has a new play, called "Home Is The Hunter." It is a retelling of the Homeric legend of Ulysses and though there is quite a variation from the original, it is a very fine piece of work. "A Sixpence in her Shoe" is a perfectly delightful book, extolling the joys of being a housewife, written by Phyllis McGinley. Every woman will want to read it. Another delightful book of modern writing is "Previous Convictions" written by Cyril Connolly, the English critic and humorist.

More serious books of literature are also found in the new books of the week, "Poems of John Keats," Selected by Stanley Kunitz is a new edition which will be widely used. "Shakespeare in his Time" by Ivor Brown is another of the many books written for Shakespeare's year. Natwar-Singh is the author of "E. M. Forster; A Tribute" which will be most helpful to students of English literature. "Markings" by Dag Hammarskjold is an excellent portrait of a remarkable man as portrayed in his diary.

St. Nicholas' Pack Full Of Yule Books

By MILES A. SMITH
AP Arts Editor

Would you like to give and receive the blessings of Saint Nicholas in the world of the printed and illustrated page?

This season there is a wealth of Gift Books.

Could you find a pencil and a scratch pad? You can make a Christmas list for relatives and friends. You might even circle a few items that catch your own fancy — and leave it where your own family can take a hint.

Publishers have strained themselves this fall to give all of us some pretty fancy experiences in reading and looking.

It would take more yards of type than we have here to note every book that is being issued for our delectation, but here are the main highlights:

—THE FIELD OF ART—

In the field of art a good many new books deal with individual artists.

The Abrams list includes Caravaggio by Giuseppe de Logu, Marino Marini by Franco Russoli, Pisanello by Enio Sindona, Picasso by Hans C. L. Military and naval history are represented by such items as A Civil War Album, containing watercolors made on the scene by Prince de Joinville (Atheneum). Heavily pictorial are Great Military Battles, edited by Cyril Falls (Macmillan), the naval story Clear For Action: 1898-1964, by Foster Hailey and Milton Lancelot (Duell, Sloan) and The American Heritage History of World War I, with text by S. L. A. A. Marshall (Simon & Schuster), in which battle maps are carefully done.

There also is Russia At War by Alexander Werth (Dutton), an account of Russian participation in World War II.

—SCIENCE AND NATURAL HISTORY —

The science books include several on astronomy. There are The Flammarion Book of Astronomy, the first English language edition of this large volume (Simon & Schuster), as well as Atlas of the Moon by Vincent de Calletay (St. Martin's).

Natural history is well represented. The general titles include Audobon's Wildlife by Edwin Way Teale (Viking); Man and Beast, a Visual History, by Jacques Boudet (Golden Press) and Europe, a Natural History, by Kai Curry-Lindahl (Random).

Bird - watchers may be interested in these titles: A New Dictionary of Birds, edited by Landsborough Thomson (McGraw); Birds of Prey of the World by Mary Louise Grossman and John Hamlet (Crown) and The World of Birds by Roger Tory Peterson (Double-

—THE WORLD OF HOBBIES—

When we get into the subject of hobbies and collecting, there are plenty of new books which appeal primarily to male readers.

For example, The Collection of Guns, edited by James E. Serven (Stackpole); Arms and Armor by Bruno Thomas and others (McGraw), and Encyclopedia of Firearms, edited by Harold L. Peterson (Dutton).

Or consider The Complete Book of Model Railroading by David Sutton (Prentice-Hall), The Macmillan Book of Boating by William N. Wallace; The History of Thoroughbred Racing in America from Prentice-Hall; The Pictorial History of The America's Cup by Robert W. Carrick and George Calvert Simmons (Viking) or The Illustrated History of Ships and Boats by Lionel Casson (Doubleday).

For the gardening tribe two of the new books are from Abrams — Gardens Around the World by Elizabeth Schuler, and The English Garden, by Edward Hyams.

Musketeer, Real One, Exciting

D'ARTAGNAN: THE ULTIMATE MUSKETEER, by Geoffrey F. Hall and Joan Sanders (Houghton Mifflin $3.95): An assembly of the known facts about the principal character of Alexandre Dumas' "Musketeer" cycle, a real person whose experiences were nearly as exciting as those Dumas invented for him.

His real name was Charles M. de Batz-Castlemore. He followed the example of two older brothers in adopting their mother's maiden name of d'Artagnan, probably for reasons of euphony as much as because her family had a considerably more solid claim to nobility than the de Batz clan.

He was an able soldier, a resourceful spy and a loyal servant of Kings Louis XIII and XIV (and of Jules Cardinal Mazarin, who served as premier under both kings).

A substantial amount of documentary evidence, including official orders and private letters, proves the existence of this remarkable man.

Taft Family Biography Interesting

AN AMERICAN FAMILY THE TAFTS. By Ishbell Ross. New American Library. $6.50.

Name a field of worthwhile endeavor in the United States in the last 100 years and the chances are that a member of Ohio's famed Taft family has been prominent in it.

William Howard Taft became the only man to serve as President and Chief Justice of the United States. Robert A. Taft became so identified with the Grand Old Party that he was known as "Mister Republican." Horace Taft established a famed preparatory school bearing the family name. Helen Taft Manning was dean of Bryan Mawr. Charles P. Taft built the Cincinnati Times-Star into one of the nation's more noted newspapers. Alphonso Taft was twice a cabinet officer and twice an ambassador.

Biographer-historian Ross starts the family chronicle with the arrival of Robert Taft in what is now the United States in the 1670, and traces the family through mid-1964, when the senatorial candidacy of Robert A. Taft Jr. and the decision of Charles P. Taft to support Lyndon B. Johnson for President put Tafts in the headlines again.

The fact that she started with the first rather than the most famous of the Tafts makes for slow reading at times in the early part of the 450-page volume, but the author inserts enough anecdotes and other colorful matter to keep things moving at a fairly good pace.

CHURCH SERVICE HEAD

Born To Wealth, Friend Of Needy

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

A tall, white-haired man, born to wealth, today heads an enterprise dedicated to giving away money and goods — on a large scale — to impoverished people around the earth.

"We're up against an insuperable job," says Sidney D. Gamble, president of Church World Service and chairman of its board of managers. "We can only scratch the surface."

But though the need seems always to exceed the effort, the interdenominational agency has become a far-reaching arm of American compassion. It and Catholic Relief Services form a huge church network of mercy in action.

Altogether they annually distribute about $200 million worth of clothing, medicine, blankets and food, including government-provided surplus grain, to destitute people of many lands.

Besides the materials, doctors, builders, farm specialists and other technicians are sent to help the needy.

It is a versatile operation, involving such things as resettling masses of refugees, reconstructing villages wrecked by natural disasters, planting trees to stop erosion, and feeding and sheltering victims of earthquake, fire and flood.

"We have to keep flexible enough to be ready for the disasters which are sure to come," Gamble says. "There are always about a dozen of them a year, and three to five major ones somewhere in the world.

"We never quite know what new emergency tomorrow will bring."

For instance, within hours after Haiti was battered by a hurricane last month, the agency sent air shipments of drugs, blankets and survival biscuits from Miami, and had a freighter loading additional foodstuffs and supplies at a Houston center.

WATER PLANT

Many projects are of a more permanent kind. For example, on the Greek island of Symi, whose people were suffering from lack of water, the agency last month completed an unusual solar-powered plant to distill sea water and double their supply.

Gamble, 74, the roving overseer of good works, was there for the plant's dedication. In a sense, he personifies the church program, in that it consists of a generally affluent American Christianity sharing its abundance with the world's poor.

He grew up in a prosperous business family, grandson of the founder of Procter & Gamble Co., Cincinnati, but home and church influences turned his interests from personal fortune to the world's unfortunate.

"It's a good life," he said. "There's satisfaction in doing what we're able to do. But with nearly half the world's people lacking basic necessities, there is always more that needs doing."

BEHIND THE SCENES

Gamble customarily works behind the scenes, seldom gives interviews or public addresses, yet presiding over the planning and fund-raising for an agency serving as relief arm of most of the nation's major Protestant and Orthodox churches.

A Presbyterian layman, he resides in New York, but his concern for others has taken him to far parts of the globe, beginning with a year's sociological research in China after World War I.

A book on his findings, "Peking — A Social Survey," turned attention to harsh conditions there. He has since published three other books on Far Eastern life.

In his early career he taught economics for a year at the University of California. Then came his work in Peking, in association with the Princeton University center there. He later served as research secretary on China for the YMCA's International Committee and for a Chinese-education aid movement.

Long before the churches had organized joint aid for the world's underfed and homeless, Gamble took part in the pioneering groups that led to the present massive program.

"These boys grab you and say, 'Come on and join the committee'," he said. "Gradually, they kicked me upstairs."

He served on the old Chinese Famine Relief Agency, and on church committees for relief in Asia and Europe in the 1920s and 1930s. These were the forerunners of Church World Service, formed in 1946.

It became the relief branch of the National Council of Churches, when the latter was founded in 1950 as a cooperative body of 31 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations with a total of 40 million members.

A member of the board of Church World Service since its inception, Gamble has been its president for a decade. "Experience in the field, and knowing the problems is helpful," he said.

The service has about 200 full-time workers, including 60 representatives overseas. It maintains nine collection centers in this country and a fleet of big red trucks to round up supplies.

Last year, it shipped out about half a billion pounds of food and clothing — the equivalent of about 10,000 freight cars full, and worth about $42 million, two-thirds of it in surplus grain. Catholic Relief Services handled about $150 million worth of commodities.

Both distribute aid without regard to religion, and they have worked in increasingly close relationship. Their annual fall fund drives — the Bishops Thanksgiving Clothing Collection and Church World Service's "Share our Substance" appeals — are promoted jointly.

MY ANSWER

By BILLY GRAHAM

QUESTION: What did Isaiah mean by the "Treasures of darkness?"

H.T.

ANSWER: The word "darkness" usually refers to solitude, separation, or affliction. The human spirit is usually at its best in times of trial. Security and prosperity never develop the soul — they often tend to shrivel our spirits. Study history and you will find that adversity brings out the best in people. A smooth sea never made a skillful mariner, neither does steady prosperity and success qualify us for usefulness and happiness. The martyrs of ancient times, in fortifying their souls against outward adversity, acquired a strength that was superhuman.

This age needs to rediscover the "treasures of darkness;" the art of meditation and solitude. We need to guard against softness and the drift of conformity. The soul's muscles are best conditioned in the gymnasium of discipline.

AMONG PROTESTANTS

Gifts To Church Show Slight Gain

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

That mythical fellow, "the average American Protestant," gave $69.78 to his church last year.

That's about 20 cents a day — less than the price of a pack of cigarettes.

Figures on Protestant giving are compiled annually by the department of stewardship of the National Council of Churches. The 1963 statistics, based on reports from 41 major denominations, were released recently.

The average contribution per member was $69.87, a slight increase over 1962's figure of $68.76.

In fairness to the many church members who give generously, it should be pointed out that the per capita average is dragged down by the inclusion of millions of people who have their names on church rolls, but whose religious commitment does not extend to their pocketbooks.

BETTER SHOWING

As usual, some denominations which emphasize tithing made a far better showing than the average.

Leading the list was the 53,000 - member Free Methodist Church, with a per member contribution of $358.17.

Roman Catholics also were confronted with some statistics that do not betoken great zeal. Father John A. O'Brien, research professor of theology at Notre Dame University, reported that the number of adult converts to the Catholic faith has been declining steadily in the United States for the past five years.

He said a nationwide survey indicates that only one Catholic out of every seven makes any real effort to bring a friend or neighbor into the church. Protestants, he said, are more than twice as active as Catholics in trying to win converts.

MERGER TALKS

Two major Protestant denominations conducted a new round of merger talks in Chicago this week.

Participating were the Disciples of Christ (also known as Christian Churches) and the United Church of Christ. It was their fourth unity "conversation" since 1962.

Both denominations are also involved in the six-way merger negotiation called "the consultation on church union." The larger group includes the Episcopalians, United Presbyterians, Methodists and United Evangelical Brethren.

Ingathering Is Launched By Adventists

The annual Harvest Ingathering drive of the Seventh-day Adventist Church was launched here Saturday night to obtain funds for mission work in 189 countries where the church is represented, it was announced by Elder M. H. Rossier, pastor.

During the drive, members of the church will make a house to house canvass.

SCOPE OF WORK

It was pointed out by church officials that world-wide last year more than 7,200,000 persons received material help from the Adventist health and welfare units.

Members volunteered some 8,200,000 hours to helping needy persons. The church operated 2,762 health and welfare centers. Some 50 medical mission launches were in operation around the world, and more than 3,500,000 patients were treated in 281 Seventh-day Adventist hospitals and clinics.

Big Trend To Church Over Peak

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

For nearly 15 years following the end of World War II, churches had it pretty easy.

They didn't have to go out and search for lost sheep. It was sufficient to throw open the gate of the sheepfold and count them as they poured in.

Nearly everybody, it seemed, was joining a church. Membership figures soared at a rate three times as fast as population growth. Sunday schools were so swamped with children they had to schedule double sessions and hold classes in the hallways.

Some churchmen called it a religious revival. Others said that belonging to a church had become a social asset—a way of meeting people in a new community—or simply a fad.

Perhaps there was some truth to both viewpoints. Anyone who witnessed the church boom close-up could see that there was a lot of superficiality in it. On the other hand, he also could see that many people had come to church sincerely seeking a faith to live by.

APPEARS OVER

Whatever it was—revival or fad—it appears to be over.

People are still joining and attending churches, as they always have and always will.

But it's no longer "the thing to do." Those who have no real interest in religion can not ignore it without fear of being subjected to social ostracization, or even to raised eyebrows.

The waning of the church boom can be seen in membership statistics, which have been increasing in recent years at a rate slightly less than the overall growth in population.

But the most dramatic evidence is a sharp decline in the number of infant baptisms recorded by several major Protestant denominations.

The Methodist magazine for ministers, Christian Advocate, last week published a comprehensive study of baptism statistics conducted by the Rev. Lyle E. Schaller. Here are some of his findings:

In the Methodist Church — the largest Protestant denomination which practices infant baptism—the number of babies baptized declined from 212,799 in 1959 to 163,572 in 1963—a drop of 23 per cent over a four-year period.

During this period, he notes, there was no significant change in the number of babies born in America each year.

DISINTEREST

The Rev. Mr. Schaller says the baptism statistics clearly point to "growing disinterest in the church by many young American parents."

"Perhaps it is not a new attitude, but only a new social climate," he suggests. "Perhaps in the 1950s the degree of disinterest was the same as today, but the pressures of conformity forced many young people to give time and attention to the services, customs and rites of the institutionalized church. Today these pressures appear to have lessened."

The deeper question is whether this is a development to be deplored, or whether in the long run it may lead to a sounder and more genuine religious revival. True religion has always flourished best in the atmosphere of freedom. And subtle social pressures can be as inimical to voluntary choice as government coercion.

COLLEGE PLACE BAPTIST CHURCH

Rapid Development Seen During 20 Year History

Today, College Place Baptist Church, 301 Sherrouse, Monroe, will observe in special services, the 20th anniversary of its founding.

Launched at an organizational meeting November 12, 1944, in the auditorium of the First Baptist Church of Monroe, with a charter membership of 240 persons, it has grown to its present membership of more than 2,100.

Rev. T. L. Hastings, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Monroe, acted as moderator at the organizational meeting. Rev. Hastings suggested that a temporary moderator, treasurer, and clerk be named to supervise the conduct of business of the church until a permanent group of officers could be elected.

TEMPORARY MODERATOR

The temporary moderator, who would serve until a pastor was called, would select locations for church meetings and designate a time for them.

The church elected Dr. T. W. Gayer as acting moderator, S. H. Williams as temporary treasurer, and W. O. Kiger as temporary clerk.

In a meeting on November 16 of that year at Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, assets of the church were listed as one borrowed piano, $700.43 in money, $500 of which was given by the First Baptist Church, and one 75 foot lot on Sherrouse Avenue, given by the First Baptist Church, and valued at $750.

Dr. T. W. Gayer was named as supply pastor. H. L. Morrow, Frank Stevens, S. H. Williams and L. G. Wilkinson were named as deacons, and asked to serve as the pulpit committee also. Stevens was elected as first chairman of the deacons.

On November 23, 1944, the church's building committee recommended purchase of two additional lots on Sherrouse Ave., the erection of a two-story fire proof building that could accommodate a membership of 500. Estimated cost of the building was $51,000. Until a building was completed Sunday services were held at Northeast State College, and Wednesday meetings at Sherrouse School.

In December of that year Rev. C. S. Cadwallader Jr. was called as pastor and Dr. Gayer was assigned to serve as assistant pastor starting January 4, 1945.

ADDITIONAL BUILDING

In 1950, $125,000 in additional building was started on the church plant. In the fall of 1952 the auditorium and new educational wing were completed.

On November 9, 1952, Rev. Cadwallader resigned to serve as a missionary in Guatemala. Dr. G. Earl Guinn, president of Louisiana College, served as interim pastor until the present pastor, the Rev. T. Earl Ogg, was called to start his ministry at College Place in May, 1953.

Rev. Ogg came from the pastorate of the Calvary Baptist Church of Bristol, Tenn. A native of Green County, Tenn., he is a graduate of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, Texas. During his earlier ministry he served in pastorates in Texas, Tennessee, and North Carolina.

He is married and has three children.

In addition to his duties at College Place, he holds many positions with church organizations.

During Rev. Ogg's ministry at College Place church membership has grown from 900 to more than 2,100, and many building improvements have been made.

These include air conditioning the entire church plant, construction of a balcony in the church auditorium, carpeting auditorium, construction of a new wing of the educational building including a new kitchen, addition of a new Baby Building, and purchase of additional property next to the church.

During Rev. Ogg's ministry here, he said that "1,000 have walked the aisle on profession of faith in Christ and 1,099 have presented themselves upon promise of letter, or by statement."

A current report on the church's accomplishments states that, "During these 11 years, the stewardship gifts of College Place Baptist Church have amounted to $1,054,019.87, of which $259,489.79 was given to missions either through the Co-operative Program, or through our designated mission offerings."

The Pastor's Corner

THE PRECIOUS BLOOD OF CHRIST

For the life of the flesh is in the blood . . .

Rev. Ogg, pastor
College Place Baptist Church,
Monroe

Our Bible is a book of blood. If you will turn the pages of God's Word and count you will find that blood is mentioned almost 700 times in the Bible. Starting at the early pages in Genesis and continuing through Revelation there is a crimson line indicating to all of us the importance of the blood.

It is the cord that binds together the whole Bible.

This crimson thread beginning in the third chapter and the fifteenth verse of Genesis. It runs through type and ceremony, shadow and symbol, sacrifice and prophecy, till Christ sheds his blood upon Calvary's cross. And as we visualize the redeemed throng in Heaven described so vividly in the book of Revelation, we hear them singing. They are not singing about their goodness, they are not singing about how they kept the law, they are not singing about the church to which they belong and they are not singing about a thousand other things that perhaps they might have, but they are singing about the blood. Revelation 1:5 "And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood."

THOSE WHO DENY

Yet in these days in which we live, designated as extremely modern days, there are those who deny the importance and the necessity of the blood of Jesus or else play it down in their own theology. I say these are critical days and that is one of the reasons for a message such as this for times like these. How our hearts and our minds need to be called closer to the simple fundamentals of our faith. Dr. Eddleman says, "A preacher who preaches the truth as to the blood of Christ is apt to preach the truth on every other doctrine and this truth is pivotal."

Do you recall just a few months ago when a noted magazine was very critical of Billy Graham for what they called "the spearheading of a revival of the narrow and devised creed." They listed the doctrines of this creed. Let me name them for you. (1) The virgin birth of Jesus, (2) The infallibility of the Bible, (3) The physical ressurection of Jesus and the promise of our physical ressurection, (4) The substitutionary blood atonement and the last one, the eminent return of Christ in person. This magazine went on to state that these beliefs were outmoded, defeated and rejected. What they evidently did not know or would not admit was the fact that Southern Baptists have been preaching all these doctrines all these years. They are preaching them today and shall continue to preach them throughout the years to come. And how ironical it must be for them that in this year, just a few weeks ago the total membership of Southern Baptist churches passed all Protestant denominations in this nation of ours. I firmly believe it is because we have been faithful in preaching the unadulterated gospel of Jesus Christ and this is the particular reason for this doctrine this morning. For it is central.

SHED FOR US

This blood of Christ shed for you and for me is important. Because without this shedding of blood the Bible says there is no remission from sin. And Lord I believe with all my heart it was necessary for Christ to come and to live among us and to die, to shed his blood upon Calvary's cross in order that man might come in right relationship with God. The death of Christ is the greatest theme in all the Bible. What you believe about his death, what you believe about the blood that was shed determines your theology, determines your acceptance of God's Word or denial thereof. For every other doctrine that you may discuss and that you may study from the pages of the Bible is connected with the blood atonement. For it is the greatest theme. There is no other way to know God than through Jesus and by his death and by his shed blood. It is decreed that way by God. There is no other way to become a child of God except through the precious blood of Jesus Christ.

ANIMAL STORIES

Seagulls Should Not Taste Suds

NEW YORK (AP) — Trixie, the dog who was given away, is happily back home. Jackie the seagull is nursing a hangover. And a grizzly bear walked away from a man who played a corpse to avoid becoming one.

These were among animal stories in various parts of the country Saturday.

Tom DeCarlo of Brooklyn wrote the happy ending to the Trixie drama when he brought the 2-year-old Dalmatian to the home of Margaret Locurto, also of Brooklyn.

Mrs. Locurto said her two children had not taken care of Trixie and that she gave the dog away to a stranger on the spur of the moment last Monday.

The regrets set in when the children, Rose, 11, and Patricia, 8, wanted to know where Trixie was. The mother told them the pet had been sent to a school that trains dogs for hunting. She said Trixie would be back in two weeks — hoping that somehow the dog would turn up.

DeCarlo said Mrs. Locurto had given the dog to a friend who gave it to DeCarlo. DeCarlo read a news account of Mrs. Locurto's distress and returned the dog a short time later.

Jackie the seagull spotted an almost full beer can in a restaurant parking lot in Brunswick, Ga., and took one sip, and another, and one too many.

Then the seagull tried a running take-off but couldn't get airborne and fell in a heap. Undaunted, the bird took a few more sips and tried again to get aloft. It had no more luck this time.

When last seen the seagull was shuffling south on U.S. Route 17.

Halbert Harvey, 60, was hunting near Whitefish, Mont., when a grizzly bear charged him, spinning his rifle away and knocking him to the ground.

Harvey stayed there as if dead — his face pushed into the hillside. The bear bit and clawed at him, finally walked away.

The hunter suffered scalp, hand and foot wounds that required 50 stitches, but credited his corpse-like pose with saving his life.

A companion Don Siers, found Harvey and aided him to a hospital.

Two other bears, George and Josephine, drew kindly attention in Fresno, Calif.

The bears had outgrown their cage in the Fresno Museum. Donald Barr, museum president, said they might soon have to be "put to sleep."

A "spare the bears" campaign was sparked by a radio station.

Girl Scouts wanted to bang on doors to raise money. A contractor offered to donate concrete to build a new home for the bears. An excavation firm wanted to dig a new home.

"We're sure the bears will be with us for some time," Barr said. "I'm overwhelmed."

Ford Expects More Closing Of Factories

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co., with 59,000 idled by strike or layoff, said Saturday it anticipated additional furloughing Monday and there was a possibility it will be knocked out of automobile production by the weekend.

The when and where of the next layoffs will be determined Monday morning, a Ford spokesman said.

The company blames 34,900 layoffs to strikes by the United Auto Workers union at seven plants, four of them key parts producers for Ford's far-flung automaking complex. The strikes themselves have idled 24,100.

The strikes were called Nov. 6 to support local demands for inclusion in at the plant working agreements which supplement the national contract on which Ford and the UAW agreed Sept. 18.

Originally, the UAW struck nine plants.

Two have since settled, both assembly operations which in no way relieve what the company says is parts starvation.

Unless strikes are ended, Ford said its 90-plant system will be down by next weekend, idling approximately 160,000 hourly rated workers.

With local negotiations apparently stalemated, the company agreed Friday to a union request for a full meeting of their national bargaining teams here Thursday.

Both sides, however, expressed hope prior settlements would make this top-rank session unnecessary.

JAMES M. KING, who will celebrate his 110th birthday at his Winnsboro home today. He is one of Louisiana's oldest citizens, and recalls the Civil War vividly.

110TH BIRTHDAY TODAY

'Uncle Jim' Gives Longevity Formula

By OTIS HASSELL
Correspondent

WINNSBORO — To start off the celebration of his 110th birthday today, James M. (Uncle Jim) King probably the oldest person in Louisiana, plans to have grapefruit, egg, grits, toast and coffee for breakfast.

Uncle Jim gives his personal formula for longevity as "working hard, keeping regular hours and never using tobacco in any form." He still gets up every morning with the rest of the family but usually lays back down after lunch. He eats anything he wants and has been in the hospital only once during his life and that was at the age of 99. Failing eyesight during the past few years has caused almost total blindness but otherwise his health is just about perfect.

The Grand Old Gentleman has lived for 77 years in the same spacious farm home on Winnsboro Route 2, near Fort Necessity. He was born in Independence County, Ark., on Nov. 15, 1854 and came to Franklin Parish in 1870 where he was a farmer and merchant until failing eyesight forced his retirement several years ago.

Uncle Jim first made the headlines in 1950 when at the age of 96 he became the beneficiary of his own life insurance policy and collected the $1,500 proceeds of a contract he had purchased 46 years before. The policy was issued to him in 1904 by the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York. His opportunity to collect the proceeds resulted in the company's practice of offering policyholders who have reached the age of 96 the value of the policy in bulk payment or the option of leaving it with the company where the money would earn interest.

With his pleasant voice and vivid memory Uncle Jim hold friends spellbound as he recalls events all the way from the Civil War up to who won the last election. In recounting one incident about the war he said, "I can't forget how just before the end of the Civil War the Yankee Army overran my father's farm in Arkansas and destroyed everything except the house we lived in — all the buildings, crops, everything; they even drank our dug well dry."

It was in 1885 when King helped a neighbor, John Mason, build the first school building in their Franklin Parish community. They constructed a 14 foot by 16 foot frame building and employed a teacher from the hills to teach a three month term. He was paid $25 a month and of this amount he had to pay $10 a month for board.

In addition to his farm activities Uncle Jim operated a saw mill and did carpenter work. He also operated one of the first cotton gins in the area, which was a portable model and was carried around from farm to farm.

King, along with his brothers John and Mack, built the first Methodist church building in Winnsboro on the spot where the present Methodist church stands today. The site was a pine forest when the King brothers first approached it.

Uncle Jim is a member of the Boeuf Prairie Methodist church at Fort Necessity which is the oldest church in Franklin Parish. The years before his retirement were not only filled with hard work but, in addition, he played an active role in early parish government and civic affairs. He served on the Franklin Parish School Board for 28 years, from Oct. 3, 1896 to Jan. 1, 1925.

He has been awarded a life membership, 50 -year certificate and pin by the Winnsboro Lodge No. 246 F. and A. M. In 1960 Ogden High School recognized him by dedicating their yearbook, the "Tropaeolum" to him for "his tremendous interest in, and many years of service to, the schools of Franklin Parish."

His wife, the former Clara Brinsfield, died in 1928, during the fiftieth year of their marriage. Of the couples 10 children, five are still living. They are Mrs. L. M. Cook and George E. King, who live with their father; Mrs. A. E. Hynum and Mrs. W. H. Price, Route 2, Winnsboro; and Dr. Brinsfield King, Baton Rouge. He also has 15 grandchildren, 19 great - grandchildren and four great - great - grandchildren.

Former Minister Of New Germany Dies Saturday

DARMSTADT, Germany (AP) — Former West German Foreign Minister Heinrich Von Brentano died Saturday. He was 60.

He succumbed after a long ailment that had kept him out of politics since last year. His death was announced by doctors of the Alice Hospital where he had been admitted when his general condition deteriorated Thursday.

Brentano helped shape West Germany's position in world affairs for six years until 1961 when he was replaced as head of the foreign office by Gerhard Schroeder.

After that he became parliamentary leader of the ruling Christian Democratic party in the Bonn Bundestag. His active role in politics ceased in the fall of 1963 when he was stricken with a kidney ailment.

He went on the critical list last December when he suffered a circulatory collapse following throat surgery for removal of a growth and spent several more months in a hospital.

Except for two speeches in a local election campaign recently, he had avoided public appearances. Former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, 88, had been among the prominent visitors at his home.

Von Brentano had been one of Adenauer's staunchest supporters, opposed to all compromise with the Communist East.

A bachelor, Brentano was a chain smoker and a lover of fine arts. His noble family's roots were in Italy. Centuries ago, the Von Brentanos, then merchants, moved to Germany. Clemens Von Brentano, one of Heinrich's ancestors, was a noted German writer of the Romantic period.

Von Brentano was born in Offenbach, near Frankfurt, the son of lawyer-politician Otto Von Brentano, a Reichstag deputy of the Catholic-controlled Centrum party in the Weimar Republic.

An outspoken opponent of Hitlerism, he was arrested several times by the Nazis, the last time in connection with the abortive July 20, 1944 putsch against Hitler.

Following the war, Von Brentano founded the Christian Democratic union in the state of Hesse. His Darmstadt constituency sent him to West Germany's Bundestag, the parliament, in 1949.

In 1955, he took over the foreign ministry from Adenauer who had run it in addition to being chancellor. He traveled frequently in the effort to rebuild relations that had been shattered because of World War II.

Kin Of Dancer Takes Own Life, Coroner Rules

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A man accused of trying to kill his aunt with poisoned coffee while jewelry and cash disappeared from her estate took his own life with sleeping pills before police found him, the coroner's office said Saturday.

"This is terrible," lamented the invalid aunt, Mrs. Vanda Hoff Unger, former wife of orchestra leader Paul Whiteman and a one-time Ziegfield Follies girl.

The body of William J. Cootes, 40, a child psychologist, was found Friday night by a maid in a downtown San Francisco hotel.

A coroner's autopsy showed that he died of an overdose of pills shortly after he checked into the hotel. An empty medicine bottle, a passport and a note giving directions for disposal of the body were found in the room.

Cootes was charged with putting drops of carbon tetrachloride into the coffee and tea of Mrs. Unger during daily visits to her in a convalescent hospital.

The grand jury last Monday indicted Cootes after Mrs. Unger appeared in a wheel chair to testify in secret.

Mrs. Unger has been under treatment in private convalescent hospitals for a liver ailment and arthritis since the summer of 1963.

A nurse at a hospital reported seeing Cootes pour something into his aunt's coffee Aug. 6. An analysis showed the coffee contained carbon tetrachloride.

Cootes, was conservator of Mrs. Unger's estate, vanished from his home after she demanded to know why $28,000 was missing from her estate.

Hotel Locks Up After 50 Years; Demolition Next

CHICAGO (AP) — Only ghosts and watchmen walked the halls of the 46-story Morrison Hotel Saturday night as it closed its doors after 50 years.

Early next year the wreckers will begin the job of demolishing the Morrison, one of the world's tallest hotels, to make way for a new First National Bank building.

Friday night 52 sentimental guests saw the Morrison through its last stand as a downtown hostelry and landmark and headquarters for the Cook County Democratic Committee. Closing time — when all guests were required to be out of their rooms — was 2 p.m. Saturday.

Ezell To Moreau Combination Sparks LSU Win

Southern Mississippi Slides Over Tech Bulldogs, 14 - 7

Scores In Second Down State, 14-10

By JACK GATES
Executive Editor
News—Star—World

BATON ROUGE — Louisiana State, on passes from quarterback Billy Ezell to end Doug Moreau, scored two touchdowns in the second period, to squeak through for a 14 to 10 victory over Mississippi State here Saturday night.

Ironically, the Tigers rolled almost at will over State except when it counted the most. And aided by three pass interceptions and three fumbles, the Maroons were able to make a game of it until the final whistle. In all, the Tigers had six drives stalled because of miscues.

From the opening gun, it was obvious Mississippi State, at full strength for the first time, came to play football. On the first play from scrimmage and as 68,000 fans looked on in amazement, State's speedy halfback Marcus Rhoden faked toward the center, then swung wide and streaked 76 yards for a touchdown. Justin Canale booted the extra point to give the Maroons a 7 - 0 lead with only 10 seconds gone in the game.

A short time later, they were in position again after recovering a Tiger fumble on the LSU 43. However, the Tiger defense stiffened and Canale missed a field goal from the 31.

Late in the period, the Tigers managed to get a drive started, aided by three Ezell passes to move to the State six as the period ended.

On the opening play of the second period, Ezell hit Moreau in the end zone for the first LSU touchdown, but the lanky end missed the try for the extra point and State still led 7 to 6.

But the next time the Tigers got the ball, they roared goalward again, moving to the Mississippi State five from where Ezell hit Moreau again for a score. This time the Tigers went for two and again Ezell tossed for Moreau for the two point conversion.

After the bruising game, Coach Charlie McClendon asked the Tigers if they wanted to go to a bowl game on January 1. A tremendous roar went up.

While no bowl was mentioned and under SEC rules the Tigers can't accept one until after next Saturday's game with Tulane, it was understood they have a Sugar Bowl bid if they want it, regardless of how the Tigers come out against the Greenies and Florida in a postponed game Dec. 5 here.

The score could easily have been twice what it was in favor of the Tigers, but it apparently was not to be.

Overall, LSU picked up 23 first downs to 10 for State and blitzed the Maroons for 235 yards rushing and 109 yards passing.

Fullback Don Schwab, who fumbled twice in the game, was the Tigers' big gun on the ground, crashing through for 102 yards on 22 carries. Halfback Joe Labruzzo picked up 67 and Ezell 21.

State's Rhoden blasted around and through the LSU line for 108 yards on eight carries, although his big gainer was the 76-yard touchdown dash.

State's final score of the night was a 41 - yard field goal by Canale in the third period, which was set up by a pass interception. That made the score 14 to 10 and that's the way it ended despite the Tigers' desperate efforts to hang more points on the scoreboard.

Ezell, who played all the game, completed 10 of 17 passes for 109 yards, but three were intercepted at crucial periods in the game.

In the first period, and on the second play for the Tigers, Schwab fumbled at his own 43 and State's Bill McGuire recovered.

Later in the period, LSU put together a long drive, aided by a 22 yard dash by Schwab, to move the ball to State's 23. A 15 - yard penalty stalled it and Moreau tried a field goal from the 27 which went wide.

It was on the next series that LSU scored. During the drive Ezell hit on passes twice, one for 14 and the other for 11 yards.

In the second period, Ruffin Rodrigue grabbed off quarterback Don Edward's pass at the LSU 35 and returned it to State's 32 to give LSU another golden opportunity to score after the Tigers had gone ahead 14 to 7.

But fullback Mike Vincent, playing his first game on offense, fumbled at the 25, and McGuire again recovered for the Maroons.

A short time later, the Tigers had the ball again and quickly moved to State's 29. But it was here that another miscue — this time a pass interception by Marvin Carnelius — halted the Tiger drive.

On the opening series in the second half, Labruzzo fumbled at his own 38 and again State recovered. Again it was Cornelius who did the deadly work.

Then on the next series of plays for LSU, the Tigers moved to the midfield mark. From there Ezell tried another pass and this time it was picked off by State's James Carroll at the State 40.

This interception set up the Maroons' field goal — a 41 yarder, after the Tigers had stopped the Bulldogs' drive at the LSU 27.

After the field goal, LSU drove goalward again, moving to Mississippi State's 36. From there, Ezell passed and the only two players in range of the ball were Maroons. Again Carroll picked it off.

State then drove to the Tiger 26, but on three successive plays, the Tiger defense threw State back to the 39. From there a field goal attempt was no good.

As the minutes flowed off the clock, the Tigers marched again, moving to the State 39. Ezell then pegged a perfect pass to Moreau at the five and he dropped it for an incompletion. The drive was set up by an interception by LSU's Charlie Moore.

Ironically, Mississippi State gave the LSU line a working over — probably the worst by anyone this season. It's hardhitting backs picked up 183 yards rushing and 45 yards passing for a total offensive yardage of 228, while the Tigers, had 344.

The Tigers ran for a total of 73 plays during the game to 53 for State and had to punt only twice with both of those coming in the final period.

LISTON FEELS BAD

Cassius Rests Quietly; Fight Planned Vaguely For April

BOSTON (AP) — Cassius Clay was in excellent shape and resting quietly in a hospital Saturday after an operation for a hernia forced postponement of his schedule heavyweight title defense Monday against ex-champ Sonny Liston.

With the champ out of action for six or seven months, the promoters planned vaguely for a new date in Boston next April or May. They estimated they lost $75,000 and the closed TV circuit sponsors figured their red ink "bath" at between $100,000 and $400,000.

Liston, who lost the most of all—a chance to win back the title he lost last Feb. 25 when he sat in his corner at Miami Beach with an injured left shoulder—arranged to return to Denver almost immediately.

"I feel very bad," said Liston at a news conference. "I was ready to go. If it had to happen, I wish it happened earlier instead of waiting until all the hard work was over."

Liston said he didn't think the postponement would have any bad effect on him. He also said he didn't think he would try to take another fight while waiting for Clay to recover.

"No," he said in answer to a question. "I don't plan to visit Clay in the hospital."

Bill Faversham, who manages Clay for a Louisville sponsoring group, said he personally was willing to waive a clause in the contract and permit Liston to take a tuneup bout if he wanted.

"If he couldn't win it easily, he shouldn't be in there anyway," said Faversham.

Both Faversham and Angelo Dundee, the champ's trainer, visited Clay Saturday morning. They reported him in fine spirits.

"Most of the time we were there he was worrying about how his camp people would get home," said Faversham. "He was still under sedation but he was clearly able to appreciate the fact that it was a good thing the injury took place last night instead of in the ring."

"He is resigned to the fact that he won't fight for a while, but is quite satisfied that he is on the way to recovery from this acute condition."

Faversham, said that the same three cooks who always work with Clay had prepared the dinner he ate Friday night.

After the meal, Cassius complained of pains and became nauseated. He was taken to the hospital and underwent an operation late in the evening for an incarcerated hernia.

"He had a very simple diet," said Faversham. "Steak, baked potato, tossed salad. All the food was prepared in his own private kitchen."

Dr. Nathan Shapiro, examining physician for the Massachusetts Boxing Commission who checked Clay at the hospital before the operation, said such hernia attacks happen suddenly about 20 per cent of the time.

Dr. Shapiro had examined Clay thoroughly Monday and said he found absolutely no traces of any hernia then.

The food had absolutely nothing to do with it," said Dr. Shapiro. "He had a hernia. The food could not have caused a hernia. Clay had a herniated muscle in the right groin."

The operation was performed by Dr. William McDermott, a Harvard surgeon.

Dr. Shapiro said Clay should be able to fight within five or six months. Another doctor put the date at seven months.

"This should not incapacitate Clay in any way," said Dr. Shapiro. "He should be stronger and better than ever when he has recovered."

Asked how he felt when he heard the news, Sonny said, "I guess like a father waiting for his first child. I was pacing the floor."

Bill Cherry, attorney for Inter-Continental Sports, Inc., the promoters, said the contract included a six-month disability clause covering illness or injury of either Clay or Liston.

"The only way out of the contract would be for Clay to be flat on his back in the hospital for six months," Cherry said.

Harold Conrad, the publicity director, said the advance sale totalled $275,000 for Boston Garden and box office officials estimated a gate of $400,000.

Frederic Brooks, head of the closed circuit TV firm, Sportsvision, said his firm had no insurance on the fight. He said losses were "between $100,000 and $400,000" but necessarily vague because of doubt about payments due to the telephone company.

"There was no insurance," said Brooks. 'That would be a question of rate. Unfortunately Liston had forced postponements of a fight with Floyd Patterson, scheduled for Miami, due to a knee injury and had trouble with his shoulder that does not make him a desirable risk."

All concerned said they favored returning to Boston, if and when. However, doubt about the exact time of Clay's recovery and other factors may alter those plans.

Missouri Ties Sooners, 14-14, In 4th Quarter

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Missouri drove 87 yards for a fourth quarter touchdown Saturday that gave the Tigers a 14-14 tie with the Oklahoma Sooners. The tie eliminated both teams from the Big Eight Conference title race.

The Missouri touchdown came with 3:45 left to play. Missouri Coach Dan Devine elceted to go for a tying conversion kick rather than a possible victroy with a two-point conversion. Kicking specialist Bill Bates split the uprights.

The Sooners got another chance with 1:17 left when Rick McCurdy recovered a fumble on the Missouri 42-yard line. The Sooners gained to the 22 but Butch Metcal's 39-yard field goal attempt with 13 second left was low and wide.

Missouri scored first on Charlie Brown's nine-yard run in the first quarter after Bill Powell recovered a loose Sooner handoff at that point.

Oklahoma came right back with a 75-yard 10-play scoring drive. Quarterback Bobby Page hit Gordon Brown with a 30-yard pass for the counter.

Oklahoma went ahead in the third quarter on halfback Tom Pannell's 35-yard touchdown pass to Ben Hart.

First 1964 Defeat For Canine Squad

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (Special) — Louisiana Tech met defeat for the first time this season as the University of Southern Mississippi struck for two first half scores and went on to down the Techsters, 14-7 before a crowd of about 12,000.

With the victory the Southerners boosted their record to five wins and three losses, while Tech now boasts an 8-1-o slate. The Mississippians have now beaten the Bulldogs 17 times and lost seven.

The game was a bruising affair with Tech and Southern each getting off numerous drives but having trouble in scoring.

Southern started the first half off in a big way. After Rebel tailback, Herman Nall, hauled the kickoff back to his own 19, Reb fullback Dooney Lippincott took charge and on the first play from scrimmage exploded off right guard shook off several would be tacklers and galloped 78 yards for a TD.

John Laird's boot was true and the Rebs led 7 - 0 with less than a minute having passed in the first quarter.

Then the Bulldogs got their chance and marched from the Canine 27 to the Southern one but Coach Joe Alliets gang couldn't push the ball over on a fourth down try and the Southerners took over.

Tommy Linder was the big runner in the Tech drive picking up 29 stripes, most of which were on crucial third down plays.

Minutes later, Tech put in another bid for the promised land when Jim Stringer intercepted a Victor Purvis pass and brought it to the USM 41. Billy Laird hit Maurice Greer on a seven yard aerial. Several plays later freshman whiz, Richie Golmon went wide to the left for 10. Alden Reeves got eight stripes on two hauls, Golmon hit for six and two plays later Laird threw a strike to Greer for a touchdown. Speedy Campbell's boot was good and the score was 7-7 late i nthe first quarter.

After the ball exchanged hands several times in the second canto, Billy Devrow hauled in a David Lee punt back to the 50. The Rebs under the leadership of quarterback Victor Purvis, marched 50 yards in 12 plays with Purvis hitting Bill Gorney for six points from the 11 yard line. John Laird kicked the PAT and the Rebs led 14 - 7.

In the drive Purvis connected on four passes covering 43 yards to Clyde Dowd, Gorney, and Troy Craft. Lippincott picked up eight yards on the drive.

In the third period, Tech got off a 91 yard drive but a Golmon fumble on the one yard line with Southern recovering put a stop to the march. Southern then drove from its one yard line to the Tech 21 behind the running of Rabbit Brown, Lippincott, and Purvis, but John Laird missed on a 39 yard field goal try.

The fourth quarter was about the same story with two Bulldogs being halted on fourth down plays. USM also got off several good drives but they all fell short.

Golmon was the Tech leading ground gainer with 87 yards on 11 carries. Tommy Linder followed Golmon in the rushing department with 39 yards on nine totes.

For USM Lippincott gained 115 yards on 11 carries. Purvis got 70 yards on 17 attempts.

Tech's Billy Laird was the game's leading passer, completing 15 of 23 attempts for 123 yards. Greer was the leading Tech receiver and game receiver with five catches for 46 yards and the only Bulldog tally. Campbell caught three Laird passes for 25 yards.

Miscues Give Nittany Lions 28-7 Victory

HOUSTON (AP)—The mighty Penn State Nittany Lions, capitalizing on Houston mistakes and moving behind the workhorse running of fullback Tom Urbanik, over-powered the Cougars, 24-7, Saturday night.

Urbanik, a 215-pound senior from Donora, Pa., carried the ball 18 times in the first three periods and accounted for the Lions' first touchdown.

He made five slashing runs to set up a third-period, 22-yard field goal by Dick Gingrich which gave Penn State a 17-7 lead and put the game out of the Cougars' reach.

Less than two minutes later, with 13:19 remaining in the final quarter, halfback Joe Bargo returned a punt practically unmolested 78 yards for the final tally of the game.

Houston suffered from two intercepted passes in the first half, the second one leading to a touchdown by the Lions.

Penn State went all the way to the end zone the first time out with the ball, thanks to the slashing runs of Urbanik. He plunged over from the one for the touchdown.

It gave the Lions a 14-0 lead which Houston never could overcome.

The Cougars' lone tally came in the second period, narrowing the margin, 14-7.

A plunge from one yard out by sophomore quarterback Bo Burris capped the 12-play, 58-yard drive.

Ohio State Tops Northwestern In Big Ten Battle

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State took a giant stride toward the Western Conference championship and a Rose Bowl bid Saturday as it won its fifth straight in the conference by 10-0 victory over Northwestern.

The game was a dice-players' dream as the seventh-ranked Ohioans parlayed Willard Sander's seventh touchdown and Bob Funk's seventh field goal into their seventh victory of the season.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Statistics of the Northwestern-Ohio State football game:

Sander's score came in the first period on a five-yard plunge ending a 38-yard 11-play drive, and Funk's three-pointer came in the second session. The final half was the most sensational of the game, but produced no scoring.

Defensive halfback Mike Buckner came up with Northwestern's big play as he intercepted a Don Unverferth pass on his six and raced 71 yards to Ohio's 23, where Unverferth caught him. The long run came to naught, however, as Ohio took the ball on downs on the six.

In the final minute Northwestern's defense returned the compliment and stopped Ohio on the six-inch line after Tom Bugel had intercepted a Dave Milam pass and chased it 18 yards back to the 10.

Miss Whitworth, the defending champion, toured the front nine in 37, one over par, with two bogies and a birdie.

Irish Continue To Roll; Defeat Michigan State

NOTRE DAME'S Nick Eddy (47) bursts through the Michigan State line into the clear in the first quarter of action Saturday afternoon. Getting through the line was the first stage of a 65 yard touchdown run for Eddy. The play came shortly after the initial kickoff and contributed to Notre Dame's 12-0 first quarter lead. (AP Wirephoto)

Victory Ends Spartans' Ten Year Reign

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Sophomore Nick Eddy bolted 61 yards for a score in the first minutes

It was the eighth straight victory for the Fighting Irish, headed possibly for their first perfect season and national championship since 1949.

Eddy smashed five yards for a second touchdown and ace quarterback John Huarte figured in the other two, a 13-yard pass to Joe Farrell and a 21-yard dash into the end zone after a fake handoff.

The fifth score came in the fading minutes on a two-yard plunge by Pete Andreotti after an intercepted pass.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Statistics the Michigan State-Notre Dame football game:

Passes	27-12	19-13
Passes intercepted by	2	3
Punts	3-46	2-33
Yards penalized	30	50

Notre Dame's blitzing defense, the best in the country against rushing, allowed one Michigan State score — a 51-yard pass from Steve Juday to Gene Washington in the third period — and three times threw back Spartan drives inside their 20.

Twice in the first half Michigan State, winner of 11 of its 12 games and eight straight against Notre Dame, moved to the 15 only to be stopped. In the fourth period the Spartans smashed 57 yards to the Notre Dame six but could go no farther.

It remained for a uniformed sheriff's deputy to make the best defensive play of the game.

In the fourth period of the nationally televised game, two exuberant spectators jumped onto the field and began playing their own private game of run and tag before a capacity crowd of 59,265.

They cavorted for minutes — dancing and stiff-arming — before officers dragged them from the field. They came back moments later and joined the two teams. It was at this point that the deputy made a flying tackle of one of the interlopers. The crowd cheered wildly.

The triumph was a cherished one for the Irish, who hadn't beaten their bitter rivals from East Lansing, Mich., since 1954.

Before the game, Michigan State Coach Duffy Daugherty boasted "We'll pluck the magic carpet from under that Armenian rug peddler."

The reference was to Ara Parseghian, the former Northwestern coach who took over the reins of a chronically losing Notre Dame team this year. The Irish were 2-7 in 1963.

Two of the day's most spectacular plays were nullified by illegal formation penalties. Both were in the third period.

Eddy ran 78 yards to an apparent touchdown on a duplicate of his first scoring play. Moments later, Clint Jones of Michigan State raced 46 yards to the end zone only to be called back.

USL Takes Upset Victory Over Northwestern Squad

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP)—Southwestern Louisiana, led by the explosive running of halfback Lonnie Price, rallied to defeat Northwestern State 27-17 Saturday.

Price piled up 113 yards in 10 carries and romped for two touchdowns.

It was the fifth straight victory for USL — a feat it hadn't equaled since 1938 — and preserved its slim mathematical chance to tie for the Gulf States Conference crown.

USL is 2-1 in league play. But Louisiana Tech must lose to lowly Northeast Louisiana next week to keep USL in the running.

NSC is 4-4 over-all and 1-3 in the conference.

A homecoming crowd saw NSC pen the scoring in first quarter as Quarterback Donnie Carroll passed 24 yards to halfback Al Dodd.

Jimmy Scott booted a 35-yard field goal to put NSC ahead 10-0 in the second quarter.

USL narrowed the gap to 10-7 when Price dashed 48 yards for a marker.

On the first NSC play after the kickoff, Carroll's pass was intercepted by end Herbie LeBlanc at the 28. Seven plays later USL grabbed the lead when Price barreled across for the final yard.

NSC then drove 63 yards in eight plays with James Aymond going over from the six.

USL marched 85 yards in 12 plays in the third quarter. The touchdown came when Bill Bayard clicked on a 13-yard pass to Chester Gosnell.

Later in the quarter, USL went 39 yards in 10 plays for an insurance TD. O'Neal Weber bulled over from the one.

OVER VANDY, 7-2

Tulane Captures 2nd Win Of Year

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tulane, in Vanderbilt territory only once during the game, converted that opportunity Saturday into a 7-2 victory—its first in the Southeastern Conference since 1961.

Vanderbilt had three scoring chances in the first period but failed to capitalize on them.

A late Vandy drive in the fourth quarter carried the Commodores to within 15 yards of the game-winning touchdown, but Tulane halted the march in the final seconds at the 15.

Halfback Carl Crowder, playing his first game offensively for Tulane since the opener against Texas, scored the winning touchdown for the Green Wave on a one-yard plunge at the end of the third quarter.

The Tulane touchdown came after Vandy's Lance Spalding fumbled at the Commodore 30. Key plays in the short drive were quarterback David East's passes to Jerry Colquette for 12 yards and to Crowder for five.

Vanderbilt's only points — a safety—came in the third quarter when fullback George Smith was tackled in the end zone by Vandy's Joe Graham.

Both teams struggled to generate some sort of offense in the first half but never succeeded.

Vanderbilt recovered a fumble on a Tulane punt reception, blocked a punt and intercepted a pass for three first quarter scoring opportunities. However, Tulane held to force a Commodore field goal attempt that went wide.

Then the Green Wave stopped Vandy at the one and again at the seven.

Vanderbilt led in total offense with 213 yards to Tulane's 131. The Commodores got 13 first downs to Tulane's six.

Weston fell, 50-38, to the Dodson girls. Judy Temple pumped through 35 points for the hosts, while Betty Willett scored all 38 markers for the losers.

Dodson's girls had advanced to the finals with a 52-16 win over Sikes, while Weston dropped Atlanta, 51-33, in the semifinals.

The Dodson boys topped Sikes, 66-39, and Calvin edged Weston, 61-60.

Harvard In 17-9 Ivy League Win

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Harvard scored nine points in 12 seconds on a safety and Wally Grant's 28 yard punt return—the latter with three seconds to play—in a wild 19-7 Ivy League football victory over Brown Saturday.

Paul Barringer had tackled Brown quarterback, Jim Dunda in his own end zone with 15 seconds to go. Brown's Joe Randall elected to punt to get the ball out and Grant dashed down the right sideline for his score, crossing the goal with three seconds left.

Arkansas set the Southwest Conference rushing record by gaining 505 yards against Rice in 1952.

OVER GEORGIA TECH

Frederickson, Auburn Line Combine For 14-7 Victory

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn's ferocious line bottled up Georgia's ball carriers but the Bulldog defense couldn't stop Tucker Frederickson Saturday and the combination gave the Tigers a 14-7 gridiron victory.

Frederickson, the 215 - pound senior, playing his second game at fullback broke loose for a 24-yard touchdown run in the first period and then for three more quarters kept the Bulldogs trying desperately to catch up.

Tom Bryan, the sophomore quarterback who came off the bench a week ago to lead the Tigers to victory over Mississippi State, did his share again Saturday, scoring Auburn's other touchdown and ripping through the Bulldog defense for long gains almost matching those of Frederickson's.

The hard-driving fullback carried the ball 14 times and gained 101 yards against a team which in eight games previously had yielded an average of only 96 yards rushing.

Frederickson played both on offense and defense and was on the bench only 6½ minutes. His performance strengthened Frederickson's hopes of winning the Heisman Trophy awarded annually to the top player from throughout the nation.

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Statistics of the Georgia-Auburn football game:

Punts	8-41	4-48
Fumbles lost	0	3
Yards Penalized	113	80

But as spectacular as he was, and as effective as Bryan proved to be, their efforts might have gone for nothing but for the magnificance of Auburn's line of defense.

Georgia, boasting one of the strongest running attacks in the Southeastern Conference, and with Gov. Carl Sanders looking on, was able to gain only 34 yards in the first half and only 52 yards rushing in the last two quarters.

The tough Tiger defensive platoon robbed the Bulldogs' of a touchdown in the fourth period after a 45-yard pass from quarterback Lynn Hughes to George Patton and three short runs gave Georgia a first down on the Auburn six.

Auburn, leading the SEC in defense, held on downs and took the ball on the two, but on the first play, Auburn quarterback Bryan fumbled and Georgia regained possession on the one - yard line. Quarterback Preston Ridlehuber scored for Georgia from the one.

While Gov. Sanders was watching the game, Alabama's Gov. George Wallace was in Atlanta watching Alabama whip Georgia Tech 24-7.

FUMBLES, BLOCKED KICK

Ole Miss Humbles Tennessee, 30-0

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Alert Mississippi converted three Tennessee fumbles and a blocked kick into touchdowns Saturday and crushed the Volunteers 30-0 before 46,000 homecoming fans.

The Ole Miss victory spoiled Tennessee's slim hopes for a post-season bowl bid and gave the Rebels their sixth straight triumph over the Vols. Mississippi is now 5-3-1 and Tennessee 4-3-1.

After a scoreless first period, Mississippi rolled 66 yards on the running and passing of quarterback Jim Weatherly deep into Tennessee territory, from where Billy Carl Irwin kicked a 30-yard field goal.

Moments later end Roy Heidel pounced on quarterback Art Galiffa's fumble on the Tennessee 13 and the Rebels quickly capitalized on the break for their first TD. Halfback Mike Dennis went in from four yards out, and Irwin converted.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Statistics of the Mississippi-Tennessee football game:

Punts	5-40	6-40

Yards penalized	31	30

Mississippi's second and third touchdowns came in the third and fourth stanzas after alert Rebels had fallen on Vol fumbles twice on Tennessee's 22.

Safety man Bobby Petrella bobbled a Rebel kick at the 22 and again Heidel was Johnny-on-the-spot and grabbed the ball. Five plays produced the touchdown, with Dennis slamming over from the four. Again Irwin converted.

Tackle Joe Dean got the next Vol fumble on Tennessee's 22, and five plays later Weatherly sneaked over from the one. The key play in this march was a 21-yard pass from Weatherly to Dennis, to the Vol one.

Late in the fourth period, end Allen Brown blocked Ron Widby's kick and tackle James Harvey grabbed the ball on the 20 and raced across for Mississippi's fourth six-pointer.

Weatherly and Dennis were the big guns in Mississippi's offense, the former completing 11 of 16 passes for 126 yards and the latter adding 75 yards on the ground and catching five passes for 50 more. Weatherly also got 43 yards rushing.

Tennessee mounted only two drives, and both bogged down just over the mid-field stripe.

Gator Bowl representatives were in the stands for a look at the Vols after their 22-14 triumph over Georgia Tech last Saturday. But they saw an inept performance by Tennessee in which its backs gave up the ball on fumbles, once on an intercepted pass and a blocked kick.

Memphis State Tops Louisville In Homecoming

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Memphis State gave its alumni a happy homecoming Saturday with a 34-0 football victory over Louisville in the college finale for old Crump Stadium.

Four Tigers crossed the goalline — fullback John Wallace Wright twice—and the Cardinals only threatened once in the kind of exhibition the old grads like.

The end of Memphis State's home season closed an era for 30-year-old WPA-built Crump Stadium, which will be replaced by a new 45,000-seat structure next fall.

The bright side of Louisville's losing effort was the 10 passes completed by quarterback Tom Laframboise, giving him a 109 season total and breaking the previous team record of 106, set by Johnny Unitas, now with the Baltimore Colts.

Memphis State scored on a slow steady 70-yard drive after taking the opening kickoff. They hit again after an exchange of kicks with a 51-yard march and drove another 35 yards to score.

The dashing effort of the day was a 40-yard scoring pass from quarterback Billy Fletcher to end Walt Heitzenrather.

Rhome, Twilley Blast Records In Tulsa's Win

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Jerry Rhome, Howard Twilley and Tulsa blasted nine national football records and North Texas State 47-0 in a Missouri Valley Conference game Saturday.

With Sugar Bowl scouts watching, Tulsa's defense throttled the Eagles while Rhome tossed six more records aside. He's broken nearly every individual passing mark now.

Rhome completed 17 of 23 passes for 268 yards and four touchdowns and ran for another 21 yards.

That gave him season records for completions, 185; touchdown passes, 27; yards passing, 2,320, and total offense, 2,541. It also gave him a record 134 completions without an interception and gave him a career passing mark of 4,932 yards.

Twilley caught six passes for 84 yards and two touchdowns to set a national receiving mark of 76 catches. He also booted five conversions for a total of 17 points in this game and 92 for the season, in which he stands to become the first end ever to lead college scoring.

Rhome's passes also gave Tulsa new team season records for most touchdown passes, 30, and most completions, 202.

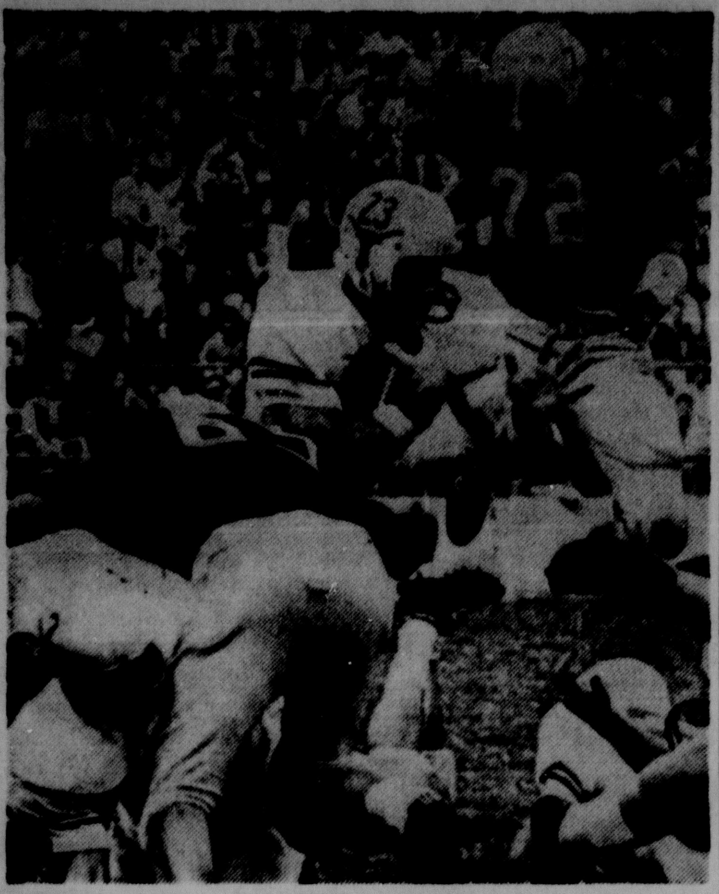
Rice Takes 19-8 Win Over Texas Aggies In SWC

HOUSTON (AP) — Walter McReynolds threw two touchdown passes and helped set up a third score with a 21-yard run Saturday as Rice defeated Texas A&M 19-8 in Southwest Conference football.

The Aggies crossed midfield only three times but their 80-yard scoring surge and a two-point pass cut the Rice lead to 13-8 in the third period and forced the Owls to launch a 67-yard drive. Chuck Latourette climaxed the surge with an eight-yard touchdown run that clinched the victory.



ERNIE KOY (22) Texas back, finds an opening in the Texas Christian line big enough to slip through for a seven yard gain in the first quarter of Saturday's game in Fort Worth. TCU tackle Ronny Nixon (72) leaps for Koy but was unable to stop the drive through tackle. (AP Wirephoto)

Longhorns Take Orange Bowl Bid

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Marvin Kristynik ran and passed Texas to a 28-13 victory over Texas Christian and marched the Longhorns into the Orange Bowl Saturday.

Fifth-ranked Texas, last year the national champion, thus will be playing in its 14th bowl game in 21 years.

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Statistisc of the Texas-Texas Christian football game:

Passes	9-17	10-26
Passes intercepted by	1	2
Punts	3-35	7-40
Fumbles lost	2	1
Yards penalized	66	30

Texas probably will meet undefeated, untied Alabama, the nation's No. 2 team, at Miami—the second time the Longhorns have met the team of Bear Bryant in a bowl game. They played a 3-3 tie in the 1960 Bluebonnet Bowl.

The Longhorns, with Kristynik and mighty fullback Harold Philipp tearing the inept Texas Christian defense to bits, ran their record to 8-1 and hung onto second place in the Southwest Conference.

Krystynik and Phillip each gained 100 yards or more.

Texas still has Texas A&M to play and could tie for the conference title should Arkansas lose its final game to Texas Tech next week. But Arkansas, which defeated SMU, will be the Cotton Bowl team.

Representatives of both the orange and sugar bowl were here to look over texas. It was reported yesterday that Texas Alabama would meet in the Orange Bowl if Texas and Arkansas won.

Kristynik figured in all the Texas touchdowns and scored two of them while Philipp got the other two.

Kristynik ran for 52 yards and Philipp 33 in the first Texas touchdown drive that stretched 94 yards. Texas rolled 83 for its second touchdown in the first period with Kristynik passing for 27 and running for 24.

Texas got two touchdowns in the third period, driving 68 for one with Philipp running for 36 and Kristynik passing for 25.

Rich King Pass Gives Syracuse Last Minute Win

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Quarterback Rich King fired an 18-yard touchdown pass to end Harris Elliot with less than a minute remaining for Syracuse's 20-15 football victory over upset-minded Virginia Tech Saturday.

King, who came off the bench with 1:26 left in the game, moved the Orange 54 yards in five plays for the touchdown. He completed four out of five tosses during the drive.

Until then it looked like Virginia Tech, playing the entire second half without its triple threat quarterback, Bobby Schweikert, would crush any bowl hopes the Orange might have.

Sonny Utz, the Gobblers' 205-pound fullback put VPI in front midway through the final quarter when he powered six yards for a touchdown after setting it up with a 60-yard sprint to the Orange 19.

Schweikert, who suffered an eye injury late in the second period, had given the surprising Techmen a 9-0 first period lead when he scampered into the end zone from the one to cap an 86-yard march.

Syracuse's touchdowns came on a three-yard run by Floyd Little in the second period and a one-yard plunge by fullback Jim Nance in the third.

Virginia Upsets North Carolina In Scoring Duel

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia's Cavaliers wrecked North Carolina's Atlantic Coast Conference football title hopes Saturday by upsetting the Tar Heels 31-27 in a wild scoring duel between rival quarterbacks Bob Davis and Gary Black.

Davis, the sensational Virginia sophomore, scored on runs of three and 15 yards and passed 14 yards to Ed Carrington for a third touchdown as Virginia posted its first ACC victory in two seasons.

He was almost matched, however, by Black. The North Carolina senior directed four touchdown parades and capped three with scoring passes — 27 yards to halfback Ronnie Jackson and 30 and 16 yards to sophomore end Bill Darnall.

J-H Set To Open Cage Year With Minden's Tide

JONESBORO (Special) — The Jonesboro-Hodge Tiger basketball team, defending state AA champions, will open their 1964-65 season with a game at Jonesboro Tuesday, Nov. 17, against the Minden Crimson Tide.

Coach Larry Toms, who was selected as "Coach of the Year" in AA after guiding his charges to a 26-4 record last season, his first at J-H, will have only one regular returning from that "Cinderella" team, which won 19 of its last 20 contests.

Billy Phillips, a 6'3" senior, is the only one of the top six players of the champions to return. Phillips came through in a clutch semi-final game against Baker in the state playoffs last March at Shreveport, scoring 21 points as J-H posted a 55-51 win.

He is a fine shooter, both from inside and outside, and a good playmaker. Toms' main problem here is where to best employ Phillips' services: at guard, forward, or post. He probably will wind up at a guard position.

Jimmie Stewart, a 6'3" senior, is the top jumper on the squad. He was handicapped by an ankle operation last season, but will probably play center. Wayne Horn, a 6'2" transfer from Ruston, has a good shooting eye, and should help the team considerably after he gets some game experience.

Tommy Chandler, a 6'2" junior, is a good jumper and rebounder, and should develop confidence and aggressiveness in competition. Jimmie Robinson, 5'10" senior, has gained two years of experience on the "B" team, and is a real hustler. Mike Watson, 6'0" even, also should give help under the boards.

The team will be considerably strengthened when football season is over by such players as Lowell Mize, Randy Moffett, James Earley, and Leslie Mize. The first three listed could easily break into the starting lineup after they get their "cage legs". Mize and Moffett are rugged competitors, and Earley could be the "sleeper" on the team. He can jump well, and is very aggressive.

Leslie Mize may be a good back-court man, and this is something which Toms feels his club will need most.

Following the game with Minden, Jonesboro-Hodge will compete in the Saline Tournament Nov. 19-21.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—Third-ranked Arkansas valuted into a Cotton Bowl berth and assured itself of a tie for the Southwest Conference title by pulverizing Southern Methodist University 44-0 at homecoming Saturday.

The Razorbacks, with a 9-0 record, can win the conference title outright and finish an unbeaten season by beating Texas Tech in Lubbock, Tex., next Saturday.

SMU crossed the 50 on its first and last possessions but played the rest of its offense in Mustang territory.

Defensive spectaculars led to Arkansas' second half points, with substitutes seeing most of the action for the Razorbacks.

Wingback Jim Lindsey got Arkansas' first two scores on a four-yard pass reception and an eight-yard run. Tailback Bob Burnett plunged a yard for the third touchdown.

Fourth-Rated Nebraska In 27-14 Victory

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska's pint-sized fullback, Frank Solich, scored a go-ahead touchdown on an 89-yard second quarter kickoff return Saturday and the fourth-ranked Cornhuskers protected the margin for a 27-14 Big Eight football victory over Oklahoma State.

The tally, coupled with a 34-yard touchdown later in the same period on a Bob Churchich pass to Harry Wilson, gave Nebraska a 21-7 halftime lead which Oklahoma State reduced by a touchdown in the third period before yielding.

The victory clinched at least a share of the Big Eight crown for unbeaten Nebraska and ran the nation's longest major college victory string to 16 games.

KEEP CHAMPIONSHIP CHANCES ALIVE

Namath, Sloan Lead Tide To 24-7 Win Over Jackets

ATLANTA (AP) — Alabama struck for two touchdowns in the final 1:45 of the first half and then played Georgia Tech off its feet the rest of the way to whip the Yellow Jackets 24-7 and keep alive its chances for a national championship.

The victory was the Tide's ninth straight without a loss this season and it came so easily that a record crowd of 53,505 Tech partisans sat in dead silence most of the time.

The victory came on the arm of quarterback Joe Namath and the fine offensive direction of alternate signal caller Steve Sloan. Namath, who played only when Alabama needed the big yardage, threw for one touchdown and set up another on a 49-yard pass.

This was the final meeting between these two Southern gridiron powers and the Crimson Tide let it be known from the kickoff that it was ready. Coiled and deadly as a rattlesnake, the Tide struck and Georgia Tech wilted under the attack.

ATLANTA (AP) — Statistics of the Alabama-Georgia Tech football game:

First downs	17	14
Rushing yardage	189	155
Passing yardage	169	29
Passes	9-17	4-6
Passes intercepted by	0	0
Punts	3-38	6-37
Fumbles Lost	7	2
Yards penalized	25	5

The Crimson Tide got things rolling by recovering a Bruce Fischer fumble on the 50-yard line with 1:45 to go in the first half. Namath came into the game and missed the first two times he threw the ball, but the third time he laid one right in the arms of David Ray who went to the Tech one before being brought down.

With 1:18 to go, Steve Bowman punched it over from the one and Ray added the extra point to make it 7-0.

Alabama showed it was playing this one for keeps by trying an offside kick which Tech's Tom Ballard fumbled and the Tide's Creed Kilmer recovered. On the next play, Namath hit Ray Ogden on a 45-yard pass to give the Tide first and goal on the Tech five.

On the next play, a Tech lineman battered down a pass, but there was no stopping this aroused group from Alabama. Namath dropped back again and hit Ray in the end zone for the second marker.

Ray added the extra point and with 27 seconds left in the first half Alabama was in command 14-0. It took Alabama only one minute, three seconds to score its two touchdowns.

Tech discovered early that it couldn't run on 'Bama and wanted desperately to throw the ball. But the Tide had the Tech receivers so well recovered and its quarterbacks under so much pressure that the Jackets were helpless.

Alabama moved to a 17-0 lead on a 22-yard field goal with just nine seconds left in the third period. The Tide's final touchdown came with 4:59 to go in the game when Steve Bowman picked up a teammate's fumble on the Tech four and scampered into the end zone.

Georgia Tech, which was going down to its second straight defeat, scored its only touchdown with 21 seconds left to play when quarterback Jerry Priestley hit Giles Smith on a five-yard touchdown play.

The victory was Coach Paul Bryant's 150th in 20 years of coaching.

The game also saw Ray set a national record for scoring by kicking. He kicked three extra points and a field goal to give him 58 points on the strength of his toe, compared with the old record of 55 by kicking.

Roger Staubach Leads Navy By Blue Devils, 27-14

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP)—Roger Staubach, turning in his finest performance in a fabulous football career, ran and passed Navy to a 27-14 victory over Duke Saturday.

The magnificent Middie rolled up 308 yards total offense, bettering by one yard the record of 307 he registered against Michigan last year en route to becoming 1963's college player of the year.

He broke the mark with a nine-yard dash for Navy's final touchdown with only 14 seconds left in the game.

Staubach, both passing from a shutgun formation and dropping back in the T, completed 21 of 30 passes for 217 yards and ran 17 times for 91 yards.

On four occasions he took the Middies into touchdown position on drivers where they failed to score and had to call on Fred Marlin for field goal attempts. Marlin made good on two tries of 21 and 28 yards, but two others were blocked.

John Hankinson Guides Gophers To 14-7 Victory

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — John Hankinson, passing with precision, fired Minnesota to a 14-7 victory over Purdue Saturday, virtually wiping out all hope the Boilermakers harbored for making their first Rose Bow trip.

Hankinson set tow Gopher season passing records, notching eight completions in 15 attemps for 159 yards and two touchdowns.

The Minnesota quarterback cooly bagged the Gophers' winning touchdown with 40 seconds gone in the fourth quarter.

His 43-yard touchdown pass to Kent Kramer came only one minute after Purdue had scored to tie it 7-7 in this grudging battle of hard-knocking Big Ten foes.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Statistics of the Purdue-Minnesota football game:

	Purdue	Minn.
First downs	18	11
Rushing yardage	117	93
Passing yardage	169	159
Passes	13-29	8-15
Passes intercepted by	0	3
Punts	6-33	7-15
Yards penalized	30	84

Earlier, Hankinson passed 31 yards to Ken Last for the other Gopher score.

The defeat dropped Purdue's Big Ten record to 4-2 and left the Boilermakers trailing Ohio State, now 5-0, by 1½ games with one to play. Minnesota also is 4-2 in the Big Ten.

Purdue quarterback Bob Griese was unable to get his passes clicking with star receiver Bob Hadrick out with an injury.

INTERSECTIONAL TILT

Baylor's Bears Defeat Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—Baylor's Bears all but scrapped their touted passing attack, then ran over Kentucky 17-15 Saturday in an intersectional football game.

Led by senior fullback Tom Davies, the Bears struck for two touchdowns, using only one pass in each drive.

Their third period field goal came after Eddie Whidden intercepted a Kentucky pass in Wildcat territory.

Baylor quarterback Terry Southall threw only 11 passes, completing six for 64 yards. The Bears' Roger Marshall hit 2 of 20 for 31 yards.

Meanwhile, Davies and running mates Clint Mitchell and Dick Defee rolled for 216 yards on the ground.

Kentucky, too, used less passing than was expected. The Wildcats moved only 120 yards in the air, more than a third of it in a fourth-period touchdown drive.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—Statistics of the Kentucky-Baylor Football game:

	Baylor	Kentucky
First downs	14	14
Rushing yardage	216	155
Passing Yardage	95	120
Passes	8-21	9-19
Passes intercepted by	2	3
Punts	5-37	5-41
Fumbles	0	1
Penalties	78	96

Baylor drove 85 yards in 13 plays the first time the Bears had the ball and Davies gained 46 yards on eight carries during the drive.

Kentucky got its train in gear near the end of the first period with halfback Rodger Bird as chief engineer. Bird carried on six of nine plays needed to score and accounted for 58 of the 80 yards in the drive, including a 33-yard touchdown sprint.

Both teams made it obvious they had expected passing attacks, and while the lines were sometimes leaky, potential receivers were well covered.

Twice Kentucky tried field goals—once before and once after sophomore Bob Purvis had put Baylor ahead 10-7 with a 40-yard field goal. Kentucky's Rich Tucci missed from the eight in the second period and from the five in the third.

Northern Dancer Picked Horse Of Year In Canada

TORONTO (AP) — Northern Dancer, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, was unanimously named Canada's Horse of the Year Saturday in a poll taken by the Daily Racing Form.

Northern Dancer, owned by the Windfields Farm of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Taylor, was the choice of all 15 thoroughbred racing experts polled. The Canadian-bred son of Nearctic and Natalma was retired to stud last week. He rapped a foreleg in training four months ago.

Michigan Hits Iowa, 34-20, In Big 10 Tilt

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Title-hungry Michigan swept to a 34-20 conquest of Iowa with the help of seven Hawkeye errors Saturday and will battle Ohio State for the Big Ten football championship.

The victory by the sixth-ranked Wolverines was their fifth against one loss in conference play. They finished the season next Saturday against Ohio State, which boosted its Big Ten mark to 5-0 by whipping Northwestern 10-0.

Quarterback Bob Timberlake and fullback Mel Anthony led Michigan, which has not won the conference title since 1950. Timberlake scored on a 14-yard run and tossed a six-yard touchdown pass, and Anthony scored three times of runs of one, one and 10 yards.

But the Wolverines were helped by an erratic Iowa attack which sent the Hawkeyes to their fifth straight defeat and left them in the Big Ten cellar with a 1-5 mark.

Private Ponds Good Solution

With Sam Hanna

Will Offer Shooting

George Franklin has the right idea.

Owner of much land in Richland Parish, George has gone out and built a duck pond that is drawing ducks already during these pre-season days of fall.

Late one afternoon a few days ago, we stood on the levee of George Franklin's pond and watched the ducks pour in by the hundreds just as dark began to fall.

Mallards, teal and woodducks raced across the sky in a mad scramble for the Franklin pond. It was a scene that should be seen by all sportsmen and landowners interested in the future of waterfowl.

Northeast Louisiana is not safe by any means when it comes to the subject of waterfowl. We just don't have the offerings of South Louisiana, for instance, for waterfowl.

And we haven't developed facilities like Arkansas has for ducks.

It's true that we have Wham Brake, which is not what it used to be, and the Coolee Refuge, which will be lost in a year or so, and plans for the Russell Sage Wildlife Management Area.

And it's also true that we have bottomlands that don't hold water as much as they used to and it's also true that we're not far from Catahoula Lake, which is the largest waterfowl area in North Central Louisiana.

But if Northeast Louisiana is ever going to amount to anything big for waterfowl, it's going to take more private ponds like George Franklin's.

Now you can get up on your soapbox and complain about private clubs — especially if you're like us and don't belong to any. All of us can complain about the groups that lease property and thus take it out of use for the general public.

But let's face facts. Private enterprise will have to play a major role in our plans for the future, because the state will never be able to provide enough land for the public in the future. There's just going to be too many people for that.

Private development is part of the answer.

George Franklin has put about 500 acres of land under water near Holly Ridge, built levees and pumped it from a deep water well. Even though his private club is catching on, he's still not ahead of the game financially.

George tells us that he was forced to go the private - club route simply because he couldn't handle all the requests from people wanting to hunt on his property. That's a problem that many landowners have.

His club, however, is unique in that it offers its members access to all types of hunting — ducks, squirrels, rabbits, doves, quail and deer. Not all clubs can do that.

But duck hunting, which has a strong following in this section, is more of a problem probably than any other type of hunting.

To solve this problem, George approached it on three levels once he put the acreage under water. In the first place, he set aside one area as a rest area where the ducks can take a breather from the shooting.

And in the second place, morning shooting only is permitted. This works to hold the ducks overnight for the next morning's hunt, which is not a bad idea.

Finally, and probably the most important, the Franklin pond has feed for waterfowl — natural feed like acorns and duck feed and domestic feed like corn.

At one time George said he had an estimated 30,000 ducks in his pond. And that's a lot of ducks in one spot for Northeast Louisiana.

Private enterprise is a good approach.

Ducks At D'Arbonne

From all reports, D'Arbonne Lake, the new man - made lake at Farmerville that holds a lot of promise for the future, has had a pretty good concentration of waterfowl.

We haven't been to the lake lately, but we've been advised that ducks and geese have have been stopping off there.

This should be good news for those who have constructed duck blinds at D'Arbonne for the duck season that opens Saturday. But, of course, the duck hunting prospects at D'Arbonne will be tested then.

The D'Arbonne Lake Commission announced in a release a day or so ago that the lake has undergone additional clearing in recent days, putting the lake in better shape for water skiing, boating and fishing.

The Department of Public Works put about $8,100 for the work while other parties came through with various acts of assistance to make the work possible. Also, the gates have been closed and the lake should be back to 80 feet soon.

The Department of Public Works also is constructing four boat launching ramps at D'Arbonne, which should be of great assistance to to the public. Two ramps are being built at Cheniere Lake outside West Monroe too.

At D'Arbonne, the main areas cleared were around the highways where water skiiing is most popular and curves were straightened out on the main channels. Two new boat roads were built to the lake from highway 15 while stumps were removed in open water areas.

So the lake is getting in better shape all along.

One thing for sure. It's getting a lot of attention from duck hunters who hope it'll be a hot spot.

Outdoor Proposals Rejected

Whether it's an indication of the strength of the Louisiana Wildlife Federation or not, we don't know, but it is clear now that the federation has influence when it comes to voting matters dealing with the state's wildlife program.

Both amendments proposing changes in the Louisiana Wild Life & Fisheries Commission were rejected in the November 3rd general election. Both were opposed by the federation.

Most of the state's daily newspapers spoke out against the amendment, No. 12, that would have permitted the governor to reappoint members of the commission. But, on the other hand, No. 11, sponsored by Sen. Spencer Myrick of Oak Grove, to give each congressional district a representative on the commission, had some newspaper support.

However, the federation apparently got the word out that it was opposed to both amendments — just as it had been opposed to amendments before to abolish the commission.

It's good that the sportsmen have an organization to raise their voices through, but it's unfortunate that most people who hunt and fish in Louisiana do not belong to the federation.

Just think what the federation could do for the conservation program if it had over a million members. You know that over a million people hunt and fish in Louisiana.

At any rate the wildlife amendments were rejected — No. 11 by about 50,000 votes and No. 12 by about 200,000, which are strong indications that the people of the state do not want the commission changed.

Little Man's Corner

The weather was like Indian summer as the little men made news afield.

Black Bayou has been good for bass fishing, or so the reports indicate. Sam Danna landed six, including a 5 - pounder, while Vince Danna got 10, including one that went five and three-quarters pounds.

But the best bass story concerned James L. Doss, the old pro who landed 11 in 25 minutes. They weighed 35 pounds.

Ken Case caught eight specs including some that went better than 1½ - pounds.

We haven't received any more archery kills on deer, but the Arkansas department reports that its October kill has now climbed to 23. Louisiana should have in the neighborhood of 100 kills or more when the season ends next Sunday.

Fishing at Lake Concordia, Butler Smith of Ferriday caught the limit of bass and barndoor perch. Jack Miller and Joe Dante of Winnsboro landed 26 white perch at Lake Louie. That's the first we've heard from them in a long time.

Hunting with a dog, Jimmy Kennedy and Don Eames of Ferriday got the limit of squirrels in Concordia Parish. George Evans and M. D. Freeman got the limit of white perch in Old River Lake.

Also from Ferriday, Roland Dinger and Clem Nunnery, fishing Lake St. John, caught the limit of white perch.

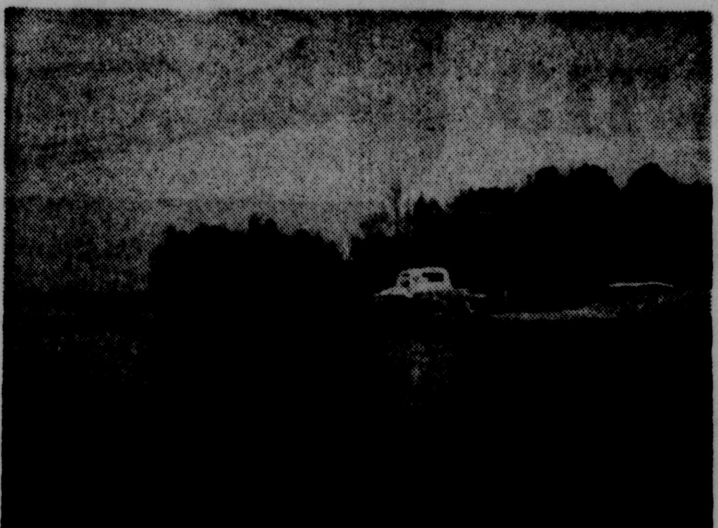
Special Feature Set At Sunday's Speedway Races

A special trophy dash will be the featured attraction at the West Monroe Speedway Sunday afternoon.

Roy Smith, manager of the track, reports that "rain will not hamper the races unless it comes during the races."

He added that the road to the speedway is open. Time trials start at 1 p.m. with the races at 2 p.m.

LOOK DAD, I got him. Greg Blanchard, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Blanchard of Bastrop, bagged his first squirrel on a recent camping trip in Ouachita Parish. Greg is following in the footsteps of his dad, an avid sportsman who hunts and fishes when he's not doing public relations work for International Paper Co. at Bastrop. The Louisiana squirrel season runs through January 10th.



DUCK BLINDS like the one pictured here are being constructed at D'Arbonne Lake at Farmerville for the coming season, which opens Saturday. Blind locations were assigned by the D'Arbonne Lake Commission at the new man-made lake. It'll be the first duck season for D'Arbonne, which recently underwent a cleaning-out program.

LSU Schedules Seven Home Tilts

BATON ROUGE (Special) — Seven home games are featured on the 1965 LSU football schedule approved by the Athletic Council, Athletic Director Jim Corbett has announced. Corbett also said that six home games are slated for 1966 as the schedules for both years were approved at the same time.

A unique feature of the 1965 schedule is the fact that the Tulane game, traditionally scheduled in the afternoon, will be played at night in Tiger Stadium November 20.

Six conference games are carded for both years along with traditional games with Southwest Conference foes Texas A&M and Rice. Miami (Fla.) and South Carolina re-appear on both schedules, replacing Tennessee and North Carolina.

Next year, Tiger fans will be able to see eight games without too much difficulty. In addition to the seven home games, Ole Miss at Jackson will put the eighth game within easy driving distance. Only Miami at Miami and Florida at Gainesville are regarded as long trips.

Grambling Smashes Wiley College, 40-21, For 8th Win

MARSHALL, Tex. (Special)—The Grambling Tigers sent a homecoming crowd of 10,000 fans on their way considerably disgruntled Saturday with a stunning 40-21 victory over Coach Fred "Pop" Long's tough Wiley Wildcats.

The defeat curtailed old grad zest, but Coach Long did everything possible to make amends on the field in a manner that punctured all post-game pretense.

The garrulous gaffer knew precisely what the job required and he dedicated himself unswearingly to that end.

This was his 51st homecoming as a player - coach, and memories must have danced in his mind as he shuffled on the field for the kickoff.

Long has coached college football for 43 seasons dating back to 1923.

Repulsed by a determined Wiley defense in the opening stanza, Grambling flew down the field for three quick second period scores and everything else was anti-climatic.

Halfback Peterson Mathews broke the Wildcat defense of thunder with a rambling 59 yard scamper.

Henry Dyer added to old grad discomfort with a one yard plunge and Eddie Robinson Junior and Goldie Sellers continued the high-handedness by hocking up on a twenty yard pass for the third TD.

Verging on the pit of frustration, Wiley tried to recoupe with a pair of quick scores.

Hastily working out of the 'I' and 'T' formations, the Wildcats used pile-driving lunges by James Johnson and the depth-deft passing of quarterback Early Holmes to score a pair of touchdowns in as many minutes.

Charles Harris and Holmes scored to provide the partisan with rare opportunities for departing the traditional calm.

Wiley ripped off 80 yards on the closing score. Most supporters admitted that the three-play assault was successful beyond their wildest dreams.

Nemiah Wilson provided the second half impetus by legging an interception 47 yards for a touchdown, the Tigers settled down with two more markers before the final horn.

Halfback Sellers and fullback Charles Washington boomed into the endzone for Grambling.

In registering its eight victory in nine starts, Grambling rushed and passed for 406 yards. Wiley collected 317 and held a 21-15 advantage in first downs.

Coach Eddie Robinson was one of the liveliest in town. He had nothing but praise for his squad, calling it one of the best in two years in the Tiger lair.

Grambling has been close to the top of its form in recent weeks while racking up one sided victories over Jackson State, Texas Southern, Arkansas AM&N and Mississippi Valley.

Earlier, the Tigers walloped Tennessee A&I, Southern University and Alcorn A&M.

Grambling's only setback was administered by unbeaten Prairie View in a 20-14 donnybrook.

HEARS BALLGAME

Oklahoma Star In Good Spirits

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Two weeks ago husky Bob Swaffar writhed in agony next to a machine that had twisted off his right arm. Saturday he relaxed in a hospital bed, the limb surgically reimplanted, and listened to a football game.

To photographers who were admitted to his room briefly, his major concern seemed to be the outcome of the football game between his school, Oklahoma State, and Nebraska.

The few visitors to his room reported he was in good spirits and eager to return to his studies at Stillwater where he is a junior mathematics major.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. C.D. Swaffar of Omaha, Neb., were with him. The father said, "He's a determined boy, he is learning to write with his left hand."

A few days ago the 20-year-old basketball player's future appeared black. The reimplantation of his arm — torn off between the elbow and shoulder — was only the third such operation in the nation.

A hospital official said the chain of events after the accident Nov. 1 in the university laundry was a major factor in the apparently successful effort to save the arm.

Much credit for emergency procedures went to Swaffar's teammate, Gary Hassman, 23, a pre-medical senior from Anchorage, Ky.

"We have the same math class," Hassman said, "and were studying together while our clothes washed. The accident happened when Bob reached into the water extracting machine to remove some clothes. He must have gotten tangled in whirling clothing.

"It took place so fast it's difficult to remember just what did occur. Bob staggered backward and he told me at the hospital the only thing he recalls is that he wiped his chest with his left hand and wondered if something was wrong with his right hand.

"I called an ambulance, wrapped the appendage in towels and placed it in the coldest water we had. I and Howard Iba son of Basketball Coach Hank Iba, and two others on the team — Lester Berryhill and James Watson — went with Bob to the hospital.

"We packed the arm in ice. Luckily — I guess you could say it was luck — the twisting of the arm sealed off the flow of blood."

Hassman said he had read extensively in medical journals about organ transplants. He is a straight A senior, captain of the basketball team, class president and an applicant for a Rhodes Scholarship.

Swift aid was given Swaffar at the Stillwater hospital and less than 2½ hours after the mishap he was in surgery at University Hospital here.

Again, it was fortunate the accident happened at night, said the hospital spokesman. He said, "if it had been in the daytime the surgeons would have been scattered."

The surgical team had studied reimplantation procedures, he added. The student was wheeled into the operating room about 12:30 a.m.; the surgeons labored until 8 a.m.

Young Swaffar may be able to leave the hospital in a few weeks but faces more surgery. Physicians hope his upper arm nerves will grow into the old nerve canals to his hand. If they do he'll regain use of the arm in about a year, they explained.

Coach Iba announced plans Saturday for an intrasquad benefit game Nov. 23 to help Swaffar during his long recovery period.

Iba said the school obtained NCAA approval for the benefit.

TRIBE VS. TECH

Usual Full House Expected For Tilt

The expert's don't forsee much of a game — Tech, undefeated going into a Saturday game with Southern Mississippi, is a prohibitive favorite over the winless Indians—but there will probably be the usual full house to see the Northeast-Louisiana Tech game here Saturday night, Nov. 21.

These two rivals have produced thrilling games no matter what the records of the teams for the past several years and 6,000 fans are expected to pack Brown Stadium for this year's edition.

As far as the Gulf States Conference is concerned, the game will settle little. Tech, boasting one of its finest teams ever, has already clinched no worse than tie for first place while Northeast is assured of, at best, a share of last.

Northeast could not ask for a better time to end its losing streak, which now stands at eight games, seven of them this season. The Indians' streak started with a 28-7 loss to Tech last year and another Saturday would leave Northeast with its first winless season in 32 years. The only previous winless Indian campaign was back in 1932, when Northeast was a junior college.

Tech, if it defeats Southern, will have a winning streak of 11 games going. The Bulldogs won their first eight this year and last two last fall.

Northeast and Tech have met 11 times with Tech winning nine and Northeast two.

Tribe victories came in 1956, a 7-0 triumph that knocked the Techmen out of a GSC title, and two years ago here when the Indians sprang a 13-6 upset. Northeast came close two years before in Brown Stadium, losing, 20-15, on a last-minute long touchdown pass.

Tech's offense is built around the deadeye passing of all-GSC quarterback Billy Laird but also features its strongest running attack in several years, one powered by fullback Gerald McDowell.

Northeast features probably the best broken-field runner in the conference, speed merchant halfback R. F. Wilson. Wilson has the league's two longest runs of the season to his credit, a couple of 93-yard kick returns, and is tied for third in GSC scoring with 24 points.

In fact, Northeast backs have recorded the three longest runs of the year by GSC players, halfback Neal Gunn traveling 90 yards for a touchdown with a kickoff to rank third.

Tickets for the Northeast-Tech game may be obtained at the Northeast athletic office or by calling FA 5-6361, extension 371, or FA 5-1804.

WITHDRAWN AND depressed, a patient sits in an attitude which once was the common one in mental hospitals, in State Hospital No. 2 at St. Joseph, Mo. When the hospital was called the Lunatic Asylum, chances of leaving the place were slight. Today the number of patients who withdraw beyond reach of treatment is shrinking, under new methods of handling this challenge. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Nearly Half Of Mentally Ill Are Being Aided Today

By HUELL WARREN JR.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., (AP) — Susan Washington was 22 the spring her second baby came. She had lost a child. She had come to loathe the northwest Missouri farmer she married four years earlier. A sister died. Her father was a drunk. It seemed to Susan Washington that all her friends were mean to her.

So it was three weeks after the second baby that Susan Washington name was enrolled in careful black script at the top of a page in a record book which is two feet tall and bears the title: "Missouri State Lunatic Asylum in St. Joseph."

The diagnosis was chronic mania.

The indelible and precise script in the big record book gave way to intermittent scrawls; and, after three pages of Susan Washington, the book itself gave way to typewritten notes in an individual folder. Chronic mania disappeared as a medical term, to be succeeded by dementia praecox and schizophrenia. Even the name of the place changed from lunatic asylum to State Hospital No. 2.

But in the record of Susan Washington there is a recurrent notation: No change. No change. No change! Its persistence in the early years doomed her, apparently as long ago as 1905; and now at 85 she has been a patient at the hospital 63 years.

Suppose Susan Washington was 22 again and came to St. Joseph today.

Matching the old diagnosis against current experience as best they can, the specialists at the hospital are confident she would have a 50-50 chance for release in six months, a two-thirds chance for release within a year.

Dr. Manson B. Pettit, superintendent of the hospital, says three main changes have brightened the prospect:

—Growing numbers of patients and their families have come to accept mental illness as a disease and not a disgrace. They realize it may be cured. They seek help earlier.

—Intense concentration on those newly arrived at the hospital.

—And, in the past dozen years, new drugs. Dr. Pettit leans to the belief that the basic solution to mental illness ultimately will come through chemistry.

In the days when Susan Washington came to the hospital, the legal commitment papers accompanying many of the patients said "for life."

When a patient arrives now, doctors social workers and their aides start building up the idea that the patient may be restored. They start coaching him and his family for re-entry into normal life. As the time approaches, the preparations are stepped up.

The product of this concentration is reflected in the hospital's chart for a year. Of 748 patients admitted, 419 were released within six months. Of the released, only 34 were back within the next six months.

DESIGNED

The intense work with the newly arrived is designed to prevent what happened to Susan Washington between 1901 and 1905.

She was a physical as well as a mental wreck when she entered. Her body responded, but her mind could not shake its extreme depression.

In 1903, Susan was described as destructive and hard to care for, and she had lapsed into the invariable refuge of the broken-minded in her setting. Susan was profane and vulgar.

In 1904, Susan was a little quieter mentally. She did a little work around her ward. She was paroled to her father.

Susan was back in 13 months, in fairly good physical condition but "somewhat depressed." There was another note on her readmission, and it just about closed the book on what the rest of her life was to be: "She says she is glad to be back."

ADJUSTED

Susan had adjusted — to the institution. She had found comfort in a world without problems and no necessity for decisions.

In present times, the hospital might try a half dozen times or so to restore Susan to her family or get her into a boarding home if it was the family situation that rankled.

Here are some of the notations in the world record book from 1905 to 1911: Little or no interest in her surroundings. Mind is enfeebled. Mind is gone. Quiet and causes little trouble. Seldom manifests interest in anything.

This utter withdrawal, more than violence or misbehavior, is the challenge which confronts the staff of a state hospital.

In the old style, a beauty operator often became standard adjunct of the women's wards. She cut and curled and manicured on the theory a presentable appearance might help a patient re-establish contact with her former world and her self-respect.

The new style is to see that a comb is lying handy and wheedle the patient into using it of her own volition.

Restorations for some mental patients are built from such toeholds. The task is to set scenes for them.

The scene for remotivation is a primitive version of Madison Avenue's "brain-storming," or the PTA's "buzz session." An attendant or psychiatric aide picks 10 or 12 of the most likely among her regular patients and gathers them weekly in an alcove of their ward. She talks and tries to get them to talk — about anything outside the confines into which they have withdrawn.

PERSONAL WORD

After a personal word for each, the leader frequently uses a poem or song to gain attention and provide something to talk about. She has brought along props — a toy tractor, a toy sewing machine or refrigerator, pictures cut from a magazine, a pet. She nearly always turns the conversation toward jobs and work.

It is exciting when a woman who hasn't talked for years bursts forth with the recipe and procedure for baking an angel food cake.

Remotivation is being used with schizophrenics who have been patients a decade or longer, bringing hope for those who in another time probably would have been written off as Susan Washington was before 1911.

NOT UNIQUE

Susan is far from unique. Most state mental institutions have her counterparts. St. Joseph has six others who have been patients more than 55 years. A girl admitted at 16 is now 76. Two men now 77 were admitted in their 'teens. A woman of 79 has been on the roll 59 years.

Counting Susan as an average patient and filling in some gaps with estimates, a calculation shows it has cost the taxpayers of Missouri around $27,500 to board, room and care for her for 63 years.

The earliest annual cost figure readily available is $159.90 a patient in 1909. In 1963 it was $1,662—$4.50 a day. It doubled in the 10 years from 1946 to 1956 and again in the next seven years.

Besides the increased cost of everything, the doubling reflects a use of more people and more highly skilled people in the effort for quick restorations. The cost of drugs is also a factor, but 68 per cent of the budget still is for personal services to patients.

From 1950 to 1953, while the number of resident patients declined from 2,294 to 2,110, the number of employes increased from 471 to 739.

But yearly admissions grew in the same span from 234 to 848. The staff met this challenge, in 1963 for example, by effecting 528 discharges and adding 249 patients to the roll of those who live outside the hospital but come in for periodic treatments and checkups.

OCCUPATIONAL

Remotivation, occupational therapy, total push — they all came too late for Susan Washington.

Probably by 1905, certainly by 1911, she had become rooted in complete withdrawal. The only place for her was a mental institution. Her physical health fluctuated — poor, failing, better, good. As it came to be measured against her advancing age, it was surprisingly good.

For 23 years Susan's life has coursed from bed to rocking chair to dining table and back to chair and bed in a ward among a hundred women and girls, some too gay and others as withdrawn as herself.

Two nurses and four of five psychiatric aides and attendants are on duty in Susan's ward and an identical one above with another hundred or so women. A doctor devotes most of this time to this building.

In Susan's ward, the active and the attention seekers seem to gravitate to the chairs in the front rows, the quiet to the rear.

Back here sits Susan. She once seemed a tall, spare woman. Now she stoops to 5-3½ and weighs 119. Blood pressure-fine. No teeth. Eyes and ears — good. Flesh — firm. There still is a hint her white hair once was pretty. Her left ankle and foot are slightly deformed. Susan sits in her chair with her left foot tucked under her.

At request, with a little guidance and a change of dresses, Susan walks smartly to the front anteroom to see the first visitor who has come especially to see her since 1959.

If this makes any impression upon her it is not apparent. One of the nurses has worked with Susan eight years and has never heard her say a coherent word.

At a question, Susan works her mouth and seems almost to be forming a one-word reply. But all that comes is a barely audible p-f-f-f-t.

Bayou Lighting By Tallulah Is Attention-Getter

ALEXANDRIA (Special) — A bayou lighting and beautification program in Tallulah has drawn the editorial attention of the Louisiana Municipal Review, which devotes six pages in its latest edition to the Madison Parish town.

"Aside from the pleasure and civic pride which it gives to Tallulah residents themselves," the Review observes, "there is another side to all this: It has the makings of a definite tourist attraction, and has already drawn the interest of the Lovely Louisiana Tourist Association, which has announced that it is willing to throw its full support behind the project."

The article also tosses a verbal boquet to a number of Tallulah citizens who have worked on the lighting and beautification plan, including Mrs. J. E. Neill, chairman; Donald Walker, vice chairman; E. H. Johnson, lighting engineer, and Mayor W. P. Sevier.

Last December's lights were so spectacular, the magazine says, "that one traveler from Colorado came through town, turned around, drove over the entire decorated route again, and announced to local people that 'This is the prettiest town I've ever seen.' "

On Dit'

by Denise

And now begins our dressed-up season! Each year with the coming of somewhat cooler weather, comes also the gay round of balls, lavish holiday parties, dinners, and open houses, for which clothes are lovelier every year. And each year, in Monroe, the Big Timers' Dance club fall formal marks the unofficial opening of fall-and-winter; even as the Junior Charity League's Christmas ball begins December merriment.

So last Saturday night, the Big Timers gathered at Bayou DeSiard country club; and a gala crowd it was, dressed for an OCCASION. Festivities got underway with a cocktail party beginning at eight p.m. in the club ballroom. Tiny Skaggs and the King's Men played for dancing from nine until one. Breakfast was served later in the evening in the young people's lounge.

Arriving dancers were greeted in the club foyer by four members of the Big Timers' board, with their respective spouses: GRAYSON GUTHRIE president, with wife FRANCES; JEAN and DON GIFFEN; MARILLYN and JACK TAYLOR; ANNA CLAIRE and ED SEYMOUR JR. . . . Frances' ball gown was designed with bodice of black ottoman silk, edged at sleeve and dropped waist with tiny ball fringe. Black sequins accented pattern of the long black-on-white-printed skirt.

Another black and white outfit was that worn by ELTSNER FRAZER: black chiffon dress topped with a beautifully cut floor-length coat of heavy white silk . . . . CAROLYN SIMPSON chose white satin, bodice over laid with black lace; the whole topped with a long white satin coat.

Several lovely dresses in shades of red and pinks were noted. JANIS STRAUSS wore rose red satin, styled with overblouse and narrow skirt, slit to the knee for dancing ease . . . Devil red was Jean Giffen's dress, a combination of satin and velvet, with a floor length coat of the satin . . . . CAROLYN McBEE chose red brocade with square neckline and skirt of controlled fullness . . . . EDNA' HILL'S pink silk featured a scroll of embroidery in dyed-to-match braid.

"Ashes of roses" best described the heavenly grey-pink of PAT BAGWELL's satin and velvet ballgown . . . . With a pink satin skirt BETTY MABRAY wore an overblouse with palest pastel pink and blue leaves shadowed against a sequined background . . . . BESS COURTMAN's white faille was printed in reds and greens, slit to the knee to reveal brilliant red facing.

Truly elegant was DOLL BIEDENHARN's dress, superbly cut of heavy satin the color of rich cream, delicately beaded at the scoop neckline . . . MELBA NUGENT's black silk fit snugly to the knees, then flounced to the floor. Jet and sequins timmed her large balloon sleeves . . . With a white silk dress, JUNE McHENRY wore a pink velvet sash, a pink velvet band at her hairline . . . SHIRLEY BOYCE's dress featured a brown satin skirt with beige satin bodice printed in brown . . . JANE OLIVER chose beige chiffon with matching lace jacket . . . . Heavenly pastel tones in DODIE WOMACK's dress included pinks, blues, and greens in pale flowers on the bodice; a pale green satin skirt.

Two stylish black outfits were noted on out of town members: CLARA JEAN CLARK of Mer Rouge wore black crepe, ornamented with jet beading . . . With black velvet, cut on ultra-stylish "thirty-ish" lines and slit to the knee, SUE SHACKLEFORD of Jones was wearing black lace stockings.

Other out of town Big Timers who drove in for the dance were PEGGY and ALLEN BUIE, KATHERINE and BILL BOLES, BARBARA and HOLLIS VENABLE, DOT and LEE INEICHEN, all of Rayville; JUNE and WARREN WHITE of Mer Rouge; EVELYN and NORMAN KIRKWOOD of Wilmot, Arkansas.

Guests from out of town at the party included COL. and MRS. H. W. McCLARY of Shreveport (she was the former Maude S. Gill of Monroe); the EVERETT BURGOYNES of Baton Rouge; HERMAN TAYLORS of Shreveport; WALTER STARRS of Greenville, Miss.; DR. and MRS. WILFRED COLE of Jackson, Miss. (she was the former Gwen Walker of Monroe), BILLIE and PAT MARTIN of Bonita; DR. and MRS. JACK HUBBARD of New Orleans.

□ □ □

Last named in the above paragraph, the Hubbards were guests last weekend of MARIE LOUISE and GEORGE SNELLINGS in their home on Country Club road. They flew up from New Orleans, where Dr. Hubbard is Dean of Newcomb college, on Friday, returned home late Sunday. Saturday at noon, GERRY and BURT SPERRY, SARAH and H. W. McSHERRY were hosts for a boatride and lunch honoring these visitors. That evening, before the Big Timers' party, the Snellings invited a few couples for dinner with the Hubbards.

At the boatride, the Hubbards met another visitor in town, RUTH (Mrs. David) CAMERON of El Paso, Texas, guest of CHARLOTTE HAMILTON. Ruth had been to Sewanee, Tennessee, visiting her twin sons, DON and DAVID, who are seniors. Don is commander of the company to which young BURT SPERRY has been assigned. Ruth was here with Charlotte for a week, departing this past Wednesday.

Saturday night Charlotte invited friends to meet Ruth at a cocktail buffet at her home. An unusual arrangement of coral coxcomb threaded with coral and green ribbon in a silver basket formed the centerpiece. About forty guests called between seven and nine . . . . Others who entertained honoring Ruth during her stay were MAG TAYLOR, the TED ALLENS, MAMIE DAVIS, and ALICE SILVERSTEIN.

Arriving for the christening of young WESLEY SHAFTO III last Sunday were TREVA and DICK SHAFTO of Columbia, South Carolina. They were guests in the home of SARAH and BOBBY SHAFTO.

"Sunday in the country" was the treat planned by BETTY and BERNARD BIEDENHARN and DIT CUTLER, honoring Ruth, Treva, and Dick during their stay. This party was held last Sunday at Bernbet Farm near West Monroe. Some thirty-guests gathered on the terrace to enjoy a lovely Indian summer afternoon. The host took the visitors for a helicopter ride and aerial view of the Ouachita, Cheniere lake, and other points of interest. Dinner was served in the dining room, where the table was centered with a harvest basket filled with fall fruits and foliage.

Also honoring these visitors was a dinner party Monday evening in the home of LOUISE and JOHN THEUS. SUE and KING STUBBS were co-hosts for this affair. Chrysanthemums in varying colors were used throughout the house. In the entrance were yellow blossoms arranged with fall foliage. Bronze chrysanthemums decorated living room and reading room, while a combination of pink and white centered the dining room table.

President of Louisiana State Medical Auxiliary, ALICE (Mrs. Robert) ROUGELOT of New Orleans spent the day in Monroe Thursday with members of Ouachita Parish Medical Auxiliary. A sherry party in the home of CONNIE JONES complimented Alice and Monroe's own MARGUERITE COON, state president-elect. Members of the Auxiliary were invited to call at eleven a.m., preceding the group's regular luncheon meeting at the Paragon. Hostesses for the party were BETTY GEISLER and PAT BLANCHARD, co-chairman, with HELEN CANNON, MARIE COOKSTON, BESS COURTMAN, and MARY LEE MILAM.

Fall flowers decorated the reception suite. In the living room were old fashioned marigolds in shades of maroon and gold, arranged in brass containers: a small round bowl on the coffee table; a footed compote on the credenza. A green urn-shaped container held a mass of red chrysanthemums which was placed on a side table on the living porch.

In the dining room, the table was centered with a lavish harvest arrangement on a flat round tray. A ceramic rooster in shades of green and brown, was backed with sprays of wheat and dock. Surrounding the figure were heaps of fruit, gourds, grapes, and fall foliage. With a choice of sherry or coffee, the hostesses served hot orange muffins, scones, cheese straws, and nuts.

An interesting show of locally-owned art opens today at Masur Museum of Art on South Grand street. Entited "Monroe Collects," the exhibit will feature paintings and mosaics from private collections of some twenty-nine individuas in this area. Some fifty works in the show cover a period of several centuries and many different schools of art. For the next two weeks this exhibit will be at the museum, which is open daily from one to five, excepting Mondays.

A number of Monroe music lovers plan to drive to Shreveport Tuesday evening for Shreveport Civic Opera association production of "Otello" at the municipal auditorium. DAVIS BINGHAM will sing a solo part and will direct Northeast State college students making up the opera chorus. Metropolitan opera stars Dimiter Usunov as Otello and Cesare Bardelli as Iago will headline the cast.

Whenever the fifteenth of the month falls on Sunday, we remember Odgen Nash's poem "The Middle of the Month:"

Oh, some people grieve for New Year's Eve,
And some for the dog days fiddle;
My moment sublime is the restful time
When the month is at the middle.
Now turn not pale
At the morning mail
Nor shrink when the telephone shrills,
No evil betides
On the blessed Ides,
The lull between the bills!
Oh, the first of the month is oyster-gray
And the last of the month is clamm,
But it's tirra lirra loo for the middle of the month,
For the middle of the month is mammy!

Little Leather Gifts Are Great For Christmas

From little leathers grow great ideas for Christmas giving.

Leather wallets and french purses, house accessories, sporting equipment, grooming aids, smoking and bar accessories and other small leather goods — all are elegant items for every member of the family, suggests Leather Industries of America. So long as the gift is leather, the recipient will treasure its good looks and serviceability.

Wafer-thin yet roomy enough for all a man's essentials, leather wallets are available in fine-grained or smooth cowhide, steerhide, goatskin and calfskin. Other favored textures with men are pinseal and pigskin. In all leathers, there is a color choice of black or brown, with some olive, mahogany and tan. Many leather billfolds boast removable card and photo cases, secret bill compartments and credit card sections.

The ladies on your list will also fall for the combination of fashion and practicality to be found in a smart leather wallet or french purse. In dozens of colors and decorated with jeweling, double textures, nailheads or stitching effects, these pretty purse accessories will have her gasping with glee. Smooth, suede, lustre and embossed leather textures offer a wide range of surface effects.

For an impressive tandem gift, why not present a matching keycase in the same leather as his or her wallet? Other matching accessories available include leather glass cases, pocket secretaries, cigarette packs, and lighters.

If you know an ex-cigarette smoker who has just joined the "switchables," a leather tobacco pouch or leather-covered humidor would make a thoughtful gift. For the owner of a well-accoutered bar, consider a dashing leather-bound ice bucket, or coasters and shot glasses cleverly encased in leather.

Gifts of grooming aids that improve the appearance look better themselves in handsome leather. Fine examples are soft leather toilet kits, leather-backed hair and colthes brushes, leather manicure sets and leather shoe-shine kits. Great to get or give are rich-looking leather jewelry and stud boxes.

Petti-Pants Give Warmth With Glamour

Every mother who has ever tried to get a small daughter into some warm but unattractive winter underwear will rejoice to know that petti-pants have become the new rage for the young.

Every designer of children's lingerie, plus some sportswear houses, are bringing out the kind of knee-pants that little girls will love to wear. The fabric is usually cotton knit jersey, which removes all battle over "scratchy" pants.

At Stretchini, floral prints on white are the thing, with lace edgings at the knees. Scattered rosebuds or blue straw flowers satisfy the feminine in little women.

At Style Undies, petti-pants are attached to tights for the lower part of the legs, with the pants half in black, red or royal stripes on white, the tights in matching solid color.

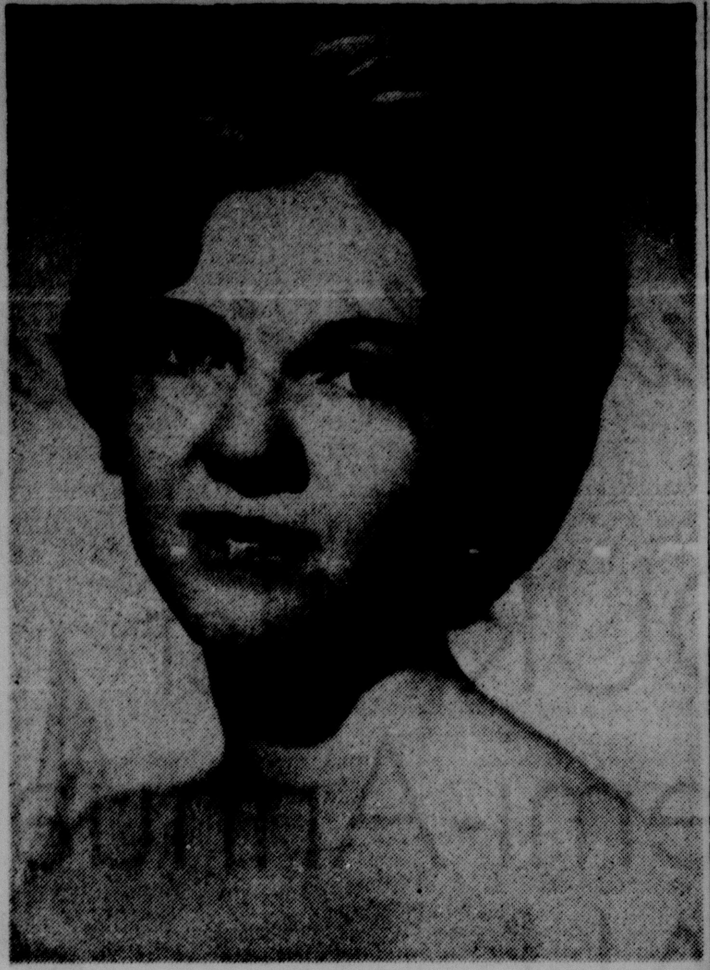
The striped theme is carried out in a whole collection of petti-pants called "Beatknits." They range from wide Rugby stripes of black and orange to narrow stripes in multi-pastels. Knee edges are straight, scalloped, saw-toothed or trimmed with fringe, ric-rac, lace, pompoms and bows.

One of the best things about these colorful petti-pants is that they can be seen without causing embarrassment to youngsters at the sensitive stage. Under party dresses they can keep a little girl warm without her objecting to an unglamorous look.

Obviously, what every well-dressed young lady needs is a collection of petti-pants in florals and stripes for winter.

LIPSTICK GLOW

There's a marvelous new make - down taking the place of blatant, glaringly obvious lipstick make - up. The new "transluminant" look lets the mouth show and glow in all its natural beauty and soft texture beneath bright, vivid, nearly transparent color.



ENGAGEMENT and approaching marriage of Miss Marilyn Janice Hudson to Larry Ainsworth, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Hudson of West Monroe. The future bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Ainsworth of Taylorsville, Mississippi. The wedding is planned for December 12 at 2 p.m. in the home of the bride's parents.

New Seamless Hosiery Cued

The bare-leg or uncluttered look of seamless hosiery has reached out from its summer shell to encompass all seasons.

Once found almost exclusively in sun-tan shades and worn to present the illusion of bare legged beauty, seamless hose is now conceded to be the fashion leader in every shade and weight for coming fall and winter wear.

Sheer, seamless hose are of course worn for every day and dress occasion, and color-wise pick up the shade of the ensemble.

Perfect color matching in hosiery is not considered half as smart as wearing a tone that carries out the color theme of an outfit and blends in without noticeable difference.

Fall Handbags Run Gamut From Petite To Carry-All

Elegant leather handbags, softly styled to team with the new feminine look in apparel, rate a big hand from the woman who knows fashion. In city and suburb, fall's prettiest purses put the accent on trim shapes, simple ornamentation and distinctive leather treatments.

The varied textures of leather — grained, smooth, sueded, antiqued, brushed, embossed—have contributed their own beauty to an elegant handbag collection to suit every occasion.

Handbag contours this fall vary from small to fairly large in size, with the leather satchel, boxbag and tote favored for every day wear. Spacious without being bulky, these casual carry-alls are crafted of newly developed leathers that are as light as a feather on your arm. Also in demand for day time is the shoulder bag, newly returned in a variety of leathers, leaving hands free while running errands, shopping, or traveling.

For dressy costumes, leather envelopes, clutches and scaled-down box bags feature such feminine detailing as scalloping, draping effects and overlays. Burnished golden closings or other golden trim are also used.

Petite handbags in glossy smooth leathers, glowing lustre leathers, and sleek suedes for after-dark add fashion excitement to the fall social scene. Simple decorative touches might include a tiny bow, a touch of jewelling or a gold clasp.

The leather color story covers a wide spectum . . . from pale to bright to deep shades. Clear, true colors will be seen most, along with the authentic leather colors and basic, classic black.

BLANCHED ALMONDS

When you blanch almonds at home, be sure you dry the nuts thoroughly after the brown skins are removed. Turn the nuts onto paper toweling, pat off excess moisture, then let stand overnight, if necessary, at room temperature; or dry without toasting in a warm oven.

Kenneth Adams Family Hosts Open House Events

Presaging the coming holiday season Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Adams and children, Vicky, Kendy and Chucky, entertained last weekend at two open house events in their home on Marie Drive, Parkwood Addition, in West Monroe.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams received their guests on Saturday from 7 until 10 p.m. and on Sunday afternoon between the hours of 3 until 5 p.m. Their children alternated at the door and assisted in other courtesies.

As guests entered the entrance hall, where an arrangement of green Fuji chrysanthemums adorned the hall piece they were directed to the guest book on an antique secretary with a large gold candle to one side.

Those who alternated at the guest book during the two occasions were Mrs. Bob Branch, Mrs. Lake C. Oxford, Mrs. J. W. McClendon, Mrs. Edna Morrison and Mrs. Katherine Spinks.

On display in the formal living was a new oil portrait of the three Adams children.

Refreshments were served in the dining room where coffee was poured by Mrs. Harry Liner, Mrs. Henry Camp, Mrs. Richard Curry, Mrs. Charles Chisholm and Mrs. Bobbie Jones. Central decor for the table was an arrangement of green carnations and eucalyptus. Lighted green tapers were used on the table and buffet. Table appointments also included silver serving pieces.

The autumn color note was further employed in the den where the table was covered with a brown linen cloth. Yellow punch was served from a pottery bowl, wreathed with yellow pompon chrysanthemums. Alternating at the punch service were Mrs. Gene Williams, Mrs. Eugene Scott, Mrs. James Truly, Mrs. Sherwood Emory and Mrs. N. Ross Golson.

For the occasion Mrs. Adams was wearing a formal gown of kelly green ribbon knit with blouson top and straight cut skirt. Her corsage was of green cymbidium orchids. Vicky wore a pink chiffon dress with matching accessories and a corsage of green carnations while Kendy was dressed in an electric blue velvet model with black accessories and a green carnation corsage.

Those assisting with the courtesies were presented corsages of white flowers with green ribbon.

More than 250 guests called during the appointed hours.

"SHUCKS"

Note to new cooks: '"shucked" shrimp means shrimp removed from the shells. When clams and oysters are removed from their shells, they may also be called shucked.

OIL KEY

Don't try to oil the lock of a door or car. Oil the key and insert it. Turn key back and forth a few times.

Many Misses Now Pick December Wedding Date

The joys of a wedding and the festivities of the holidays make a magical combination for the bride-to-be. Each year, more and more brides choose December for that very special ceremony.

In fact, no event in history is more surrounded with tradition and curious customs than the wedding ceremony. In China, the bride wore red . . . in Switzerland she superstitiously carried a handkerchief (else her marriage might be tearful) . . . in Lapland she was liable to be on the receiving end of a traditional gift —a reindeer!

In the 14th century each French bride threw her garter as an omen of good luck. As time went on more bashful brides changed this custom and tossed their bouquets.

From Egypt came the wedding ring, from the Orient the bridal veil. Far Eastern brides, fearful of the 'evil eye,' began this costume of the veil now adopted by the Western world. It was young Nelly Custis, adopted daughter of George Washington, who first wore a long sheer scarf pinned to her coiffure at her wedding.

Today's December brides are still tradition bound. The modern marriage-go-round finds age 18 the magic year — about half of the bridal gowns and wedding bands sold for first marriages are for young women under 20. And these girls began filling their hope chests with everything from towels to toasters in their teens. So, by the time the wedding march is played, today's bride-to-be has accumulated a valuable amount of worldly possessions.

Then there are wedding gifts: we doubt, seriously, whether our young American homemaker-to-be has the slightest desire for a Lapland reindeer wrapped as a wedding gift! Silver candy dishes and tea towels somehow seem more suitable. But today's young bride, thanks to family and friends, is usually well-equipped to set up housekeeping before the wedding bells ring out. What the young couple doesn't receive, they go out and buy (surveys reveal that each couple spends close to $15,000 (cash or credit) for such items as housing, furniture, appliances — and this doesn't include the cost of ring, rice or wedding roses!)

These first personal possessions are important to the couple, both from a poignant and a practical point of view. Today's bride, teen or older, is interested in a variety of products from a do-everything detergent to an insurance program that will protect her new possessions, he rnew home.

The prospective bride should take a few minutes away from the round of shopping, showers and selection of furnishings to discuss protection of her new property with an independent insurance agent. She and her husband-to-be are on the threshold of an economic adventure.

Bonded Fabrics Boon To Fashion

Many of Fall's loveliest fashions feature fabrics with the kind of hand and drape that makes them "delicious" to wear — and a constant joy for they need so little care, and keep their beauty longer.

An exciting method of achieving this happy state and of stabilizing knits, is called Zephybond. Zephyrbond also makes it easy on the seamstress, in cutting and sewing.

Simply put, Zephyrbond is a sandwich . . . outside, any of a myriad of stitch-designs, inside a non-allergenic tricot lining, soft, smooth and exactly color-matched . . . between, a wafer-thin bonding of puff-weight foam that performs the miracle of permanent shape-retention; there is absolutely no sag in the finished garment regardless of the number of wearings and cleanings and it allows all the styling techniques that hitherto were confined to full-fashioned knits.

Closet Cleaning Often Unearths Buried Treasure

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

So you haven't a thing to wear? Have you looked lately?

You may be surprised that you are pretty well-heeled, soled and gowned. Some girls can't see their clothes for the clutter.

Instead of harassing the family for a new dress or pair of shoes, you might find it more immediately rewarding to clean out closets and drawers and see what you really own.

A recent peek into the room of a 17-year-old girl — let's call her Susan — was a revelation.

It all started when she tried to find her lost cat, and thought she heard him in the closet. Well, in removing some of the debris from her closet floor, she discovered among other things: a pair of shoes she bought two years ago; a hair bow she'd been given for Christmas — a Chanel type like everyone's wearing today; a little mink hat she'd bought at a thrift shop summer before last.

"Now what in the world," she kept muttering, at one point denying a particular tweed skirt belonged to her.

"Oh, yes, that's yours," said her mother emphatically. "You wore it once, and that was the last I recall seeing it." But the skirt is too small for her now. Elsewhere there was catastrophe. Mirrors were covered with slogans, pictures, pennants. Every drawer was opened and so crammed it couldn't be closed.

"Either you weed out this stuff, and clean this room, or you don't get another stitch of clothes," Susan's mother warned.

Three boxes covered with dust on a shelf with all sorts of junk wedged around revealed a nice collection of accessories — belts pocketbooks, collars — long since forgotten.

"What's that thing," Mom asked, staring at a bit of lace caught in the door. It proved to be one of Mom's negligees loaned when Susan had flu. But perfume had spilled on it, eating away some color, and Susan hadn't gotten around to confessing.

"Let's see what you have in one of those stuffed-up drawers," wound-up Mom demanded.

Yessum, her instinct paid off. There were a cobwebby pair of evening hose and a mink-trimmed chiffon head scarf buried among letters, a shell collection, beads, pictures and undergarments.

And under all that rummage on top was a layer of nicely folded garments, memories of another era when the drawer was neat — half slip, long slips, pajamas, winter socks, ski underwear, bathing suits that had long since been forgotten.

Susan learned her lesson the hard way as she found little wearables that she would have enjoyed sometime or another, if she'd just remembered them.

A December wedding is planned at the College Church of Christ in Corpus Christi.

Guests for the evening were Mrs. W. B. Mathewes, Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Roddey, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hodges and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Estes. Members attending were Miss May Read, Mrs. E. WHEN RAIN DROPS gently upon the place beneath, look for fashion's newest hits, spats and gaiters, to glitter in the evening spotlight. 'A perfect compliment to this pink satin raincoat are these silver metallic gaiters of nylon double knit fabric.

FASHION FAVORS the spice of fall clothes with knee high gaiters in a harlequin plaid of blue and black to harmonize with a blue grey suit. The gaiters are made of nylon double knit fabric, stretchable for better fit and are run proof, washable and quick drying.

Spats Become Latest Female Fashion Craze

If you have wondered what fashion could possibly come up with after the boot craze, hold on to your Chanel hair bow — it's spats. In the fashion news spotlight spats, or gaiters as they are sometimes called, are taking hold from morning to late at night. Actually, gaiters reach up to the knee and spats are low, just over the ankle. The Fownes glove people are pioneering with their "Spat-a-bouts" in solid colors, florals, checks and harlequin patterns plus gold and silver metallic ones for glittering evenings. Chemstrand nylon makes them stretchable for better fit.

Spats are traced to the earliest form of leg coverings. These were made of leather and bound around the leg to secure them. The word spats comes from spatterdashes which meant they protected from spatters and dashes of rain and mud. In the eighteenth century, men wore them long — from shoe top to knee. In the nineteenth century, when men's trousers were lengthened, the gaiters became short, just covering the ankle.

They have usually been in the province of men's fashions. In centuries past they were rarely worn by women, but they were probably the inspiration for the high button shoes which women adopted in the late nineteenth century. Although these shoes frequently were all of leather, there were as many in which the upper or gaiter part was of fabric imitating men's spats.

"Today, spats definitely are in the province of women's fashions, and real fashion they are. They serve a double purpose: cozy and warm, and the complete an ensemble look. They can be sporty as a horse race for daytime or sparkle like diamonds at night. With a suit or coat they can match, harmonize or contrast, but it all adds up to sleek, chic fashion at its best. And they have infinite advantages over boots: They can be taken off indoors, there is no need to carry an extra pair of shoes, and finally, they are much, much more interesting because they can be made of a variety of fabrics in a variety of colors and patterns.

Socks Mad Fad For Gaudy Legs

Jewels glitter from the strangest places these days. In the Gres fashion house in Paris, models wear silk stockings with jewel stone embroidered designs at the knee which twinkle from the high rising slits in the skirts of slinky dinner gowns.

Things grandmother never thought of in her bloomer days were mosaic patterned stockings. The knee-high-to-knickerbockers socks are a part of the mad fad for gaudy legs.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Don't Hand Divorce To Joy-Seeking Father

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: John and I were married 10 years ago. I had already graduated from college but the service interrupted John's education so I worked to put him through.

John is now 33, we own an attractive home and have three fine children. We have no heavy financial worries and I thought our marriage was a good one.

This past year John has been talking about a divorce. At first I believed it was only conversation, but now he is insisting. He simply says he no longer wants the responsibilities of marriage and I should set him free to "enjoy life."

Since he has no grounds for divorce John wants me to divorce him for "cruel and inhuman treatment" — although he is neither cruel nor inhuman. John claims he loves the children but if he saw them on weekends it would be enough.

I am desperately trying to save our marriage but his mind is made up. Is he sick? I need your help. — BEWILDERED

Dear B.: If John wants to leave you can't chain him to the bedpost — nor should you want to, but DON'T divorce him. If there is more to the story than John is telling you, he is indeed sick. Urge him to get help.

Meanwhile tell John he can leave any time he wishes (he will anyway) but don't hand a divorce to a father of three children merely because he wants to be free to "enjoy life."

Dear Ann Landers: I am going steady with a nice young man named Bill. We are both college sophomores. He has a habit which is getting on my nerves and no amount of talking will make him stop.

Whenever we are alone Bill tickles me in the ribs. I'm ticklish by nature and ever since he found this out he has been driving me crazy.

This is no laughing matter, Ann. In fact it's making a nervous wreck out of me. Am I overreacting, or is Bill just a big tease who has found a way to irritate me? — NOT FUNNY

Dear Not: Tickling equates with "playful" wrestling. It's a sneaky device to wear down the resistence. What may appear to be nice clean fun is neither nice and clean, nor is it fun. Tell Billy Boy to keep his hands to himself or find another girl.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son has been going with a nice young woman for over a year. He told us he plans to give Barbara a ring next month. We've never met her parents.

Saturday I ran into Barbara in the beauty shop. I told her I'd like to have her parents to dinner next week and suggested they pick the night and let me know.

After five days I asked our son if Barbara had delivered the message. He said "Oh, I forgot to tell you. Barbara said her folks would love to meet you but you don't have to fix a meal. They'd prefer to drop by whenever it's convenient. You are supposed to let them know."

I feel the woman treated my invitation shabbily. Isn't it HER turn to invite us now? — SLIGHTED

Dear Slighted: If you've never heard of the telephone or the U.S. mails please investigate these remarkable methods of communication and stop sending dinner invitations by the girl messenger.

It's up to the parents of the young man to invite the parents of the prospective bride to their home if they have never met. Don't complicate your son's life by having trouble with his in-laws even before he gets into the family.

Parents are people — they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of Monroe Morning World enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

FORTHCOMING marriage of Miss Georgia Lauree Maxwell and Jerry Ray Futch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elton Futch of Mangham, is announced by her mother, Mrs. Myrle Maxwell of Hebert. Vows will be exchanged on November 19 in Bethany Baptist Church at Hebert at 7 p.m.

Thad Busbice To Claim Arizona Girl As Bride

Dr. and Mrs. Percy Clifford Enge of Tempe, Arizona, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, June Louise to Thad H. Busbice of Ames, Iowa. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elton B. Busbice of Rayville.

The wedding is planned for Sunday, December 27. Vows will be exchanged at 7 p.m. in the Abiding Savior Evangelical Lutheran Church, Scottsdale, Arizona.

The bride - elect has chosen Miss June Simmons of Hollywood, Calif., to serve as her maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be her cousin, Miss Jean Orr of Pomona, Calif., and her sister-in-law, Mrs. James Enge. Bruce Busbice of Nashville, Tennessee, has been selected to serve his brother as best man.

Miss Enge is a student at Iowa State University where she is majoring in home economics.

Mr. Busbice is an honor graduate of Northeast Louisiana State College, Monroe, where he was a member of the Demeter Honor fraternity and Scabbard and Blade. Women Also Gout Victims

Gout, fabled as a disease of overindulgence, is actually a form of arthritis, according to the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation. And even though men suffer it more frequently, women are victims often enough to make them interested in the disease.

While there is strong evidence that a tendency for gout is inherited, diet does play an important role in preventing and controlling it. One comic strip character suffers acute attacks of gout of the big toe after overindulging in his favorite dish, corned beef and cabbage. There is no medical evidence indicting these particular foods, but overweight and excessive eating and drinking can trigger painful attacks.

Hicks-Robert Vows Read In Church Setting

Luna Assembly of God Church was the setting for the wedding of Miss Larue Robert and Cecil Hicks on Saturday, October 31 at 7 p.m. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Robert and parents of the bridegroom are Rev. and Mrs. O. C. Hicks.

Rev. R. C. Tillery performed the double ring ceremony beneath an arch of greenery flanked by baskets of white gladioli. Wedding music was provided by Miss Jane Thomas, who also accompanied the soloists, Mrs. Beth Kelly and Alva Franks.

Candles were lighted by Eldred and Bennie Robert.

Escorted to the altar by her father who gave her in marriage the bride wore a gown of Chantilly lace over white satin. The fitted bodice featured long tapered sleeves and sweetheart neckline, etched with pearls and sequins. A tulle bustle effect accented the full skirt which extended into a chapel train. Her waist length veil of imported illusion fell from a crown of pearls. She carried a bouquet of white pompons with white satin bows atop a white Bible.

Mrs. Shirley Lenard, matron of honor and bridesmaids, Misses Geneva and Nancy Hicks and Sherry Kelly, junior bridesmaid, wore gowns of shaded pink peau de soie with brief nose veils and carried bouquets of white pompons.

Donedia Hicks and Deborah Kelly served as flower girls and ring bearer was Mark Robert.

Clyde Kelly attended Mr. Hicks as best man and ushers were Jerry and Roger Robert. Groomsmen were Donald Hicks and Charles Wilson.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents. The bride's table, covered with a white lace cloth over white satin was centered with an arrangement of white chrysanthemums and gladioli flanked by candelabra holding lighted white tapers. The tiered wedding cake and crystal bowl of pink punch were served from opposite ends of the table by Mrs. Patsy Hearne and Mrs. Kay Lawrence.

For the occasion Mrs. Robert, mother of the bride, was wearing a pink suit with white accessories and the bridegroom's mother chose a blue wool with black accessories. Both wore corsages of white chrysanthemums.

After a wedding trip the couple will be at home in Little Rock, Arkansas. For travel the bride wore a dress of pink peau de soie and the corsage from her wedding bouquet.

New English Designers Use Sharp Accents

A few years ago Mary Quant was the only young designer heard from out of London. Suddenly, this year, she has been joined by a whole raft of bright young things doing bright young clothes.

Sally Tuffin, Angela Cash, Jean Muir, Caroline Charles, John Bates — these are some of the new names, all well below 25. It takes little money in England to start up an offbeat operation, as these youngsters have found out.

Their clothes are all really very simple, mostly shift bodies or smock looks. Their impact comes from wild colors, sharp accents like unusual sleeves, fabrics used in an unusual way, such as bedspread lace for a little cocktail dress.

They are selling in the U.S. visiting this country, which they all regard as receptive to their ideas. They're bringing a free - wheeling philosophy into fashion that is stirring things up.

WIC Plans Yule Projects

Plans for a Christmas project were made by members of the Women in Construction of Monroe at the November meeting held Monday night in the AGC Building on Hudson Lane.

During the business session conducted by the president, Miss Elizabeth Shaughnessy, plans were discussed for the sale of WIC mats with proceeds to go to the National WIC Scholarship fund.

Mrs. Frances Case, social chairman, reported that instead of the Christmas party the members would contribute canned goods and other foods for baskets to be distributed to needy families. The baskets will be delivered December 21, following which the group will hold a social hour at the home of one of the members.

Turkeys given away by the organization were won by Ray Watts, J. C. McDougald and Raymond John.

Members attending the meeting were Effie Rynbrand, Elizabeth Shaughnessy, Marjorie Campbell, Lucy Hickey, Jean Elmore, Mary Bradford, Corrine Lutrick, Louise James, Eton Weir, Frances Case, Zell Walling, Katie White and Elizabeth Pickens. Miss Pat Walling was a guest.

"MISS LIBERTY" by Herbert Loebel is a visually rewarding experience in "Photography Annual 1965." It shows a daringly different camera angle from a helicopter and rich textures in the multitude of interesting details for the eye to linger over. At the same time, it packs an emotional appeal.

CAMERA ANGLES

Annual Roundup Of Fine Photos

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

At this time of year, camera fans have a chance to look at the annual roundup of "the world's finest photographs" in a handy format. At hand are "Photography Annual 1965," choice of Bruce Downes and editors of Popular Photography magazine, and "U. S. Camera International Pictures 1965," the selection of Tom Maloney and associate editors of U. S. Camera magazine.

Both annuals this year are the same size, weight and price — $1.25. They both have portfolios of pictures by noted photographers, an international section of fine pictures and a brief section of news pictures. They differ, however, in the quality of photo reproduction and in their typography and story makeup. In these respects I find Photography Annual far superior because the pictures look richer on the rotogravure-type paper and the stories and captions are easier to read and follow. I still find the hit-and-miss method of picture identifications in U. S. Camera annuals baffling and frustrating. Sometimes they are pages ahead of the photo, sometimes pages behind.

VISUAL TRIBUTE

A visual tribute to the late President Kennedy is given in both annuals. In U. S. Camera 1965, it takes the form of a news picture review of his presidential career. In Photography Annual, a series of pictures by Hy Peskin reveals Kennedy in sensitive, romantic candids with Jackie on Cape Cod. Individually, each section is an episode; together, they complement each other to make a more rounded picture of a noteworthy American president.

Browsing through an annual is rewarding, inspirational and, at times, exasperating. Undoubtedly other camera fans react as I do to some of the pictures: "How did that get picked?" Maybe we're not looking at pictures properly. That may be the reason for Photography Annual's lead-off article, a practical analysis of "How to Look at a Photograph" by Arthur Goldsmith.

First of all, he says, physical conditions should be as favorable as possible. Illumination should be adequately bright, but not glaring, and the atmosphere should be quiet with no background noise distractions or interruptions.

PHYCHOLOGICAL

Secondly, the psychological aspects of picture viewing are even more important. Total attention is required from a relaxed, unpreoccupied mind. That admittedly, is a difficult thing to achieve these days. Once you put yourself in contact with a picture without thinking of other things, take your time. Study expressions, gestures, the play of light, textures.

Photographs, like people, sometimes have to be seen more than once to be appreciated, says Goldsmith. And you should make an effort to look at pictures which normally do not appeal to you in order to broaden your experience. Make an honest attempt to see the good qualities that others have found or discover whether you have some prejudice or aesthetic or emotional blind spot in yourself.

Finally, look at photographs with a spirit of adventure, seek your own response to them and form your own opinion. Remember, you are sharing a photographer's vision and through his picture your own vision is brighter and broader.

Okay, Arthur, I'll go back and give the pictures that exasperate me another look.

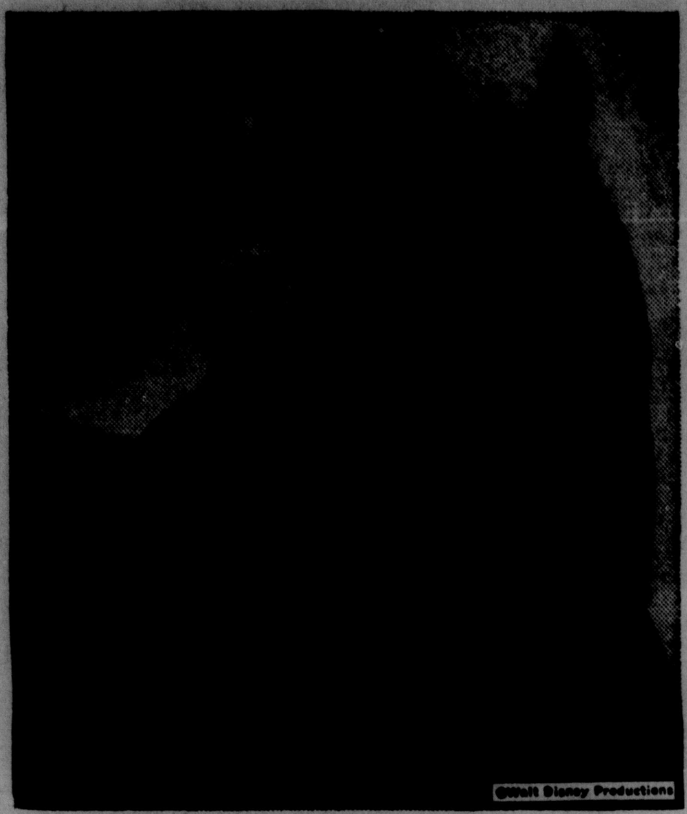
324,200 SAW PLAYS

STRATFORD, Ont. (AP) — The Stratford Festival attracted 324,200 spectators during its 12th season last summer.

The box office gross for the 16-week display of drama and music was $1,170,000. Of four plays included in the repertory, "King Lear" proved the biggest draw, playing to 97 per cent capacity. "Richard II" followed at 86 per cent; "The Country Wife," 80 per cent, and "The Bourgeois Gentleman," 75.



AN AMERICAN YOUNGSTER, Bobby Driscoll, meets an American legend, the great race horse, Dan Patch, in Walt Disney's "So Dear To My Heart," which starts Thursday at the Jim Theatre. The Technicolor feature also stars Burl Ives, Beulah Bondi, and Luana Patten in the Buena Vista release.

JEAN SEBERG as "Lilith" watches co-star Warren Beatty as he tries to understand the unique world she has created for herself in the Columbia Pictures release. The production is now showing at the Paramount Theatre.

STAMPS

Two New Adhesives On Schools

To honor the centenary of the foundation of its Folk High Schools, Norway has issued two new postage stamps, reports the Norwegian Post Office in Oslo. The 50 ore red and the 90 ore blue bear the neo-norse form "Noreg" as the country's name plus a double portrait of the Folk School founders, Herman Anker and Olaus Arvesen.

The Folk High Schools have been of great importance to the cultural progress in Norway. Originally the schools were privately endowed but now are subsidized. There are 74 such schools in Norway with 5,800 pupils.

The 1965 edition of the Minkus New American Stamp Catalog has been released and is expected to be a sellout just as the previous 11 editions of this book. One of the major reasons for its popularity has been its readability — large type with plenty of white space and explanations of technical matters in layman's language. Credit for this excellent compilation goes to editor Ben Blumenthal. Contributing editors are H. L. Lindquist and George A. Tlamsa.

It contains over 21,000 illustrations covering all commemoratives, regular issues, airmails, duck stamps, postal savings, revenues, postal cards and stationary, Confederate States U.S. Possessions and stamps of the United Nations. The cost of the edition is $3 and can be purchased at your local stamp dealer.

Austria has issued two new stamps of unusual design. One stamp honors the 40th anniversary of radio in Austria. The 1 schilling black, brown and red adhesive shows the front of a transistor radio and the emblem of the Austrian Radio System. The other new stamp is a 1.50 schilling black commemorating the "6th Congress of the International Graphical Federation." Depicted is an old printing press.

The annual American Stamp Dealers Assn. National Postage Stamp Show will be held in New York, Nov. 20-22. In addition to outstanding exhibition frames from various dealers there will be special displays from the U.S. Post Office Department including material rarely seen outside the Postal Museum in the nation's capital. Also on display will be private exhibits including the famed Cardinal Spellman material from Regis College.

CLASSICAL DANCE

NEW YORK (AP) — Classical ballet was voted the most popular form of dancing by spectators at Central Park's dance festival.

Over 50,000 people attended the week-long exhibit, and 2,000 filled in printed questionnaires. Following classical ballet in popularity was modern dance, with folk and Spanish terpsichore far behind.

CURTAIN CALL

By JACQUE BIEGENWALD

One of the few things that can be absolutely depended upon in this life is that the cast of a rehearsing play will be hungry when the director finally calls, "O.K., take a break." One night this past week, Henry Haas, Jr. brought a good-sized box of doughnuts for the cast of "Sunday in New York," and left them in the Green Room, their sweet aroma wafting enticingly through the wings and onto the stage.

When Executive Director Lonny Fraze finally called for a break at 9:30 after two hours of intensive rehearsal, the cast lost no time getting off the stage. And by 9:31½, there was little left of the box but pasteboard and crumbs too small to count. But, the expressions faces of But, the expression on faces of the cast were happy ones.

VISITORS WELCOME

Someone asked this week if visitors were welcome at rehearsals. The answer is, of course, yes. Every night finds a few on-lookers sitting in the darkened auditorium. Somehow there is an intimate quality about watching a rehearsal from an almost empty theater, almost as though the show were being performed for you alone.

Then, too, it has been this reporter's observation that the final, polished performance of a play with all the trappings of sets and costumes is much more enjoyable if you have watched it develop from awkward and self-conscious reading to the professional perfection it finally becomes. It brings a warm glow of pride and accomplishment, something like watching a child develop from infancy into wholesome maturity.

An original folktale, "Greensleeves' Magic," has been chosen by our play-reading committee for the children's Christmas play. This story, written by Martin Jonson, is bound to appeal to our young audiences, as well as those just young in heart. It has everything children love; music, fantasy, the triumph of good over evil, beautiful costumes and a once-upon-a-time-like theme.

"Greensleeves' Magic," concerns the happenings in a far-off castle, its royal family and their wise minstrel. The playbook says of the plot, "To sing, to laugh, to dance is the theme of young Greensleeves, a gay ballad singer, who teaches the three little princesses how to overcome fear and free the land from the titanic power of the wicked Duchess."

Just as soon as the playbooks arrive, we will announce tryout dates.

INTERESTING CARDS

Richard Clark, our former director, and his wife Pat, who are on a carefree tour of Europe right now, are making many of us green-eyed with envy by their tales via cards and letters. They have traveled through all the Scandinavian countries, Germany, Austria, Italy, and at last report were in Greece. Arthur Griffith, who acted in several plays for Richard, notably as the raffish Alfred Doolittle in "My Fair Lady," received one missile written during their visit to Athens. Richard said he and Pat had walked through the Parthenon by moonlight, and described it as "an awesome experience."

Our backstage crews have been working hard constructing and painting the set for "Sunday in New York," which will open on Dec. 4th. Among those who have wielded the hammer and paintbrush last week are: Bob Crittenden, Donna Barber, Joe Mangin, Bob Evans Jr., and Judy Evans.

BOMBAY CONGRESS

Catholic Magazine Banned In Portugal

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Angered by Pope Paul VI's coming visit to India, Portuguese authorities have shut down a Roman Catholic magazine carrying a story about the Eucharistic Congress in Bombay.

Catholic Portugal considers India an enemy because in 1961 the Indians seized Goa and two other Portuguese enclaves. Officials have banned all mention of the Eucharistic Congress the Pope will attend.

Even though the Vatican confirmed Saturday what had been indicated before, that the Pope will visit only Bombay and will go neither to Goa nor the Indian capital of New Delhi, Portuguese authorities are not appeased.

The November issue of Alem-Mar (Overseas), a magazine of the Combonian missionary order, was ordered withdrawn from circulation although its article on the Congress was written before the ban was announced.

The magazine has been suspended until further notice. The article, headlined "A Congress for India," showed among others a picture of the late Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, who ordered the enclaves seized.

When the Vatican announced recently the Pope would attend the congress next month, the Portuguese government issued an order banning any mention of the conclave in the press, radio or television.

Aware of the Portuguese government's hostility toward the Pope's trip to India, the Vatican was at great pains to emphasize there was nothing political about the journey. The Pontiff himself said he intended his visit to the major Roman Catholic gathering as that of a missionary.

Economic Conditions Better In E. Germany

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Germans are still Germans, even in East Germany, and after the Soviet Union the country looks good. Preston Grover, writer of the following article, recently completed five years as chief of The Associated Press bureau in Moscow.)

By PRESTON GROVER

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's evidence of improving conditions comes as something of a surprise.

For years reports have come out of this ofttimes secret part of Germany that the factories have remained in semi-ruin since the war, that farms were running to weeds after the final collectivization of 1960, and that store shelves were bare.

Many of those reports undoubtedly were once true.

I have just completed a very busy ten-day tour of the country, driving in a rented West German car, visiting manufacturing plants, shipyards, schools old and new, country and city stores, churches old and new apartments, farms and farm houses.

Things are getting better, economically.

BETTER

This country suffers by comparison with West Germany, or any part of West Europe. It looks better when compared to cities and towns in the Soviet Union. East Germans themselves do not try to conceal their envy of West German economic progress. But they don't try to conceal their belief that they are better off than the pioneers of communism in the Soviet Union.

Beginning with 1948 I have visited East Berlin about every two years. It was, and still is, a forlorn place compared with West Berlin.

What is more impressive is the steady buildup in the other part of East Germany. What should be remembered is that Germans are Germans, wherever found. They are hardworking, and handy with tools and brooms. They also like to live well, and they are beginning to do so in East Germany, after a long pause following the war.

It was almost a pity that my tour had to begin with the big Leipzig International Fair, for Leipzig is one of the grayest cities I have ever seen. There is little that is attractive.

After Leipzig, things looked up. With an East German editor as a guide, I headed 175 miles north. Through good-looking villages and past fine farm land we drove, nearly always on good roads. I had asked to stop off at a collective farm to see what had happened in the big collectivization drive of 1960.

The farm we stopped at was northwest of Berlin, around a village named Fahrbidde. It was, of course, a model and the manager, Friedrich Rickmann, conceded with an amiable grin that a fair number of correspondents were directed to it.

FORÇED

When the government in 1960 forced every farmer into these supervised farm groups, there were many cruel scenes. Today, strictly private farming is ended in East Germany.

Yet it is unlike the massive collectivization in the Soviet Union. Rickmann said German farmers never would accept that.

Rickmann united his group before the big drive in 1960. It allows a certain amount of private farming. Thirty families pooled 1.400 acres. Of this, 200 acres are in forest, 500 acres in pasture, and the balance not very good farm land.

Before they pooled their land and labor, the bigger farmers, with 100 to 150 acres and little machinery, couldn't do all their own work. Smaller farmers, with only 10 or 12 acres, couldn't earn a living. So, pushed a little, they came together.

The farmers still hold title to their land and get rent from it from the cooperative, but Rickmann worked it out shrewdly so everybody has to work. No one lives on land rentals. First off, the bigger farmers had to sell much of their land to the smaller farmers or to farm workers invited in on the deal. Each worker in a family could keep about 35 acres of farm land. In addition, 19 of the 30 families have some private pasture land on which they raise pigs and cattle. Most of the livestock belongs to the individual farmers.

WORK HARD

Every farmer must work 210 days a year or he gets no rental payment for his land. For his wages, he is paid 16 marks or $4 a work-day unit and a good worker can easily do one and a half units in eight hours. Some do three units in a long day.

Women must work 60 days, but a man can work all 270 days and save his wife from doing farm work. Unlike in the Soviet Union the women do only light farm work at Rickmann's.

Both little and big farmers now work full time for the cooperative, and Rickmann said there was no grumbling.

Rickmann said they were all doing better and the collective was building up reserves for more buildings and livestock purchases. Five families were on vacation in the southern mountains during a lull in the harvesting.

When the collective was formed, Rickmann was the only one in the group with an automobile. Now 11 members own automobiles.

NTERGRUNDMESSE

EAST GERMANY a diplomatic stepchild refused recognition by the West, is making progress economically, a recent visitor found. This is Old Market Square in Leipzig during this fall's big international fair which Leipzig has been running for 800 years. The United States was represented among the 6,500 exhibitors from 58 countries, but no Western nation put on an official show. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

New Lord Mayor Adds Pageantry To Office Taking

LONDON (AP) — Medieval pageantry paraded through the wet streets of London Saturday as the new lord mayor rode from the City to the Law Courts to be sworn in.

The new lord mayor, Alderman Sir James Miller, rode in a gilt state coach pulled by four horses. It was driven by a high-sitting coachman in red livery and cocked hat. Around the coach marched men of the Company of Pikemen and Musketeers in their traditional medieval uniforms.

Miller is the City of London's 637th lord mayor since King John, of Magna Carta fame, conceded in 1215 the right of the citizens to elect a mayor.

In modern times the City of London elects a new mayor every year. This year's mayor is a member of the Worshipful Company of Coachmakers and Coach Harness Makers. That was why transport was chosen as the theme of this procession, which included 110 cars, one dating back to 1894.

The lord mayor of London has traditional jurisdiction over that square-mile area of the city that was once surrounded by massive walls.

THIS FIVE-BEDROOM house avoids the boxy appearance of some two-story houses by clever exterior designing, with emphasis on covered front portico and harmonious roof lines to create the illusion of length.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

2-Story, 5-Bedroom House Avoids A 'Vertical Look'

A five-bedroom house that answers the needs of complete suburban living?

No trouble at all for the architect if he has a large plot with which to work. But if the house must go on a modest piece of ground, extra care must be exercised to create a two-story structure that will not have a boxy look.

Architect Herman York has done an excellent job of providing an optical illusion of length in a five-bedroom house with dimensions of 50' by 39', foregoing the necessity of having an oversize lot. A wide, portico front entrance, extending across most of the house, creates a long line that puts the emphasis on the horizontal. Adding to the appearance of length at the front of the house is the combining of the portico roof line with that of the two - car garage.

ATTENTION

Much attention has been given by York in this latest House of the Week to another desirable feature — a good circulation pattern. If all the first floor rooms are considered as the spokes of a wheel, the kitchen is the hub, serving as the control center for all family living situations. It is a few steps to all the rooms, open to the family room and conveniently located for outdoor barbecue parties on the private rear terrace. Also, it has an unusual corner sink as part of an efficient travel triangle from the range to the refrigerator.

The adjoining family room connects with a screened porch through sliding glass doors, making both areas visually larger. The porch might later be fully enclosed and heated for use as a den.

SURVEYS INDICATE

Consumer surveys indicate a desire for bow windows. Design H-57 has two, one in the dinette, and one in the living room. This latter room, located directly to the right of the front foyer, has a fireplace with a window at each side of it. From the bow window at the front, one can look through the dining room to the rear of the house, a 33' 4" view.

The laundry room is tucked neatly into the service area, with a clothes chute from an upstairs bathroom, a hamper, a broom closet and space for an ironing board. Handy to this area is a mud closet, a wash-up lavatory and a toilet.

The upstairs bedroom level has been designed to take care of a large family but, if desired one of the bedrooms can be used for other purposes. For example the nursery might be used instead for a television room or a study area. There are two bathrooms. The one off the hall is shown in a split arrangement with three lavatories. Thus, three children could use this facility at one time. All clothes closets have bi-fold doors, which take up less space when swung open.

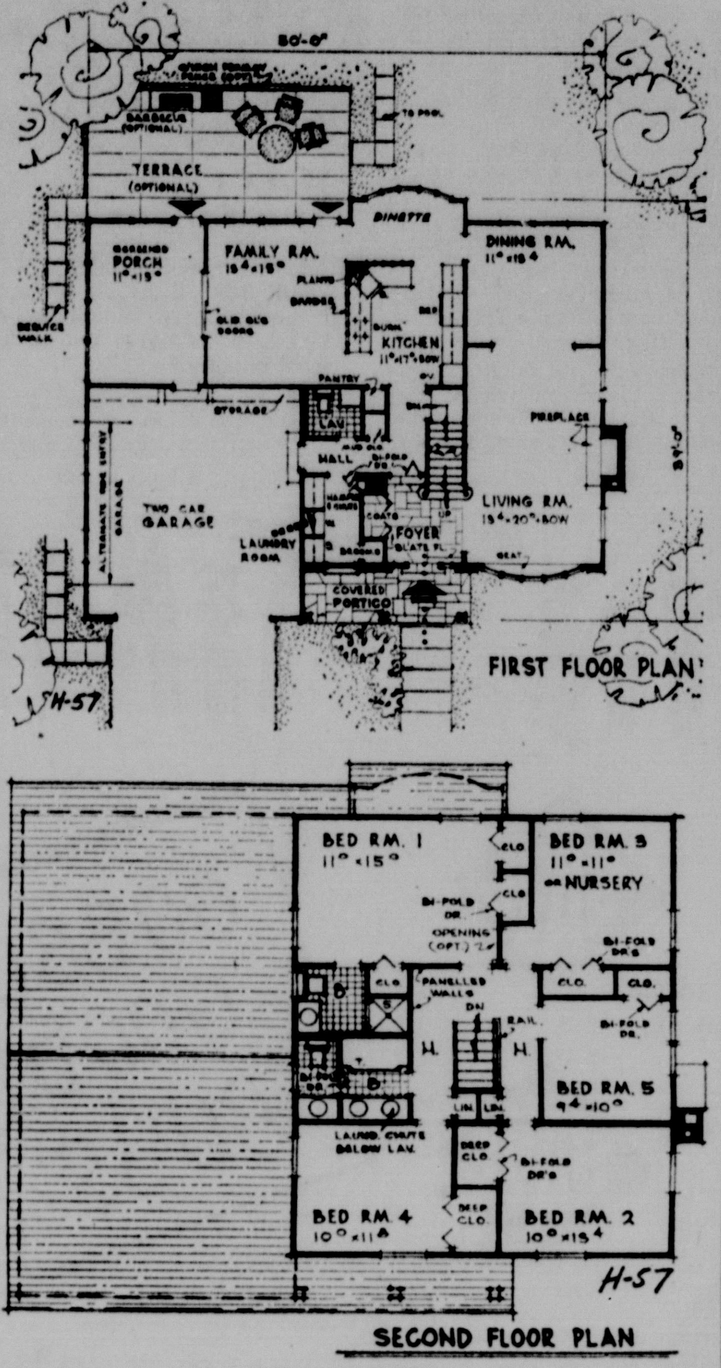
SUBSTITUTE

While the design shows stone as a facing material for the lower story at the front, brick could be substituted without hurting the horizontal character of the house. However, the architect points out that, while accent color can be put into the front door and shutters, it should be done with restraint.

The two-car garage provides room at the rear for power equipment. An alternate side entry to the garage is shown. This is desirable only if there is sufficient "swing-in" space (a minimum of 30') for a car to be driven in.

Despite the modest and previously-mentioned over-all dimensions of this house, there are 2104 square feet of habitable area. And that doesn't include the covered portico screened porch or garage.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan H-57.



FLOOR PLANS: Excellent traffic pattern is feature of this two-story house, with living area radiating around kitchen, and with five bedrooms on the second floor.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG

Ceiling tiles are easy to apply as well as being decorative — which explains their continued popularity with do-it-yourselfers. But don't overlook other ways in which the ceilings of extra rooms can be made attractive.

For a luxury look, wood paneling can't be beat. Some interesting effects can be obtained with plywood, especially with striated squares. Gypsum board makes an inexpensive ceiling. Hardboard produces a smooth ceiling and is easy to paint. Wallpaper is very effective. Textured fabrics also can be used; even ordinary canvas is striking in certain types of playrooms. There are dozens of ways to make a ceiling attractive or different or both — or whatever you want it to be.

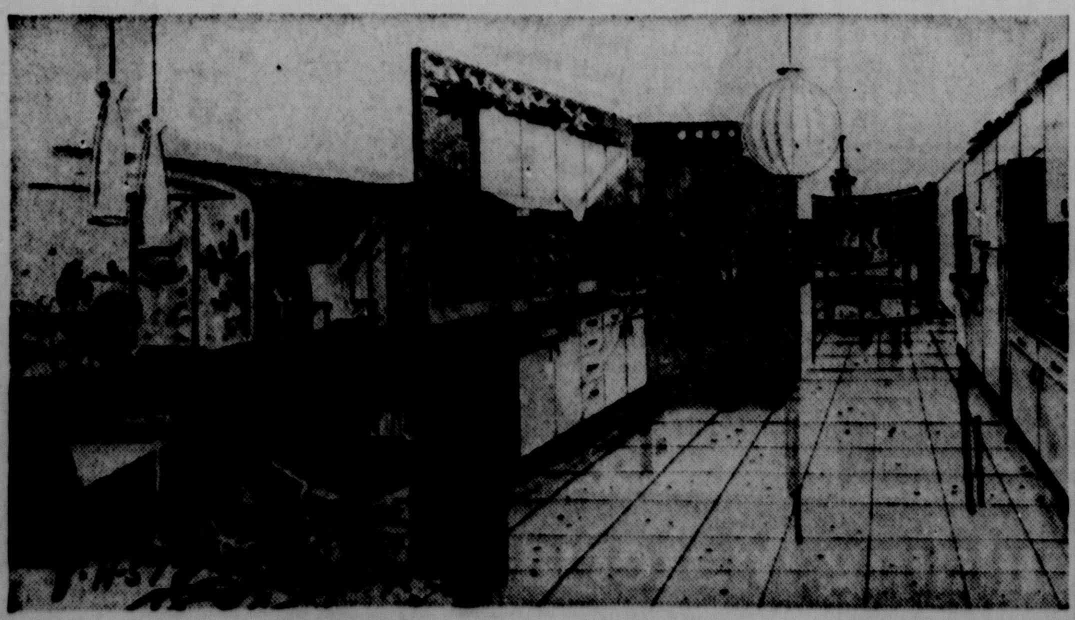
Painting wicker furniture with a brush can be a tedious job because of the extra care that must be taken to see that paint gets to all the strands of wickerwork. A much better way to paint wicker furniture is with a sprayer. It does not have to be a large one. Any of the small, inexpensive ones will do. But be sure the paint is thinned just right.

Too thick a mixture will clog the sprayer; too thin will cause the paint to run. Do the spraying outdoors and keep the item being sprayed on a bench or table. If you keep it on the ground, the air pressure from the sprayer will disturb the dust and spoil the result.

Cutting foam rubber with a scissors will be easier if the blades of the scissors are occasionally dipped in water. When you are cutting foam rubber in order to put fabric over it, cut the rubber about one-quarter of an inch oversize.

When doing any puttying, keep handy a small pad of steel wool moistened with linseed oil. Clean the blade of the putty knife with the steel wool. As you continue with the puttying, wipe off the knife frequently. This serves a double purpose. It keeps the blade clean and it provides a small but constant supply of linseed oil to the putty making it easier to work and preventing it from drying out too quickly.

A wooden block used as a backing for sandpaper is not practical when sanding a curved surface. Back the sand paper with a kitchen sponge and you'll find that it will conform to the surface being sanded.



IS THERE ANY HOUSEWIFE who wouldn't appreciate a kitchen like this, with [illegible] dinette at the rear and attractive family room at the left?

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Good Season For Mums

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

Everyone agrees this has been a wonderful season for chrysanthemums. Do you suppose we feel this way every year about this time? It truly seems that they are lovelier, larger, more colorful now than ever before.

The many flower shows featuring mums have been crowded with visitors who admit this was the "best" yet. So it seemed in Oak Grove Nov. 10. The yearly show "Chrsysanthemum Round Up" third annual mum show staged in the Bank of Oak Grove, was truly larger, and created greater interest in the growing of this fabulous flower.

Last Wednesday's show for the Fifth District Garden Center was presented by the Rayville Garden Club. Mrs. R. L. Walters, club president, with several of the members brought six excellent designs featuring mums in at least three of them.

These interpreted the Thanksgiving theme. Someone asked, "Were the mums for Thanksgiving or Thanksgiving for the mums?" They are truly typical of the season, especially when combined with fruits and vegetables, or grains and nuts. The textures and colors just blend with fall colors.

Two ladies, Mrs. Gertrude Hallack and Mrs. W. D. Byrd, Jr., placed the slender equisedium (horsetail rush) in a tall, brown, pottery compote to form the modified Hogarth design. Creamy white spider mums filled in this line against a background of hydrangea leaves. Green grapes hung from the edge of the container to finish the lower line. A smaller cluster was placed at the foot of the container as an accessory. The whole design was placed on a soft tan wooden base.

SHALLOW BOWL

Mrs. David Burk Sr. used a round, shallow neutral colored bowl for her container for the massed cresent design. The line was made of dried okra sprayed antique gold. The entire line was massed with spray mums in colors of golden yellow to bronze. Japanese yew filled in. The design was placed on a woven straw mat (round) which added the final touch to the "Thanksgiving" table design.

Mrs. R. L. Walters used the banana stalk with one unopened leaf for the vertical placement in a frosted green glass compote. The use of all colorful foliage was the object of her design. The secondary line was established with maroon and chartreuse colored coleus, accented to one side with a cluster of Jacob's coat. Three looped leaves of the banana plant filled in the other side and gave depth as well as interest to the design. A walnut cresent shaped wooden base was added for proper balance.

LAMP BASE

Mrs. James Whitman created a container using the base of an old kerosene lamp. Coloring (green) was added to the water to give a heavier appearance and color harmony with her plant materials which consisted of a line (cresent) made of clipped pine with small baby ivy place within this line to accent and act as a filler. Yellow-green leaves (small) from the hydrangea formed a background for the golden marigolds which were placed as the focal interest. The whole design was placed on a dull black wooden (cresent shaped) base.

"For Thanksgiving," was the title of the design by Mrs. Gertrude Hallack. The line was massed- diagonal made of variegated auonymous accented with the Huntsman spray mums. The container was made from an old lamp base sprayed with antique white paint. The focal interest was created with clusters of green and gold squash peppers. All of these materials are long lasting and could be made to last through the Thanksgiving week. Ideal for the entrance hall or the dining buffet.

The last design was made by Mrs. David Burk Sr. and Mrs. James Whitman, proving their patriotism — typical for Veteran's Day, a color scheme of red, white, and blue was cleverly woven into their design which featured a vertical line made of one white glad (buds) filled in with white mums, down into a cluster of red salvia which formed the basic part of the design made in a tall, blue ceramic container. A black wrought iron stand held the vase, adding weight. The whole design was placed on a rectangular black base for proper balance. A miniature confederate flag was placed to one side as an accessory. It was a wonderful program with a thoughtful ending, commemorating the special day, "Veteran's Day."

Wednesday, watch for the program by Dr. John Wright, Louisiana Tech. LGCF Flower Show Judges remember the meeting date, Wednesday, Nov. 18. Be sure to come to your Fifth District Judges Council meeting at 2 p.m. in the Julia Wossman Recreation Center, 3900 Westminister, Monroe. The program, "Ethics of Judging," should prove interesting. Each judge is requested to submit constructive criticism or helpful praise, thus taking a part in this program which is to benefit our growing council. Bring your question or critism written, unsigned, for the program box, or mail to Mrs. John Tolar, 501 Sherrouse Ave., Monroe.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Red Berries For Autumn

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Southern nurseries are full of gorgeous hollies with red berries this Autumn. Each season sees more and more of the fine named varieties of hollies appearing in nurseries and on plant stands as gardeners become more and more interested in these red berried trees.

The pioneer in hollies in the South was Dr. Harold Hume of the University of Florida at Gainesville. Dr. Hume, the botanist, began to find unusually beautiful trees in North Florida back at the beginning of this century.

We gardeners of today have benefitted by his early association with the old Glen St. Mary Nurseries where his discoveries were introduced and originally propagated. Today, most Southern nurseries offer some or all of Dr. Hume's fine hollies.

'HUME NUMBER 2'

Nurseries and botanic gardens usually label all the plants sent to them by the same botanist or collector with his name. They then simply affix a number to each plant received from him in sequence. If any of these plants turn out to be different enough from other varieties and worthy of cultivation, they are then given a name and introduced as novelties. Sometimes, however, plants being tested out are sent out to nurseries and botanic gardens for further testing under the name and number of the collector or discoverer. When Hume No. 1 and Hume No. 2 were sent to Southern nurseries, it was Hume No. 2 that carried off the laurels and became popular at once. By then, it was too late to give it a name. "Hume No. 2" it was, and "Hume No. 2." it has been ever since.

NO NOVELTY

Hume No. 2, which we have described several times in the column, has been grown at Glen St. Mary since 1909, so you can see that it is no novelty by now, even though many gardeners have never seen one. In one of last year's columns, we discussed the great popularity of East Palatka because of the amazing crops of berries this variety produces. This one has been grown since 1926.

'Garden IQ' Tests Show Odd Results

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

What is your garden IQ? A garden chemical and equipment company recently polled 400 homeowners and came up with some low-powered results and strange answers.

Only 9 per cent knew the significance of the numbers in the various fertilizer preparations—nitrogen, phosphorous and potash. Three per cent were aware of the purpose of each of these elements.

Many gardeners depend on their fertilizer supplier to furnish the proper formula, after explaining their needs, and usually get what they require. For instance, 5-10-5 on the bag of fertilizer means 5 per cent nitrogen, 10 per cent phosphorous and 5 per cent potash.

We've described the benefits from each of the elements in the past, but they warrant repeating.

Nitrogen is one of the essentials for plant growth. It is especially necessary to build rich, green leavy vegetables and lawns.

COMPOSITION

Ordinary air is composed roughly of 78 per cent nitrogen, 20 per cent oxygen, 1 per cent argon and .03 of 1 per cent carbon dioxide. The carbon dioxide is of great importance to the leaf, which through its pores absorbs the air with the carbon dioxide being absorbed by the cells of chlorophyll, the green coloring matter of leaves.

If leaves turn yellow, it is an indication of lack of nitrogen.

Often gardeners will give their plants a side dressing of nitrates as a booster.

Phosphorous promotes vigorous fruits, seeds, rugged branches, stems and roots and speeds maturity of plants. It abets cell division, as when you plant a bean or kernel of corn.

Potash is necessary in producing starches and sugars. It helps vigor, growth and color and builds resistance to disease. It is very desirable for root crops.

A good general purpose combination is 5-10-5 in dry fertilizer, and 15-30-15 in water soluble fertilizer.

Water soluble fertilizers cost more but give faster results. A benefit from water soluble plant foods is lessened danger of burning plants, especially grass, since they are applied with water.

TRACE ELEMENTS

Trace elements also are important in fertilizers.

These soil vitamins provide necessary minerals often lacking in soil.

For instance iron helps grow sturdy plants, encourages chlorophyll formation; copper helps plants use nitrogen more effectively and promotes growth; boron helps form strong buds and fruit, increases root growth; managese promotes faster, sturdier growth; zinc gives strength and helps in utilization of other nutrients; manganese and molybdenum help set seeds and blossoms and boost chlorophyll production; sulphur aids in the protein formation of plants, and calcium strengthens roots and plant cells.

But back to the poll.

About 20 per cent of those quizzed did not know what aerating involved, or why it improved lawns. One man thought it means spraying the lawn with an air hose.

Good Shade Tree Species

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, need a good shade tree consider these: Red maple requires moist, loamy soil; tulip tree a very large upright grower and a very fine native tree; oaks there are several varieties from which to choose, all are relatively slow growers, but very reliable; mimosa is a very fast grower, but somewhat short lived; ginkgo excellent for fall color, slow grower, medium sized; elm relatively fast grower with shallow fibrous root system; Chinese tallow is small fast grower, with low branches, excellent for fall color; sycamore large fast grower, needs to be in a large space, but many people object to the leaves falling over a long period.

SPACE NEEDED

After selecting your tree do a good job of planting. In planting, dig a hole large enough for natural spread of roots, and be sure to keep the roots moist while out of the ground. Replace subsoil in hole with good top soil high in humus. Plant the tree about two inches deeper than it grew before transplanting. Prune about one third of the branches so the roots will be able to feed the remaining top. Cut the branches next to stem or trunk so as not to destroy natural form of the trees. Water the tree weekly with good soaking.

OUT OF TOWN

Your home demonstration agent and associate agent, Donna M. Moore, will join the 26 other agents from Louisiana and attending the national meeting of Home Demonstration Agents in Washington November 13-21. It is expected that there will be approximately 1,500 in attendance at this meeting.

DID YOU KNOW

The food bill now takes 18½ per cent of the housewife's family paycheck — the lowest ever.

Rhode Island economists says trading stamps are inefficient and costly to consumers and retailers. In a study of 185 dry grocery items before and after, stamps prices increased 3.6 per cent and consumers paid a net increase of 2 per cent more.

Who bought the farm land last year? Of all farms sold, owner operators bought 54 per cent, tenants 15 per cent, retired farmers 6 per cent and non farmers 25 per cent.

DINING SPACE

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, are planning to build or remodel and need to figure dining area, her are tips to help you. Allow twenty one to twenty four inches of table space for each adult. The minimum size table at which eight adults can sit comfortably is 40 by 72 inches. A round table, 42 inches in diameter is the minimum for four people and 48 inches in diameter for six. You should allow 36 inches between the wall or a piece of furniture and the table to get by a seated person. Serving requires 44 inches from table to wall but only 32 inches is needed for rising from a chair at the table.

New Tax Cuts In 1965 Would Spur Economy

NEW YORK (AP) — The possibility of further tax cuts was held out this week as a spur to the economy in 1965.

President Johnson said he would ask that excise taxes producing $550 million a year be repealed. The proposed tax cut may go even deeper.

The taxes that he wants to wipe out are those paid by consumers when they purchase cosmetics, toiletries, jewelry, furs, luggage and pocketbooks.

Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon, announcing the plan, said the program definitely will include repeal of the $550 million a year in consumer excises "as well as action on a number, a good number, of other excise taxes."

Dillon said these additional cuts might involve taxes levied at the manufacturing level but passed on to consumers.

They cover such items as radio and television sets, phonographs, home appliances, musical instruments, cameras and photographic equipment, ball point pens and lighters.

Dillon said over-all cuts would be held under $4 billion. The various excise taxes produce about $15 billion a year.

The extent of the cuts will depend in part on the state of the economy next year.

The taxes at the retail level have been in effect since the Korean war or longer.

On another front, General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers cleaned up their disputes at all local plants and signed a national three-year contract.

The action put GM back into full swing in car production, which had been halted for a month by a general strike and another month by local work stoppages. It was estimated that the strike cost GM the production of 400,000 cars.

Ford, which earlier reached a national agreement with the union, encountered trouble at the local level. The UAW struck five parts plants and four assembly plants employing 25,000 of the company's 160,000 hourly workers.

This cut Ford's car production. If the strikes continue, all of Ford's operations would be shut down because of parts shortages.

Ford shut down its Lorain, Ohio, plant because parts were exhausted. It furloughed some workers at other plants.

UAW strikes spread to companies other than the big automakers. They closed White Motor Co. and Mack Trucks, Inc. Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co., manufacturer of industrial and farm machinery, also was hit.

Meanwhile, with GM back in full production, auto output for this week recovered and was estimated at 175,900 cars, up 13 per cent from 154,930 built last week and just short of the 175,923 a year ago. GM scheduled 94,358 car assemblies, compared with 60,484 last week. However, Ford's production was down 23 per cent from last week to 36,449 cars.

Elsewhere on the labor scene the Association of Western Pulp & Paper Workers called a strike against 48 West Coast pulp and paper plants.

Steel production dipped last week for the first time in five weeks. Output totaled 2,634,000 tons, compared with 2,644,000 the previous week.

For the year production amounted to 107,445,000 tons against 94,960,000 last year, a gain of 13.1 per cent.

The University of Michigan Research Survey Center reported that a substantial demand for goods by consumers should give the economy a boost during the Christmas season and again next spring. The center said it found Americans optimistic about the economy.

The Commerce Department estimated that retail sales declined 3 per cent in October, primarily because of a drop in sales of automobiles.

The Federal Reserve Board said consumer installment credit increased $513 million in September, the highest since March. The August increase was $435 million.

Price increases were announced for automobile batteries, printing paper used in magazines and catalogues, paint and copper.

Cash dividends on common stock paid in the first nine months of this year by companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange increased by $853 million, or 10 per cent, over the like 1963 period. Payments amounted to $9,421,167,640 against $8,568,508,810 a year earlier.

WOULD ABOLISH TAX

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., plans to introduce during the next session of Congress a constitutional amendment which would abolish poll taxes in state as well as federal elections.

The 24th Amendment banned the payment of poll taxes as a condition for voting in federal—but not state—elections. Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi and Texas still require payment of a poll tax to vote in state elections.

Apartment Tops Building Permits

The largest sum of money involved in building permits in Monroe for the week ending Nov. 13 was for an apartment building to be constructed, totaling $600,000, Dale B. Martha, coordinator of the Building Inspector's Office, reported.

The permit was issued for Woodlawn Manor Apartments. The apartments will actually be ten two-story brick veneer buildings containing a total of 88 units at 1600 Erin and 1700 Shannon. Two mechanical buildings will also be constructed near the main structures.

Grain Futures Trade Erratic; Gains Modest

CHICAGO (AP) — Trading in grain futures last week was rather erratic, but soybeans and most cereals finished with modest gains for the period.

The volume of trade was larger than in several weeks, with soybeans far ahead of the grains. Soybean volume was 278 million bushels, compared with 57 million bushels of corn and 43 million bushels of wheat.

At the close of trading Friday soybeans were ⅛ to 3⅝ cents a bushel higher than a week ago. Wheat was up ⅜ to 3¾ cents, corn was 1 cent higher to 1⅜ cents lower, oats 1 cent higher to ⅜ lower and rye ended 1⅛ to 2 cents a bushel higher.

Soybeans turned sharply lower Wednesday after the government estimated the current crop would total 701.5 million bushels, a figure that came as a shock to most traders. The trade had expected a downward revision, rather than an increase, from the previous estimate of 698.5 million bushels.

But the market rebounded on news that Spain's olive oil production apparently would hit a record low this year and most of the early loss was recovered.

Filipino Invites Pope To Country

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — President Diosdado Macapagal formally invited Pope Paul VI Saturday to visit the Philippines next year to mark the 400th anniversary of the founding of Christianity in that country.

The invitation was conveyed by the president's special envoy, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs Librado Cayco, during a half-hour audience with the pontiff at the Vatican.

Cayco stopped over in Geneva en route to London.

Stocks Drop On Average Third Week

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market declined on average last week for the third straight week.

While the popular averages took moderate losses, however, the list of 1,542 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange showed gainers exceeding losers by 771 to 596.

This reflected an underlying optimism even while the blue chips which compose the well known market indicators declined on balance.

The market backdrop was somewhat unencouraging. Although the prolonged strike at General Motors was finally over, it was reported that GM cars now streaming into the show rooms were not getting as glad a reception as had been expected. Meanwhile, scattered plant strikes at Ford poised a new threat to one of autodom's Big Three.

Steels again suffered under the shadow of President Johnson's reported concern lest steel industry.

Another strike threat appeared this Monday for the railroads.

On the other hand, consumer buying intentions were reported unusually strong and this boded well for the Christmas shopping season as well as next spring's shopping spree. Retail and mail order stocks were among the gainers.

Drug stocks also were bought on the grounds that some type of Medicare legislation is likely to pass the next session of congress in view of the big Democratic majority.

The Dow Jones industrial average last week declined 2.76 to 874.11.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks fell 1.4 to 328.1.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange was 23,493,150 shares compared with 18,411,050 in the prior week which was shortened by election day.

Bond prices moved up in all sectors of the market during the past week as retail trading picked up.

Volume for the week totaled a par value of $45.192 million, despite the partial holiday on Veterans Day. The total was well ahead of the previous week—also a holiday week — when volume totaled $37.919 million.

Cotton Futures Hold To Narrow Range In Prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices of domestic cotton futures held to a narrow range this week, closing 20 cents a bale higher to 20 cents lower than the week before.

There were no sales of world cotton futures on the New York Cotton Exchange.

The previous week, domestic futures closed 25 cents a bale higher to 80 cents lower.

The government's estimate of an October cotton crop of 15,444,000 bales was not a market factor. Crop gains during the month in the Eastern and Central cotton belts more than offset small losses elsewhere and the 170,000 — bale increase in the forecast had been expected in trade quarters.

Cotton exports totaled 88,000 bales in the week ended Tuesday, compared with 27,000 bales the previous week. However, for the season through Nov. 10, exports totaled 544,000 bales, compared with 1,150,000 at the same time last year.

Oil Institute Will Unveil New Format

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Petroleum Institute unveiled its new format this week

The trade group that represents all segments of the domestic petroleum industry streamlined its organizational setup and objectives.

"Greater emphasis will be placed upon information and education efforts," said J. Ed. Warren, the institute's board chairman who has headed a reorganization study group since mid-1963.

"The purpose will be to generate better public understanding of the industry's achievements and of the political and economic conditions required for the industry to make its maximum contributions to society," said Warren who is president of the Cities Service Co., New York City.

One of the first results of the new format was streamlining this week's 44th annual meeting by removing all technical discussions from the three-day program and cutting the number of committee sessions from 150 to less than 50.

All technical discussions have been transferred to the midyear meetings of the institute's production, refining, marketing and transportation divisions.

The streamlining cut this week's attendance to 3,122—compared with 5,456 last year and a record 6,605 in 1959—but the new program drew general approval from most of the independent and major operators present.

Directors of the institute approved the new organization chart that features expanded Washington operations.

PISA'S PRIDE

Tower In Danger Of Finishing Fall

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — An Italian research scientist warned the government Saturday the Leaning Tower of Pisa may fall down at any moment.

Prof. Gustavo Colonnetti, president-emeritus of the National Research Council, said even a violent windstorm might blow down the 184-foot white marble tower.

The Italian Ministry of Public Works said Prof. Colonnetti's warning and report on the condition of the tilting tower had been received and would be examined by Public Works Minister Giacomo Mancini as soon as he returns from a trip.

The Tower of Pisa now slants almost 11 feet off true perpendicular. The tilt has increased by a quarter of an inch in the past 45 years.

Fears for the future of the tower have been expressed for decades, but most experts have predicted that even at the present increasing rate of tilt the tower should stand for at least another century.

Prof. Colonnetti said in an interview with the Florence newspaper La Nazione, however, that the peril has become imminent because the base is beginning to oscillate when the 14,000-ton tower is swept by strong winds.

The white-bearded research scientist, who has spent much time in private studies of the tower, said this oscillation was first noted Oct. 13.

Colonnetti said measurements at that time showed an oscillation of the base of the tower which continued for more than six hours.

"These oscillations must be considered alarming," he said. "The vibrations which are transferred to the sandy oil layer beneath the tower could cause a shifting of the sands. This might even be helpful in leveling the soil at the foundation if the weight (of the tower above) was uniformly distributed and not excessive.

"But under a weight superior to (these) limits and distributed in an irregular manner, there is no doubt that such phenomena could, instead, result in fractures with the shifting of the sands from the zone under heaviest pressure toward that under lesser weight."

In his report, Colonnetti recommended:

1. That no one be allowed in or immediately around the tower during windstorms.

2. That no further work be allowed on or near the foundation of the tower which might in any way "alter the precarious balance."

3. That emergency scaffolding or any other available bracing materials be prepared and kept ready for urgent positioning in case of any alarm.

"And it is beyond doubt," he added, "that if some such apparatus is not used promptly the tower will fall in the shortest period of time and nothing will be able to prevent it."

The tower was started in 1173 when Pisa was one of Italy's powerful maritime republics. The sandy soil began to give way beneath one side when the tower was barely half completed. Work was stopped, but was resumed in 1275 and the tower was finished in 1284.

Last February the city of Pisa asked the government to spend $1.12 million on a plan to tilt the tower back just a little, not enough to spoil its tourist attraction, just enough to keep it standing longer. The project was not adopted.

Heller Resigns LBJ Economic Advisers Post

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson accepted Saturday the resignation of Walter W. Heller as chairman of his Council of Economic Advisers and named Gardner Ackley, a council member, to succeed him.

Heller, who is returning to his professorship at the University of Minnesota, had held the council chairmanship since January 1961. He had been wanting to return to Minnesota for some time but agreed several months ago to stay in Washington until after the Nov. 3 election.

Ackley, on leave from the University of Michigan economics department, has been a council member since August 1962.

Heller's departure left a vacancy on the three-man council. To fill this gap, Johnson appointed Arthur M. Okun, a member of the council's staff for the past two months.

The third member is Otto Eckstein.

Ackley, 49, is an Indianapolis native who was educated at Western State Teachers College, Michigan, and the University of Michigan. On the council, his specialties have been monetary policy, balance of payments and economic growth. He is married and has two sons.

MONROE HOTEL, built in 1880, was the principal hostelry in the city at that time and was considered the social center of the entire area. Rates were on the American plan, ranging from $2 to $3.50 per day. In those days, Charles L. Bradley was manager of "the show place of Monroe." At first there were 70 rooms and a short time later a 60-room annex made it the largest hotel between New Orleans and Little Rock. Part of the old building is still standing on South Grand and is now known as the Manor Hotel, adjacent to the Penn Resort Hotel. A portion of the old hotel was torn down in 1957 and the remaining part remodeled for a number of people, many retired, still wishing to stay there. According to Charles H. Penn, many of the original cypress beams, still in perfect condition, remain in the Manor Hotel. The Penn Resort Hotel was built on part of the site in 1930. If you have an interesting scene depicting life of the yesteryear in the Monroe area bring it or send it, along with all available information, to this newspaper.

Rail Service Case

OPELOUSAS, La. AP — A hearing on a proposal by two railroads to end daytime train service between New Orleans and Houston, Tex., moves to Houston Monday.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, which is considering the application from the Missouri Pacific and Illinois Central railroads, heard testimony this week in New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Opelousas.

Louisiana Public Service Commissioner Ernest S. Clements Friday said discontinuance of the service would be a hardship on patrons.

He opposed the proposed discontinuance on grounds "the public convenience and necessity required the service."

The railroads seek to end service because they say they are losing money.

Russians Claim All-Out Attempts To Settle Fued

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Soviet Union said Saturday it was "making all efforts" to resolve the U.N. financial deadlock.

But it reiterated its old stand against paying for peacekeeping operations.

Ambassador Nikolai T. Fedorenko, head of the Soviet delegation, states his government's position in a letter written on instructions from Premier Alexia N. Kosygin and made public by the delegation.

It raised hopes of heading off a U.S.-Soviet clash when the General Assembly convenes Dec. 1.

Fedorenko gave the letter Friday to Chief S.O. Adebo of the Nigerian delegation, who wrote U.S., Soviet, French and British leaders on Nov. 4 asking them to promote a settlement of the deadlock.

Adebo heads a 21-nation working group that is trying to agree on how to finance future peacekeeping operations.

That job is complicated by a Soviet-U.S. stalemate over whether the Soviet Union should lose its Assembly vote for refusing to pay Assembly assessments for past operations in the Congo and the Middle East.

President Johnson had Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson reply to Adebo Monday that the United States was willing "to discuss the issue with anyone at any time" and consider "any number of possible ways" to settle it.

Friday, Stevenson told reporters "voluntary payments in any form" would be acceptable to handle the $14 million deficit caused by the refusal of the Russians and others to pay the peacekeeping assessments.

Diplomatic sources said Fedorenko had already rejected that idea. But some declared that the rejection was not final and the idea was still alive.

Food Shortage Plaques India

NEW DELHI (AP) — The food crisis in most of India's hungry regions will be "tided over" in two weeks, Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri said Saturday. He added that wholesale grain dealers the government blames for creating artificial scarcities will not be allowed to do it again.

Shastri said Kerala State — worst hit by food shortages — needed 40,000 tons of grain to tide over the present crisis. It would all be supplied by the central government, he said.

A bumper winter crop was beginning to come on the market, he added, and this would enable the nation to recover from the shortages.

Shastri blamed opposition parties for exploiting the food situation for political ends.

FROM ATLANTA TO SEA

Sherman's March In 1864 Recalled

ATLANTA (AP) — When Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman began his devastating march through Georgia 100 years ago, he promised to make Georgia howl.

On Nov. 15, 1864, more than 60,000 soldiers watched Atlanta burn. Sherman supervised the destruction. As the troops marched out of the city, the 33rd Massachusetts band played.

Sherman didn't leave until the next morning when the 14th Corps pulled out. Another band played and the troops sang, "Glory, Glory Hallelujah."

"We turned our horses' heads to the east," Sherman wrote later. "Atlanta was soon lost behind the screen of trees and became a thing of the past that seemed like the memory of a dream."

PART

The march was a part of the Georgia campaign and was a major contribution to the end of the Civil War.

The march actually was begun in May, when Sherman began his move on Atlanta from Chattanooga. Before the year ended, Sherman had blazed a path of destruction to the Atlantic Ocean, cutting the Confederate States of America in two.

Atlanta was left smouldering — virtually destroyed. Only about 60 families remained. The city's earlier population had been more than 20,000.

When the Confederates under Gen. John Bell Hood abandoned Atlanta Sept. 1, they blew up locomotives, a foundry was set afire and ammunition which could not be moved hurriedly was exploded.

Sherman occupied the city for about two months, and finally telegraphed Gen. U.S. Grant that the Confederates were so harassing him that it was impossible to protect the roads around Atlanta.

"The utter destruction of their roads, houses and people will cripple their military resources," he said. "I can make this march and make Georgia howl."

What the Confederates had left of Atlanta, Sherman destroyed when he abandoned the city.

Sherman's army moved in four columns, cutting a path to Savannah about 40 miles wide and 250 miles long. He had about 63,000 infantrymen and artillerymen and about 5,000 cavalrymen. Only a few thousand Georgia militiament stood in his way.

The Union army contrived a foraging system whereby the troops lived off the land.

There were no sick or weakened soldiers in Sherman's army, because the force had to move swiftly. It had no supply line; the men took whatever they could lay their hands on.

The rich Georgia farm belt fed the Yankees and the southern economy collapsed.

Sherman concentrated on the destruction of rail lines. He ordered factories, shops and warehouses burned. He ordered anything of military value destroyed.

The army was composed of the toughest of the lot and to them the destruction became a lark. They fought a little, pillaged a great deal, looted, stole whisky, started fires and burned their way to the seas.

Moving in the wake of Sherman was a menace as great as that of the soldiers — the stragglers, the no-goods of both sides of the war. In most cases they took anything the regulars left behind.

The rich plantations suffered most because they had the most to lose. But the soldiers and stragglers as well carried a strange honor with them, there were few cases of rape or murder.

When Sherman moved out of Atlanta, Confederate Gen. Howell Cobb called on "every man that Confederate and state authorities can put in the field to meet this force."

But there was no organized force to oppose the Union onslaught. The South had used up its manpower. Young and old had long gone to war.

For his plan to succeed, Sherman needed a seaport, as the old base at Chattanooga had to be abandoned and the practical separation of the Carolinas from the gulf states could be accomplished by the destruction of the railroads in Georgia.

The general line of Sherman's march was between the Ocmulgee and Oconee rivers, although he sent his right wing at first along the Macon Railroad to deceive the enemy cavalry under Gen. Joseph Wheeler. The greatest distance between the advancing forces was never more than 50 miles.

At Milledgeville, the Georgia legislature pictured Sherman as an ogre, and called on the people "to die free men rather than live slaves."

Gov. Joseph E. Brown fled Milledgeville, then the capital, just ahead of the Union army. In the panic that followed, opponents to Brown's state's right policies took advantage of the situation. Ambrose Ransom Wright, president of the Senate (and also a Confederate general), issued a proclamation from Augusta declaring himself ex-officio governor of the part of Georgia east of the Oconee river. The proclamation was no more than a gesture.

Savannah was defended by only 18,000 men, and when Ft. McAllister fell Dec. 13, Sherman had communications with the Union fleet.

Sherman entered Savannah Dec. 23, and sent these holiday greetings to President Lincoln:

"I beg to present to you as a Christmas gift the city of Savannah with 150 heavy guns and plenty of ammunition, and also about 25,000 bales of cotton."

In his official report, Sherman estimated the damage to Georgia and its military resources as a result of his march at $100 million.

Sales Tax Opposed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Real Estate Board of New Orleans Saturday reiterated its opposition to a sales tax on real estate transactions as "unwise, unrealistic and detrimental to every wage-earner in Louisiana."

In a prepared statement, the board warned that such a tax would cause construction to lag, would discourage the establishment of new plants in Louisiana, would discourage investment capital, would result in higher rents and higher costs for new homes.

The board also repeated its earlier statement that it is not opposed to any pay raise for teachers, but is convinced the land of the state must not be further burdened.

FOR FRESHMAN COEDS

NLSC Scholastic Chapter Approved

Northeast State has been approved for the establishment of a chapter of a national scholastic society for freshman women, Miss Alma Lufcy, counselor to women students, announced Saturday.

The national council of Alpha Lambda Delta took favorable action on application for a chapter here, followed by a vote of collegiate chapters to install one at the college.

Alpha Lambda Delta for freshmen is comparable to Mortar Board for senior women.

Eligibility for membership in the national society requires that a woman student carry 15 semester hours and earn a midpoint highest and second highest possible average during her first semester freshman year.

Twenty freshman women who attained this average petitioned in 1963 for the establishment of an Alpha Lambda Delta chapter at Northeast.

At installation ceremonies, yet unannounced, Dean of Women Helen Gordon of Louisiana State University and former national council member of the national scholastic society, will be in charge. The current vice president of the organization is Dr. Sarah L. Healy, dean of women at the University of Alabama.

Purpose of the society is to promote intelligent living, a high standard of learning and encouragement of superior scholastic attainment among freshman women in institutions of higher learning.

Students will be active only during their sophomore year. Later they will be considered collegiate alumnae. Charter members will be selected from freshman, sophomore, junior and senior classes.

Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, has a chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta.

Monthly Visit Of SBA Agent To Monroe Set

E. J. Molony, branch manager of the Small Business Administration Office in New Orleans, announced that a representative will be in Monroe on Wednesday, November 18, in Room 304, U.S. Post Office and Federal Court Building from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. to confer with anyone interested in the services of this government agency.

"This is a continuance of the policy of the Small Business Administration to make its services more convenient to the small businessmen and the banks in the Monroe area," Molony said.

Molony also said, "it would be helpful if inquirers would bring with them at the time of the interview a recent balance sheet and profit and loss statements for the past three years.

It is planned that a representative of SBA will visit Monroe monthly," Molony said.

MAY VISIT U.N.

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI)— President Ahmed Ben Bella may attend the next session of the U.N. General Assembly and could possibly use the occasion to meet President Johnson, informed sources here said Saturday.

THE PLANE DISCOVERED IN ARCTIC ICE HAS BEEN REMOVED PIECE BY PIECE TO AN ASSEMBLY POINT IN THE STATES.
IT DEFINITELY IS NOT LITA FLITE'S 1937 LEEDHOCK ELECTRA, BUT A DISGUISED EUROPEAN MACHINE KNOWN AS THE GOTHA-GO 146.
FURTHERMORE, WHAT APPEARS TO BE MOUNTINGS FOR A WORLD WAR TWO CANNON OCCUPY THE CO-PILOT'S SPACE.
THAT WOULD MEAN THIS PLANE WAS ARMED?
EXACTLY!
AND SINCE THE PLANE DID NOT BELONG TO LITA FLITE, WHOM DID IT BELONG TO?
THIS IS A FANTASTIC TWIST. ORDERS MUST GO THROUGH FOR AN IMMEDIATE IDENTIFICATION OF THAT BODY IN THE ICE CAKE.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

My nephew was married recently and my sister suggested we dye the rice. . . .

The effect was glamorous!

We put one half cup of cold water in a small bowl and added some food coloring (making a fairly strong solution), then added a cup or more of ordinary white rice and stirred until it was colored.

We drained the rice immediately and spread it out on a newspaper covered with paper toweling. (This served as a blotter.)

The rice soon dries. Be sure it's dry before you gather it up.

We made blue, green, pink, and yellow, then mixed in some plain white rice. The result was fantastic and a surprise to everyone at the wedding. Some of these rice grains hit on the bride's veil and hair, and they looked like tiny jewels!

I could not begin to tell you about all the comments made about this rice, and presume even the janitor must have enjoyed cleaning the church steps, since the rice was in full color . . .

Aunty

This reader enclosed samples. I want you all to know they're absolutely beautiful. And after testing her samples we found out that it was not pre-cooked rice. It is old-fashioned uncooked rice. And, thank you, Aunty, for passing along this hint. It's a cutie-pie.

Just like you . . . I imagine.

DEAR HELOISE:

I have triplets. I had such a hard time teaching them to drink from a cup (it always spilled) that one day it dawned on me to wash their baby-food jars, fill them, screw the top back on, use a beer-can opener to punch a small hole in the top of the jar lid near the edge, and let the kids drink away all by themselves.

The little jars are just the correct size for baby's tiny hands, as they are already used to their bottle. The children certainly learned to drink in a hurry and it's only a "skip" to a regular glass after this.

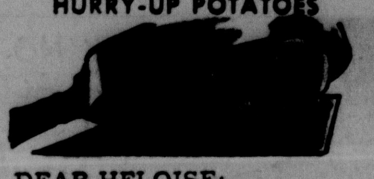
HURRY-UP POTATOES



DEAR HELOISE:

To hurry baked potatoes, I place them on the rack in my oven and put an iron utensil over them. This cuts the baking time almost in half!

Mrs. D. H. M.

True! Even an old iron skillet is wonderful!

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When transplanting plants to larger pots, cut a piece of sponge about one inch thick to fit the bottom of the new pot.

The sponge not only keeps the dirt from sifting through the hole, but also holds the moisture.

Mrs. Harold J. Buckley

DEAR HELOISE:

How many times do you have an errand to do that involves carrying items from the house, such as a magazine or packages, and wonder just where to put the articles until you are on your way?

I take a discarded wire bicycle basket (a small box would work, too), and attach it to the wall near the back door. All the items I wish to take with me are put in this handy box or receptacle.

One can't possibly pass by the box without seeing what's in it!

Eileen Mercer

DEAR HELOISE:

I accidentally discovered something I think you might appreciate.

You know the static electric shock you get when scooting in and out of a car? Well, just spray some silicon spray on the plastic seat covers, metal horn ring and door handles. No more static electricity!

Artie Humphrey

* * *

I can't guarantee this. But other readers say the same thing! Why? Anybody explain it? Write to Heloise c/o this paper. We would love to hear from you.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

So many women go on for years fumbling in their spice cabinets trying to find the spice they need . . . when all they have to do is put the spices in alphabetical order!

Saves so much time and is also easier on the nerves.

This works with flavorings, too.

Pat McClenahan

PEANUT TOUCH-UP

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you ever try peanut butter on a little cloth to polish and touch up mahogany furniture scratches? This is a good substitute for pecan nuts.

Ada Dade

* * *

Never heard of it till today. And, do you know, this also works on maple? I'm surprised.

DEAR HELOISE:

When baking pies for church suppers, I completely cover a paper plate with aluminum foil, set it in my glass pie plate, and then bake as usual.

When the pie cools, I remove it in the foil-covered plate and take it to the supper or bake sale.

This way, I don't have to worry about losing my glass pie plate or having it accidentally broken. It looks nice, too.

Renee

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a wonderful way to hasten the drying of lingerie:

Tie one end of a large, plastic dry-cleaner bag and pull the open end over lingerie and hanger.

Slip your hair-dryer hose in the open end of the plastic bag and press the bag around the hose nozzle.

Use florists' wire or pipe cleaners to hold the bag securely around the hose, turn on the dryer, and your lingerie will be dry in a jiffy.

Be sure to leave a small hole in the top of the bag, or tie it loosely, so excess air can escape.
